House Slashes 'Bedrock' Budget By $94,000,000

$150,000,000 Ship Contracts Disallowed; $40,000,000 for TVA Has Narrow Escape

An economy-bent House yesterday sustained its Appropriations Committee in all slashes in the $1,100,187,000 independent offices bill, then swung a final ax at $150,000,000 in Maritime Commission contract authorizations.

The onslaught trimmed $94,517,206 from the President's "bedrock" budget, just $25,040 deeper than the committee recommended.

The $150,000,000 contract power slash did not affect the total of the bill, as the eliminated item merely authorized the Maritime Commission to commit the amount prior to appropriations.

But Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, who killed the provision on a point of order, called it "an ultimate saving." He served notice he would move similarly to strike out contracting authority in all other bills.

TVA Sum Escapes

Narrowly escaping the economy hatchet was $40,000,000 included in the budget for the Tennessee Valley Authority. An anti-TVA coalition aimed blow after blow at the agency, including one amendment that would have completely blocked 1941 operating funds. But all were turned back by close votes after Speaker Bankhead and Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, took the floor to oppose them.

Lost as the House approved all committee cuts was a budgeted $4,970,000 designed to start work on six Federal building projects in the District that ultimately would have cost $28,820,000.

Passed and sent to the Senate, the bill brought total House below-budget savings in the first two appropriations bills to nearly $102,000,000 and staved off by that amount the budget's close approach to the $45,000,000,000 legal debt limit.

But farm, reclamation and rivers and harbors interests were organizing with Congressional backing capable of wiping out this economy and more.

Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, who for two years successfully led the fight for $225,000,000 in unbudgeted parity payments, announced he would move to appropriate the same sum at this session unless farm prices rise to three-fourths of parity. Up to the present only wheat has risen to that level.

Personnel Council Cut

Russell, who is chairman of the Senate Agriculture Appropriations subcommittee, said he was sympathetic with economy aims and ready to make up for the farm outlay either by new taxes or by substituting contract authorizations for some appropriations.

The only actual cut below House Appropriations Committee recommendations in the independent offices bill passed yesterday by the House was the $25,040 for the Council of Personnel Administration, eliminated Wednesday on a point of order. Previously the committee had similarly stricken appropriations for two other agencies under the White House, the National Resources Planning Board and the Office of Government Reports.

Bearing the brunt of the economy attack was the Maritime Commission's ten-year-construction program. The President had included $200,000,000 in the budget for the commission, and the committee cut this to $125,000,000. It compensated for the cut by increasing contract authorizations by $150,000,000.

Elimination of the new contract power yesterday, on Taber's point of order, still left the commission with a total contract authorization up to and including the 1940 act of $445,000,000.

"Let them ask for appropriations,

New Bill Cuts Naval Program $453,000,000

Vinson Measure Slashes 6-Year Building Plans to 3 Years

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

In a surprise move to forestall Senate opposition to the 25 per cent naval expansion program, Chairman Vinson, of the House Naval Affairs Committee, yesterday presented a new measure cutting the warship increase virtually in half.

His move, slashing $453,000,000 from the cost of the program, caught naval officials off guard but won quick support from both supporters and opponents of the Navy increase. It would not curtail the volume of ship-building but would shorten the six-year program to a three-year plan.

Chairman Walsh, of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, whose objection to a long range program while the 1938 program is still incomplete largely forced the reduction, withheld any definite commitment on the new bill, but indicated it might be acceptable.

"There is no fundamental difference between the Senate and House committees," he said. "Whatever difference there has been, has been on procedure. We will give most sympathetic and friendly consideration to the new bill."

Would Eliminate Destroyers

Vinson's new bill would eliminate destroyers from the plan and curtail cruiser and submarine expansion. It would authorize 218,000 additional tons of combatant ships as against 400,000 of the original bill.

In reducing the total estimated cost for combatant ships from $1,090,000,000 to $547,000,000 no change was made in the provision for 2,395 additional airplanes, 36 blimps and 31 auxiliary ships. The

Zero Forecast As Cold Kills Capital Man

Dip to 10 Predicted For Early Morning; Body Found Frozen Beside Embers

The great white cold which stalked across the Eastern United States yesterday left one dead of exposure here as Washingtonians huddled close to fires in expectation of the first zero weather since 1936.

Snowdust glistened off and on as pale sunlight forced its way through leaden skies, spotting streets and roads in nearby Maryland and Virginia with a treacherous film of ice.

A fine dry snow started falling in Washington at 10 p. m. and by midnight was blowing over the streets. Belated motorists hurried homeward to avoid the necessity of putting on chains beside curbstones.

More snow was forecast for today while the mercury, which struggled from 18 degrees at midnight Wednesday to 26 degrees shortly before 4 p. m. yesterday, was expected to fall to the 10-degree mark this morning and then nosedive before nightfall to zero or below.

Elmer D. Martin, 36, 1221 Morse street northeast, was found dead early yesterday beside the ashes of a campfire on a vacant lot at Twenty-eighth and M streets northeast. At Casualty Hospital it was said he apparently died of exposure.

Clothes Catch Fire

Henry Ashton, colored, 18, of 1522 C street southeast, employed by an oil company, was burned about the legs when he built a fire near Great Falls, Va., after making a delivery. He told Emergency Hospital authorities his clothing caught from the blaze he built to get warm.

Private relief agencies reported through Community Chest headquarters they were swamped by appeals from families seeking food, shelter and fuel.

Icebreakers Busy

Barely recovered from its second general snowfall of the month, Maryland faced the prospect of more snow and cold which might choke Chesapeake Bay with ice.

Icebreakers worked yesterday in the bay and trucks and snowplows were busy in western Maryland, where from 6 to 10 inches of snow fell Wednesday, the Associated Press reported.

Fine Suspended; He Wasn't Invited In Patrol Wagon

If Patrick Foley takes a tip from Police Judge Walter J. Casey, his next ride in a police partol will be "by invitation only."

About 40, Foley escaped penalty yesterday when he was arraigned before Casey with two companions on drunkeness charges. He explained that he had not been arrested until he climbed into the wagon, unasked, to converse with one of his friends.

Sergt. Ray Aggleson told the court he noticed a group of stragglers at John Marshall place and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, Tuesday, and when he approached the men scattered. He caught one, the policeman stated, and after depositing him in the wagon went on to catch a second man.

Returning with the second man Aggelson found Foley seated in the patrol talking with the first.

Judge Casey suspended a $10 fine.

Westchester Workers Threaten Strike if Demands Aren't Met

Service and maintenance employes of the Westchester Apartments, 4000 Cathedral avenue northwest, yesterday voted to strike if their demands for pay increases are not met, while employes of the Hamilton Hotel, Fourteenth and K streets northwest, stood firm in their demands at a conference with the management.

James McNamara, spokesman for the Hamilton employes, said the management had agreed to give its answer tomorrow. The employes' demands are for continuation of the present contract in regard to working conditions, and wage increases for some of the lowest-paid workers.

Spokesmen for the Westchester employes said demands are for a monthly pay increase of $5, an eight-hour day, paid vacations and sick leave. They said employes now work about 12 hours a day, many of them receiving no more than $30 a month.

Herbert W. Thornton, manager of the Westchester, which has 563 apartments, said the wage increases demanded are of $5 and $10 a month, that employes now receive one week of paid vacation and are asking for two.

The average work-day is nine hours, he said, while those paid $30 a month are "schoolboy" elevator operators who work five hours a day six days a week.

The employes are represented by the United Building Service Workers Local No. 675, affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations and certified by the National Labor Relations Board after an election in December. It represents 106 workers.

Employes of the Hamilton are joined in three locals affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Borah Fights for Life; In Coma; Crisis Near; Capital Saddened

Roosevelt Expresses Sympathy; Senators Hear Prayer

William Edgar Borah, world-famous United States Senator from Idaho, was believed to be on his death bed last night.

The 74-year-old Republican liberal, dean of the Senate in point of service, was in a deep coma and running a high fever after suffering a cerebral hemorrhage. He was given only an outside chance to live.

Dr. Worth Daniels, Borah's physician, said the crisis still was ahead, perhaps to be reached within 24 hours.

A bulletin issued from the statesman's bedside at 9:30 p. m. reported no change in his critical condition for more than eight hours.

"The Senator has been unconscious nearly all the time since 1 o'clock," said Miss Cora Rubin, his secretary. "The doctor does not expect there will be a change in his condition tonight. But he gives us very little hope."

Not since the life was ebbing away from Woodrow Wilson in those winter days back in 1924 had Washington been so much concerned over a statesman's illness. Many of Borah's colleagues on Capitol Hill walked around with tear-filled eyes after reading the sick-room bulletins. Some of them went off by themselves to murmur a prayer.

President Roosevelt telephoned Mrs. Borah shortly after noon to inquire about her husband and to express his sympathy.

Vice President Garner said:

"He'll be missed as much as any man in the Senate."

The collapse of the picturesque Lion of Idaho was particularly stunning in view of his seeming well-being early in the week. Monday he visited Dr. Daniels for a physical checkup and on returning to his apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue he told Mrs. Borah that

Order Signed For 5-Cent Milk To Relief Rolls

Wallace Also Acts To Stabilize Prices; Farmers Must Approve

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace yesterday signed an order, which, if approved by three-fourths of the dairy farmers, would stabilize producers' prices in the Washington milkshed, probably give families on relief milk at 5 cents a quart, and raise the price of retail cream.

An outgrowth of hearings held on a proposal of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, the proposal must be approved by 75 per cent of the dairy farmers serving Washington to become operative.

If signed by the local distributors, it takes effect as an agreement. Should the handlers refuse to sign, as several are expected to do, the provisions might be given the force of law by an executive order signed by the President.

Distributors Reluctant

The directors of the Maryland-Virginia association will meet today to act on the proposal, while the Agriculture Department will start a poll by mail of producers affected.

Prompt acceptance by a majority of the farmers is expected as the cooperative represents more than 80 per cent of the producers shipping to the National Capital.

Distributors have not had time to examine the revised marketing pact, but they indicated that they

British Bomb Sylt, German Seaplane Base

Naval Guns Heard In Denmark, With 5 Violent Explosions

Copyright by New York Times

Copenhagen (Friday), Jan. 19.—Two British bombing raids on the island of Sylt, German seaplane base, were indicated last night in reports from the Danish coast of South Jutland, near Tonder.

Antiaircraft fire was heard from Hoernum, the German seaplane base on the southern end of Sylt. Later naval guns were heard firing farther south, indicating that the aerial activity may have involved Helgoland in addition to Sylt.

Simultaneously with the antiaircraft fire from Hoernum, ten planes went up north of Sylt, joining five Messerschmidts from the mainland which were bound south.

Skirt Danish Island

At 9 p. m. (3 p. m., Eastern standard time), five planes flying extremely high skirted the Danish island of Roemoe, turning south when over German territory. The motors of other airplanes and machine-gun fire were also heard. When the planes were midway over Sylt in the vicinity of Rantum and Keitum five violent explosions were heard.

At the same time searchlights and antiaircraft guns went into action.

The first raid was believed to have been made about 6 p. m. (noon, E. S. T.) Thursday, when antiaircraft guns were heard firing for

You must not fail!

Down through the years of a brilliant newspaper career those words—flung at me challengingly by my first city editor—have remained stamped indelibly in my mind. Those four ringing words, uttered in the dimming past by a man whose star long since has faded from the journalistic heavens, have served to goad me on to some of my outstanding professional achievements.

You must not fail! I would not fail!

It was with this thought in mind that I swung down the steps from the city room and out into the bright, winter sunlight that bathed the broad expanse of Pennsylvania avenue. Walking briskly in the direction of the Capitol, I went over again and again in my mind the city editor's instructions.

Compromise Sought on Aid to Finns

Administration Bid For Accord Reported; Brown to See Jones, Prepares Concessions

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Administration last night was reported actively seeking a Finnish loan compromise that would give needed aid to the embattled republic without violating neutrality policy.

A series of week-end conferences was scheduled between Federal Loan Administrator Jones and Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, author of a direct $60,000,000 Finnish loan bill.

Brown, who conferred briefly with the President yesterday, predicted "something satisfactory to Congress may yet be worked out."

Prospects Remote

The Michigan Democrat still insisted Finland needs an unrestricted governmental loan, which he denied would conflict with a neutrality statute not yet invoked. But he was ready to make substantial concessions in the interest of swift Finnish relief.

Prospects of any material legislation continued remote, as any bill must run a two-committee gantlet in the Senate, and leaders were noncommittal or cool to both the Brown bill and the President's "reasonable approach" through a non-military Export-Import Bank credit.

Gold Price Attacked

Developments:

Senator Townsend (Republican), of Delaware, charged the Treasury by holding the price of gold "at the artificially high level of $35 an ounce" is overlooking an opportunity to aid Finland. He said Russia vends gold to the Treasury at a 100 per cent profit, and uses this to buy United States copper and other materials to wage war against the Finns.

Representative Celler (Democrat), of New York, introduced a House bill to provide a $50,000,000 loan for Finland and another to authorize the Treasury to advance to the Finns the $234,000 payment last made on their debt to the United States. Celler asked that this money be made available to Finland to purchase necessary war materials in the United States.

50 Are Reported Dead in Newest Turkish Quakes

By the Associated Press

Ankara, Turkey, Jan. 18.—Earthquakes of decreasing intensity continued tonight to shake the Nigde district, where 50 persons were reported killed and 160 injured by a series of heavy shocks last night. The district is 200 miles southeast of here.

As the government rushed aid to the area, panic-stricken survivors camped in snow and bitter cold near the ruins of their homes.

The affected area escaped the earthquake which last December 28 killed at least 30,000 persons in Anatolia, several hundred miles to the northeast. Nigde is capital of a vilayet, or province, of the same name, which has a population of 247,000.

In the Anatolia quake region relief workers continued to help the inhabitants in their battle against cold, disease and hunger. Slight quakes were felt there last night.

Repulsed 23 Miles In Arctic, Invaders Battle at 50 Below; 11 Planes Downed

By Wade Werner,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Helsinki, Jan. 18.—Russian forces, routed within striking distance of success in an attempt to cut Finland in two with a highway and rail drive, tonight were reported fighting a bitter rear-guard battle in a desperate attempt to escape to their frontier.

Advices from the Lapland front, just above the Arctic Circle, said that the Soviet troops, after hammering vainly at Finnish defenses for six weeks, suddenly retreated toward their own border near Salla and were fighting desperately tonight to get safely away.

Two other Soviet divisions were likewise reported in difficulties some distance north and east of this activity.

Made Greatest Advance

The retreating Red troops had penetrated farther into Finland than any other of the invading armies, having reached Joutsijarvi, 65 miles from the Russian border on a direct line and much farther than that along the southwestward route which they followed. They were only 18 miles east of Kemijarvi, strategic rail head which was their immediate goal.

Kemijarvi, the northernmost railroad terminal in Finland, is the eastern end of a main line running southwestward to Kemi, Finnish port at the head of the Gulf of Bothnia on Finland's west coast.

The Russians hoped that by driving over the Salla highway and this railroad to Kemi they could cut off southern Finland from the north and block the overland route by which Finland receives important supplies from Sweden.

The Finns, after routing the Russians at Joutsijarvi, were reported in today's army communique to have driven the enemy back 28 miles to Markajarvi, to the northeast.

At Markajarvi, where the road south to Kuusamo branches off from the Salla road, bitter fighting was reported tonight in severe cold.

Temperatures of more than 50 degrees below zero were reported from several points. At Nickby, northeast of Helsinki, a temperature of 58 below was recorded—the coldest since 1878. It was 11 below zero in Helsinki.

This extraordinary weather and the difference in Finnish and Russian equipment was regarded as a major factor in reported Finnish successes. The Russians, hungry and frost bitten, were said by the Finns to be poorly equipped, whereas the defenders were clad in heavy boots, many pairs of woolen socks, heavy uniforms and sheepskin coats.

Several Patrols Wiped Out

The Finnish army communique today also reported gains on the lower eastern frontier, where Finnish patrols "wiped out several enemy patrols" in the Aittojoki and Kuhmo sectors.

In the air, the communique said, 11 Russian bombing planes were shot down yesterday in a raid which killed two civilians. Unofficial reports said 188 planes took part in raids on several small towns, with the Soviet craft falling before the fire of Finnish pursuit planes.

The communique was laconic about events in Lapland, saying simply:

"In Lapland our troops have advanced 45 kilometers (about 28 miles) in the Salla sector during the past few days. The enemy has been pushed back from Joutsijarvi to Markajarvi, for possession of which fighting is proceeding."

Foreign military observers see in this matter of fact statement a

Russia Sends Apologies for Swedish Raid

Planes Flew Over Island by Mistake, Moscow Explains

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, Jan. 18.—Russia today apologized to Sweden for a violation of her territory by Soviet warplanes amidst mounting Swedish agitation for more active aid to Finland and for the formation of a Scandinavian "defense league."

The Soviet note, which followed explosive parliamentary debate over Sweden's neutrality policy and a Socialist proposal for a northern military front, was in reply to a Swedish protest against the bombing of Kallaks Island on the Bothnian Gulf last Sunday.

Sweden charged nine planes participated in the bombing but Moscow acknowledged only that two Soviet craft, lost in a snowstorm, flew over the island. The Soviet note made no mention of any bombs being dropped.

Norway Also Protests

The Russian note, handed to the Swedish charge d'affaires in Moscow, expressed regret over the incident.

Sweden's protest was similar to one presented simultaneously by Norway last Monday, which charged Red armp planes flew over her territory near the Swedish-Norwegian frontier.

Outspoken criticism of Sweden's neutral stand by former Foreign Minister Richard Sandler and a Socialist-sponsored suggestion for a northern "defense league" have fallen upon receptive ears among the Swedish public.

With Russia's invading army in Finland, the opinion is growing in Scandinavia that a Finnish defeat would mean a further Soviet incursion into the northern countries.

Sabotage Suspected in British Munitions Blasts Fatal to Five

By Edwin Stout
Associated Press Staff Writer

London (Friday), Jan. 19.—Scotland Yard's famed sabotage squad swarmed into the Royal Gunpowder Factory at Waltham Abbey, 12 miles north of London, early today after an authoritative source said sabotage was suspected in yesterday's series of explosions which killed five men.

Police previously attributed the blasts to an accident.

The authoritative British Press Association asserted:

"It is understood the authorities had received anonymous information that 'accidents might happen' in the Waltham Abbey factory as well as at others in different parts of England."

An undisclosed number of workers in the plant suffered injuries and there were minor casualties from broken glass and other debris.

Three soldiers were killed and a number injured by two accidents in other parts of England.

One, in Dorsetshire, of an undisclosed nature, caused the death of three members of the Queen's Royal Regiment and serious injury of a fourth; in the other, in a garrison in southeast England, several soldiers were injured by a boiler explosion.

The Waltham Abbey explosions, said to have been confined to a single shed, hurled steel girders 500 yards, broke window panes 6 miles away and were heard over radius of 20 miles.

Censors at first forbade publication of the site of the explosions but early in the evening altered their stand and permitted it to be named.

Queer, indeed, are the paradoxical pair of reasons why they are willing to run this risk: (1) Lack of a Democratic candidate both fully satisfactory to FDR and likely to be elected, and (2) failure of any Republican to emerge as the inevitable, sureshot candidate. Kelly Pledges His Delegates To Roosevelt

Garner's Supporters Consider Entering Him in Ohio Primary

In the face of Ohio's third-term boom for President Roosevelt, managers of the campaign of Vice President Garner last night were reported considering entering the 71-year-old Texan's name in the Buckeye State primaries.

The draft-Roosevelt movement meanwhile gathered impetus from Illinois. Mayor Edward J. Kelly, of Chicago, left the White House to declare that all Illinois delegates to the Democratic national convention will "be for Roosevelt whether he wants it or not."

Ohio's Democratic State Chairman Arthur L. Limbach, previously had declared his State's 52 delegates, though nominally pledged to Senator Donahey as a "favorite son," would cast their votes after early ballots for Roosevelt or a man of his choice.

Donahey Undecided

This drew from Senator Donahey yesterday a statement that he had not decided to file in the Ohio primaries, and set Garner campaign managers talking about sending the Vice President into the Ohio race if Donahey fails to file.

Garner backers in New York reiterated their declaration that the Texan's campaign was based on an assumption that the President isn't running, but Garner would be placed in convention nomination "regardless of who runs."

Garner and Donahey are reported close friends, and the Vice President's supporters argued that Garner would not enter Ohio if Donahey seeks its "favorite-son" designation. But if Donahey withdraws, Ohio primaries on the second Tuesday in May may see Garner testing the strength of Limbach's third-term commitment.

Ohio Senator Ill

Ill at his home here, Donahey said yesterday he had reached no decision.

"I have not filed in the primary, and I do not know whether I will file or not," he said. "I am not a candidate for President or Vice President, but when the right time comes I will make up my mind whether there is any necessity for a 'favorite son' candidate."

Under Ohio State law, convention delegate candidates must obtain written consent of the man they will support for the Presidential nomination. Donahey and Garner must decide by March 15.

On Capitol Hill

Legislation that would establish a Federal safety inspection of coal mines was passed by the Senate yesterday without a record vote after Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, had protested that John L. Lewis, C. I. O. leader, had "promised" to have the bill enacted.

HARRISON

"I do not like to pass legislation under whip and spur," Harrison said. "I'm not built that way."

Senator Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, author and floor leader for the bill which now goes to the House, was supported by Senator Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, majority leader; Senator Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, and Senator Reed (Republican), of Kansas.

The measure was said to have provided one of the issues over which Secretary of Interior Ickes, backing the bill, recently forced the resignation of John W. Finch as director of the Bureau of Mines.

President Roosevelt vetoed his first bill of the session.

The measure would have reimbursed the Gdynia-American Line $2,520 it spent to duplicate revenue stamps affixed to the motorship Batory's manifests. The original stamps were "lost or destroyed in some unknown manner." The President said the law states no allowance can be made unless such stamps are returned to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. H said there was not satisfactory evidence the stamps were destroyed.

Two bills increasing Government benefits for World War veterans were passed by the Senate.

Senator Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, won approval of one providing bonus payments for more than 2,000 Army, Navy and Marine "provisional officers" who have been excluded. The Veterans Administration estimated additional costs at $4,126,237.

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, obtained approval of a bill extending retirement and disability pay to World War officers, more than 30 per cent permanently disabled, who lost these payments under the 1933 "economy act."

The Senate approved unanimously yesterday a four-year extension of the Federal farm moratorium act, scheduled to expire next March.

Senator Frazier (Republican), North Dakota, author of the measure, which now goes to the House, said extension would enable thousands of farmers to avail themselves of Federal bankruptcy in an effort to scale down and readjust their debts.

President Jovial as Appointees Take Office

Harris & Ewing

President Roosevelt appeared in rare humor yesterday and joked with his latest appointees as they took oath of office in the White House. With the President are (left to right) Frank Murphy, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court; Robert H. Jackson, who succeeded Murphy as Attorney General, and Francis Biddle, who became Solicitor General, the post vacated by Jackson

Murphy And Jackson Take Oaths

New Justice, Attorney General Sworn In At White House

With President Roosevelt and intimate friends looking on, Frank Murphy, new associate justice of the Supreme Court, and Robert H Jackson, his successor as Attorney General, took the oath of office yesterday.

The ceremony took place in the President's study on the second floor of the White House. Associate Justice Stanley Reed administered the oaths. Once again Murphy placed his hand on the Bible his mother gave him when he was graduated from high school.

Judge Francis Biddle, who has been named to succeed Jackson as Solicitor General, was invited to be sworn in at the same ceremony. However, he decided to wait until next week because his family could not attend. He will be sworn in Monday at 1 p. m. at the Department of Justice Building.

Murphy will not be a full-fledged member of the Supreme Court until he takes the formal judicial oath, probably January 29, after a fortnight's recess. Yesterday he took his constitutional oath of office.

Attorney General Jackson, in a press conference yesterday afternoon, announced that he planned no changes in policy and no "substantial shake-up" in personnel. He said he thought the Department of Justice had a splendid organization.

However, Attorney General Jackson did announce one important change: He told reporters that Gordon Dean henceforth would be in charge of press relations, succeeding Joseph A. Mulcahy.

Dean held the press relations post in the Cummings regime, but was transferred to a legal post with the anti-trust division after Murphy became Attorney General.

Attorney General Jackson said that he was making the change, not for any personal reason, but for the reason that he had always thought that the press relations of the Department of Justice could be more correctly handled by an attorney.

Grand Jury Hears Former Official Of New Masses

George Willner, Los Angeles, former executive of New Masses, was questioned all day yesterday before the special grand jury investigating activities of foreign agents in Washington.

What Willner told the investigators was not disclosed. Willner was described as a former business manager, president and treasurer of the Weekly Masses Co., which issues the Communist paper.

Henry G. O'Donnell and Floyd M. Rett, special assistants to the Attorney General who are directing the investigation, had expected to examine at least four witnesses yesterday. The three who were not reached will be heard today, after Willner finishes his testimony.

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 18.—One of the haunting questions in the minds of political leaders on both sides of the major-party fence today is the question: Has the conservative swing which was evidenced in the Republican Party's midterm Congressional gains last year been continuing through recent months?

DR. GALLUP

Many political writers are assuming that it has continued—that the G. O. P.'s chances of electing a President next November are even better today than they were a year ago.

However, the American Institute of Public Opinion's indices of political party support, which proved an accurate forecast of the Republican resurgence in the fall elections of 1938, show that while the Republican Party has substantially more voting support than it had in 1936, there has been no continuous "conservative swing" following the G. O. P. comeback of 1938.

In its latest survey of party support, just completed, the Institute asked a cross-section of more than 9,000 voters throughout the United States:

"Which party would you like to see win the Presidential election in 1940?"

Similar questions have been put to the voters in three previous tests.

As Congress begins its sessions in Washington the national vote is:

Favor Democratic victory	54%
Favor Republican victory	46%

About one voter in seven (15%) said that he was undecided about his party choice at this time, many of them being persons who classify themselves as political "independents."

The Institute was the first to note the beginnings of the "conservative swing" early in 1937, when its Nation-wide surveys reflected dissatisfaction with the Supreme Court reorganization plan, with the sit-down strikes and other parts of the New Deal program. Tests even late in November, 1936, showed that a great number of voters (50%) hoped the new Roosevelt Administration would be more conservative, while only 15 per cent wanted it "more liberal," and the remaining 35 per cent were satisfied with its current course.

New signs of conservative sentiment were apparent fully a year before the 1938 Congressional elections. The Institute estimated in March, 1938, that the Republicans would gain about 85 additional seats in the House of Representatives if the election had been held at that time.

Eight months later the conservative tide was apparent to every political observer when the Republicans actually did pick up 81 additional seats in the House. By April, 1939, the Institute found that a majority of voters—52 per cent—wanted to see a Republican victory in 1940.

War in Europe in the early fall brought a new twist to the political picture, however. President Roosevelt's personal popularity shot upwards. The number of voters favoring a third term increased, and by October the Institute found 57 per cent now favoring a Democratic victory in 1940.

One ray of consolation for John D. M. Hamilton and other Republican Party strategists, however, is the fact that Democratic Party support has not remained at the peak it reached in October. The trend of sentiment on the Institute question has been as follows:

	Favoring Republican	Favoring Democrat	Points of Change for Reps.
April, 1939...	52%	48%
October (following war)	43	57	—9
November ...	46	54	+3
TODAY	46	54	0

An important part of the picture, of course, is the way various sections of the country feel about next November's election. Next fall's greatest battleground will probably be a band of 18 Northern States, stretching from the Hudson River to the Rockies, which account for more than half the Nation's electoral votes. This area was found very much on the political borderline in November. Sectional tabulations in the present study, which will be reported in The Post on Sunday, are now being completed.

British Censor American Mail Aboard Clipper

U. S. Protest Against Seizure of Pouches On Boats Rejected

By William V. Nessly

Great Britain not only has disappointed American Government officials by rejecting this country's protest against British interference with American mails aboard ships, but has extended its "censorship" to Clipper-borne air mail.

While State Department officials last night were pondering possible next steps in the controversy, word came from Hamilton, Bermuda, that examination of mail aboard the American Clipper en route to the Azores and Europe was under way on orders from London. Air mail for Europe will be examined for possible contraband or military information "from now on," it was announced.

While contents of the British reply to this country's December 27 note of protest were not made public, it was learned that they continued to advance Britain's claims to rights which the United States insists is denied her by international law. The London note was received late Wednesday.

Meanwhile, there were these other war-bred developments in British-American relations:

It was announced that further American cotton deliveries under the cotton-rubber exchange agreement arranged last summer by the two governments had been postponed for a three-month period.

London orders for discontinuance of purchases of American tobacco brought strong protest from Capitol Hill representatives of tobacco States. However, there was a tendency to scoff at reports that American tobacco would be replaced in Britain with the Turkish product.

In its mail seizure protest, the United States took the position it could not admit the right of British authorities to interfere with American mails on American or other neutral ships or to censor mail on neutral ships taken involuntarily into British ports.

The American Government based its stand on the Eleventh Hague Convention of 1907, relating to the exercise of the right of capture in naval warfare. The convention, to which all of the present belligerents are parties, provides in Article I that "the postal correspondence of neutrals or belligerents, whatever its official or private character, which may be found on the high seas aboard neutral or enemy ships is inviolable. If the ship is detained, the correspondence is forwarded by the captor with the least possible delay."

Britain, in reply, takes the position that such immunity applies only to "genuine postal correspondence" and that a belligerent is at liberty to examine mail bags and open sealed letter mail in order to assure itself that military information or articles of contraband intended for the enemy is not present.

Officials here gave immediate assurance that the postponement of American cotton deliveries under the exchange agreement did not mean any lessening of British purchases here. It was said that ships which have been used in transporting exchange cotton are badly needed to transport American cotton commercially, and other supplies here awaiting shipment.

Suspension of British purchases of American tobacco was attributed here largely to the need for conserving foreign exchange.

Inquiry Aide Has Hopes for Labor Board

Agency Can Better Self If Not 'Hampered,' Says Rep. Murdock

A New Deal member of the House committee investigating the NLRB yesterday predicted that the board, "if not hampered too much, can soon work out a procedure to compare favorably with that of other Government agencies."

Representative Murdock (Democrat), of Utah, after five hours' cross-examination of Chief Trial Examiner George O. Pratt, came to the board's defense with the question, "Do you know of any Federal agency where there are no complaints about procedure?"

"No, sir," said Pratt.

Explains "Two Strikes" Claim

The 37-year-old witness admitted earlier yesterday that he had once said companies he accused of violating the Wagner act had "two strikes on them" before hearings began.

"To be very frank about it," Pratt explained, "I didn't ever request the board to issue complaints unless I sincerely thought that the respondent had committed a violation of the law."

He also acknowledged that in 1936, while serving as regional director in the board's Kansas City office, he had described himself as "judge, juror and prosecutor."

Was Only Official

Pratt pointed out, however, that at the time he made the statement he and a stenographer were the only NLRB employes in Kansas City. He said he "definitely" did not consider his present position of chief examiner as embracing the functions of judge, juror and prosecutor.

Charles Hope, attorney in the board's Seattle office, had written suggesting that Pratt must get "quite a kick" out of his role in Kansas City.

Pratt replied that "being judge, jury and prosecutor in this region, as you say, does make for the efficient dispatch of business, but it has its drawbacks to a certain extent in that there are times when some of the parties feel that their cases are pre-judged."

Overlapping Duties Cited

Edmund Toland, committee counsel, presented evidence designed to show that Pratt had investigated union complaints against the Eagle Picher Mining and Smelting Co., of Joplin, Mo., before formal charges had been filed with the board.

"Later he was trial examiner in the case he investigated," Toland continued. "He was enjoined as a trial examiner, then he designated another trial examiner. Then, later, a report from this trial examiner came before him as chief trial examiner."

"Then he was on the prosecuting side first and on the judicial side later?" Chairman Howard W. Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, inquired.

"Yes," said Toland.

LaGuardia Calls Conference to End Coal Truck Strike

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—New Yorkers hoped for an end tomorrow of a city-wide coal delivery stoppage as Mayor LaGuardia today summoned leaders of both sides in the dispute to his office to negotiate a settlement.

Mounting complaints of fuel shortages led to the summons, LaGuardia said.

"The city cannot shiver while you quibble," he declared in messages to both union and employer leaders."

A joint labor committee of coal dealers and Local 553 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and Chauffeurs (A. F. L.), immediately accepted the invitation to the conference at 10:30 a. m. (E. S. T.) tomorrow.

Plane Exhibit Here Today

Cabinet officials, members of Congress and Government executives will be shown the Army's newest and fastest warplanes at a special aerial exhibit at Bolling Field this afternoon.

Bombers and pursuit ships which have flown 400 miles an hour or better in tests and guarded heretofore from all but Army eyes will be on view. Two hangars, in addition, have been filled with the latest aeronautical instruments, bombs, machine guns, engines and cross-sections of planes.

Tomorrow, the exhibit will be opened to the public. After another showing for Army and Navy officers, aircraft manufacturers and the press in the morning, the field will be opened to all from 2 to 8 p. m.

Planes, including the 30-ton B-15 bomber, will be camouflaged to make them barely visible at considerable heights. There will be no flying, however.

Boy Minstrel's Hike to Land Of Fried Chicken Halted Here

Eddie Ford, 12, Packs His Guitar And Sets Out From Chase, Md., With Yen To Raise Tobacco, Eat Aunt Ellen's Food

A yen to raise tobacco and eat fried chicken which impelled 12-year-old Eddie Ford to leave his Chase, Md., home and head down South with his guitar on his knee wasn't repudiated as he sat pretty forlornly in the Children's Detention Home here yesterday.

Because he could play "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean," "Old Black Joe," "The Beginner's Waltz," "The Hawaiian Melody" and some scales, everyone thought at first that the runaway boy had Hollywood in his head. But Richmond, Va., was his destination and a tobacco row his aspiration and a mouthful of chicken leg his dream.

Police picked him up as he idled around one of the markets here. At the Detention Home, he didn't have anything to hold back. He had left his home at Chase at 3 p. m. Wednesday, and was in Washington by 7:30 p. m.

"I didn't have to walk 3 feet, Eddie said. "Everybody I stuck my thumb at picked me up." He said he was heading for Richmond—with his guitar in a case as tall as himself—and they "told me they'd carry me as far as they could."

He rattled the 60 marbles in his pockets and started crying. This was because he wanted to keep on going to school—where he doted on geography and history—but couldn't this year because of a ruptured appendix.

The junket, ended here, was to see "my Aunt Ellen, who runs a grocery store and raises tobacco and has fried chicken in Richmond." Her name, he said, was Ellen Adams, but he didn't know what street she lived on. Arrived in Richmond, he simply would ask somebody where Aunt Ellen lived. "Everybody knows Aunt Ellen," he said confidently.

He started to play his guitar and couldn't because the first string was broken.

"Bad," he said meditatively, "because all the pieces I know start right off on the first string."

The authorities said his family soon would come after him. "My father is a locomotive engineer and works at Sparrows Point. His name is Samuel Ford, but most all the guys call him Sam."

Wallace Favors 5c. Milk on Relief

would be reluctant to sign it as most of the amendments asked by their special counsel, J. Edward Burroughs, jr., were rejected.

The Agriculture Department cut the special price on relief milk even below that proposed voluntarily by the Maryland-Virginia association. As a result the farmers will get only 5 cents a quart for milk sold exclusively to families on relief. This will be 2½ cents a quart less than they are allowed for all other Class 1 milk.

With a subsidy by the Surplus Commodities Corporation assured, it was predicted that the relief milk may be made available at stores as low as 3 cents a quart.

The SCC, it is understood, would absorb the cost of pasteurizing and handling.

Dairies Get Concession

The marketing order would not alter generally the present price scale on Class 1 milk, but it would raise the return on Class 2 milk, which includes fluid cream, by the addition of premiums. The addition amounts to 25 cents per hundredweight.

Distributors predicted that this increase would necessitate a slight rise in the retail price of cream, which was cut drastically to compete with "bootleg" cream in November, 1938.

The dairies won a small concession with the retention of milk used for chocolate-flavored drinks in the Class 2 scale. The farmers had asked that it be raised to the Class 1 price.

Apparent concessions were made also to the distributors on Class 3 milk, or cream used for manufacturing purposes. The handlers had proposed a formula based on the Philadelphia market. The Agriculture Department adopted a formula based on sweet cream prices "at designated points in nearby markets." The producers had requested a price based on the Chicago butter market.

The order would allow a differential of 46 cents per hundredweight on Class 1 milk sold in suburban Maryland but covered by the provisions and 23 cents differential on Class 2 milk.

The Agriculture Department rejected the proposal of the distributors that a seasonal price system be instituted next May with a cut of 1 cent a quart during the grazing months. It likewise refused to limit the order to the District boundaries, as asked by the distributor.

Instead, the order would embrace Capitol Heights, Bladensburg, Hyattsville, College Park, Takoma Park, Silver Spring, Kensington, Chevy Chase and Bethesda. It would not cover suburban Virginia as that territory is regulated by the Virginia Milk Commission.

The order asks an individual handlers' pool, as sought by the producers, rather than a market-wide pool, as requested by dairies.

If the order becomes operative, a market administrator would be appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture to see that it is enforced.

The order splits the difference between two prices recommended by the farmers and handlers for butterfat differential. The Agriculture Department adopted a price of 5 cents, whereas the producers asked 6 and the distributors 4.

A provision, of little interest to consumers but of vital concern to competing distributors, would allow an 18-cent differential on the price of all milk bought by the Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy at its Frederick, Md., plant.

The distributors, acting in unison, had agreed on a price differential of 25 cents per hundredweight on Class 1 and Class 2 milk only.

Browder Used His Name, Says Dozenberg

Former Soviet Agent Tells of Missing His Naturalization Papers

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Jan. 18.—Nicholas Dozenberg, former secret agent in the Soviet army, testified in United States District Court today that Earl Browder used Dozenberg's name and naturalization papers to secure a fraudulent passport.

The former Russian agent, who for years was the Communist Party's chief propagandist in this country, told the jury trying the Communist leader on a passport fraud indictment that he did not miss his naturalization certificate until 1924, when he said he looked for it and was unable to find it.

He said emphatically that he never applied for the passport which was issued in his name and on his naturalization papers in 1921. Confirming the Government's contention that Browder, general secretary of the Communist Party in this country, used the papers to obtain a fraudulent passport, Dozenberg said that unless the Communist leader "has a twin brother or a double" the picture on the Dozenberg passport application was Browder's.

Defense Counsel Scores

Dozenberg gave a veiled hint that his former wife, Katherine, who died in 1926 while the two were in Tientsin, China, knew something as to how Browder obtained Dozenberg's naturalization certificate. He said he had a conversation with her on the subject when he missed the certificate in 1924. The alertness of George Gordon Battle, chief defense counsel, in objecting to the conversation, prevented Dozenberg from revealing it.

The former Russian agent, who became a Government witness only after he himself had been indicted for a passport fraud, to which he pleaded guilty and on which he is now awaiting sentence, said that he had nothing to do with the application for the Dozenberg passport.

Browder Identified

The last witness of the day was George E. Powers, former executive of the International Workers' order, who declared that on December 17, 1927, he had been the identifying witness who helped one "George Morris" secure a passport—and that "Morris" was Browder.

The Government cannot prosecute Browder for obtaining passports under Dozenberg's name, but the prosecution is trying to show that Browder gave false information in 1934 when he obtained a passport in his own name and denied he ever had held a United States passport prior to that time.

House Cuts Budget By $94,000,000

instead of new contract power," declared Taber. "But they won't do it. They know there are lots of things they can make contracts for that Congress won't appropriate for until after the money is spent."

Representative May (Democrat), of Kentucky, arch foe of the TVA, led the unsuccessful fight on that agency's appropriations. Taber offered an amendment which would stop the TVA rom spending any part of its 1941 appropriation until Congress passed legislation subjecting all TVA expenditures to General Accounting Office scrutiny.

Bankhead Takes Floor

In one of the rare occasions he takes the floor, Speaker Bankhead warned the May amendment would "jeopardize the entire program" and "stop the operations of TVA." Woodrum promised to cooperate enthusistically in any "reasonable" economy move on TVA, but called the amendment a "high-handed, ruthless attempt to annihilate a Government activity." The May amendment was defeated 153 to 132, with Republicans solidly for it.

A motion by Representative Faddis (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, to cut TVA's $40,000,000 in half lost by the closer vote of 104 to 110, while Representative Case (Republican), of South Dakota, failed 127 to 94 to slash TVA appropriations 10 per cent. A move by Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, to eliminate $1,000,000 for initial work on Coulter Shoals Dam failed 109 to 112. Every effort to increase the bill failed.

No Administration lieutenant attempted to restore the riddled Maritime Commission appropriations, but a vigorous restoration drive is expected in the Senate.

Farmhand Admits Killing 3 in New York Family

Sidney, N. Y., Jan. 18 (AP).—A 22-year-old farmhand admitted today he shot and killed three members of a Masonville, N. Y., family and then finished his farm chores because he "didn't want to be cruel to the animals," Police Inspector E. A. Maynard said.

The farmhand, James Fink, was arrested in Reading, Pa.

The bodies of Frank Teed, 68; his wife, Helen, 66, and their daughter, Ruth, 25, were found in their burned farmhouse.

Fannie Hurst Urges 3d Term; Edna Ferber Sees No Fun

FANNIE HURST

EDNA FERBER

Tradition Can Go Hang, Asserts Friend Of Mrs. Roosevelt

Fannie Hurst wants President Roosevelt to serve a third term.

So far as she is concerned "tradition can go and hang."

These and a few other emphatic, pleasantly brittle words were spoken by the author—whose words at one time were among the most expensive in the literary field—as she hurried from a meeting at the Mayflower Hotel to a 5:45 p. m. train yesterday.

Miss Hurst would have said more on the subject if time had permitted. She said what she did as if she felt it enough to embroider. But she was hurrying, and cast the answers to questions over her shoulder.

The next President? "Isn't he in this neighborhood now? Isn't the handwriting clearly on the wall? Tradition? I don't care a hang about tradition!"

"Men and women? Well, at least they're still all right. They're an institution in America that holds up. If I thought they weren't holding up I'd find the equivalent of the Brooklyn Bridge here and jump off."

"And Europe, the world, America . . . Well, the best this country can do in the terrible situation is to look toward its own self-preservation. We should keep it immaculate."

Miss Hurst has been a guest at the White House. She and Mrs. Roosevelt are close friends.

'You Can't Live Like That,' Author of 'So Big' Tells D. C.

Edna Ferber, author of "So Big," "Show Boat" and an autobiography, paid a one-day visit to Washington yesterday and summed up the city in a word.

"Nobody here seems to have any fun," she remarked last night as she waited for an Eastern Airline plane to take her back to New York. "I have been asking people all day long, 'What do you do?' And they say, 'We work all the time.' You can't live like that!

"I really think something ought to be done about it," she went on. Capitals ought to be gay. You always associate the word gay with capitals, don't you?"

On second thought, it is the capitals of Europe that used to be gay, she reflected. So maybe it's all right if Washington isn't gay; the systems works better here.

Miss Ferber came to Washington "to see it at work," she said, and to meet Louis D. Brandeis, former Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. She talked with him for ten minutes, but she wouldn't say what they had talked about.

"I just wanted to hear him talk," she said. "I have been wanting to see him for a long time. It think he is a very great"—she hesitated, searching for the right word—"a very great spirit. I hate to use that word, but I guess I'll have to."

Miss Ferber is writing only short stories, these days, she said. "Novels are awfully difficult to pin down, when everything is changing so much," she explained. "When the world is so fluid it is difficult to sustain anything through the length of a book."

"That may sound silly, but it's true," she said, and disappeared into the plane.

Lucille Meusel, who sang a charming Gilda earlier in the week, confirmed and deepened one's impressions of her artistry last evening, when she appeared as Violetta Valery in Verdi's "La Traviata" with the San Carlo Opera Company in the National Theater. Her principal associates in the excellent performance were Francis Perulli and Ivan Petrov, the same tenor and barytone who were heard with her in "Rigoletto," and the combination was even better in vocal blendings than on Tuesday. The minor roles were taken by Charlotte Bruno, Francesco Circi, Fausti Bozza, Richard Wentworth and Myra Manning in a production highly commendable for its musical integration and smooth stage direction.

Miss Meusel's merits do not end with the possession of a lovely voice, as merits sometimes do when a singer so endowed uses her gift carelessly with the mere pride of display. Both in her singing and her acting she reveals the results of meticulous study of the role she is portraying, and no detail of phrasing and accent has been overlooked. The vocal line, the gesture and the facial expression are linked to the text of the libretto with perfect timing, while the ease of the execution betrays nothing of the preparatory concentration.

It has been long since one has heard those well-worn arias, "Ah, fors' e lui" and "Sempre libera," sung with such subtle variations of emotional color in the voice and such delicate intimations of their verbal meaning. Her reading of "Dite alla giovine" in the second act was a consummate expression of poignant tenderness. Miss Meusel is a singer whose artistry is not superficial but identified with her personality and directed by her intelligence.

Francis Perulli as Alfredo Germont was in fine voice and sang with fervent lyricism. His tonal quality was unforced and agreeably dulcet, and his entire handling of the role showed a restraint that did him credit. Ivan Petrov as the elder Germont also adapted himself to the histrionic key in which the performance was pitched.

Trade Program Faces Trouble In Committee

Disney's Plan to Freeze Taxes Reveals Democratic Rift

By the Associated Press

The first threat of Democratic opposition to the Administration's reciprocal trade agreement program in the House Ways and Means Committee arose yesterday with an assertion by Representative Disney (Democrat), Oklahoma, that he could not support extension of the policy unless an amendment were adopted "freezing" excise taxes.

Previously, members had expressed belief that a pending resolution to extend the trade act for three years would be approved by a strictly partisan vote of 15 to 10. All Republican members are expected to oppose extension of the act in its present form.

Disney, who indicated several other Democratic committee members might go along with him on the amendment, told the committee he wanted to be in a position to defend the Administration's program, but that he couldn't unless "some protection is afforded to oil, coal, copper and lumber."

Disney Grills Grady

The Oklahoman then fired question after question at Henry F. Grady, Assistant Secretary of State, relative to oil imports from Venezuela, which recently concluded a trade agreement under which the United States reduced taxes on limited quantities of oil imports.

It was brought out that this country imported 56,000,000 barrels of oil in 1939, and exported 198,000,000 barrels.

"What do we need with an import of 56,000,000 barrels if we have an exportable 200,000,000 barrels?" Disney asked.

The Assistant Secretary replied that a large part of the imports was used on road work and did not compete with domestic production.

Controlled by Three Firms

Disney remarked that the oil from Venezuela was controlled by three companies—Standard Oil, Gulf and Shell—and concluded that "no benefits flowed to Venezuela" through these oil transactions.

Grady expounded the State Department's policy of keeping trade channels open, contending that it was of no moment "who owns the oil in Venezuela or the sugar in Cuba."

Disney suggested that the three oil companies could fix the domestic price by restricting their imports and could raise the price abroad, but Grady insisted that the world price "is fixed by world demand."

Asks About Changes

Disney also asked whether, in the case of the Venezuela agreement, any change could be made before the expiration date in 1942. Grady said changes could be made, for instance, in the event one party "takes action to defeat the purposes of the agreement," but not by a flat unilateral action, adding that an agreement would be valueless if either party could alter it at will.

Representative Gearhart (Republican), California, raised the question of the effect of currency fluctuations on the agreements, asserting that the State Department could have done something about the depreciation in foreign currencies "if it were not wedded to free trade."

Grady retorted that he had previously read a "long list of items on which the tariff was more than 50 per cent," and that there was "no basis to the inference the department advocated free trade."

Borah in Coma, Crisis Near

he had been given a "clean bill of health."

The next day, as he was finishing a shower, he fell on the bathroom floor. When Mrs. Borah found him he was semiconscious, unable to tell what had happened.

At first it was believed that his condition grew out of the fall, but Mrs. Borah said yesterday that it was quite possible the fall resulted from a stroke.

Once Tuesday, Senator Borah called for "Mary"—Mrs. Borah—and asked for his slippers. Mrs. Borah quieted him and assured him he could get up next day.

Wednesday he sank into a coma from which he roused himself only occasionally. Yesterday morning his condition took such a turn that Dr. Daniels issued a formal bulletin saying he was in a grave conditiin.

Mrs. Borah—known affectionately in Washington as "Little Borah"—told reporters:

"The physician holds no hope for his recovery."

However, Mrs. Borah continued to hope for a "miracle," and she recalled her own recovery from parrot fever a few years ago after physicians had despaired of her life.

Senate Hears Prayer

News of Borah's illness spread like a prairie fire, and cast a pall over Capitol Hill. When the Senate convened, its chaplain, the Rev. Dr. Ze Barney Phillips, said this special prayer:

"O Father of Life and Love into Thy holy keeping we commend the soul of our beloved brother, who at this moment lies at the very brink of life eternal. May he know by Thine own in-dwelling that, though he pass through the waters, Thou wilt be with him; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow him; though he walk through the fire he shall not be burned, neither shall the flame kindle upon him, for Thou are the Lord his God, the Holy One of Israel, his saviour.

"Forgive whatever may be amiss in his life so devoted to the welfare of the Nation, and may the soothing, tender, loving care of our Father be his portion, so that he may wake in Thy likeness and when he beholdeth it he shall be satisfied and hear Thy words of ommendation 'well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord.'

"We ask it in the name and for the sake of Him who has ever been our access to the Father, Jesus Christ, Thy son, our Lord. Amen."

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, went to the Borah apartment. He had nothing but melancholy news when he returned to the Capitol.

"His death would sweep one of the foundation stones out from under our country," the Michigan member said.

Leaders Shocked

Other comment:

Senator White (Republican), of Maine—"Borah's has been the greatest voice demanding the salvage of the American constitutional system."

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas—"He is a grand man. He has ability, integrity, courage. What else is there?"

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia—"I am shocked and intensely grieved."

Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada—"Borah is one of the Senate's truly great members."

Gov. C. A. Bottolfsen, of Idaho, sent a message to Borah's office, which said.

"The entire State of Idaho joins me in praying for your speedy recovery."

Secretary Weeps

Next to Mrs. Borah, nobody in Washington was so grieved over the Idahoan's collapse as Miss Cora Rubin. She has been his secretary for 30 years. She was the only person aside from Mrs. Borah, Dr. Daniels and the nurses to be allowed at the Senator's bedside.

When she was telling reporters about Borah's condition later, she burst into tears.

Senator Borah has one sister, Mrs. Mattie Rinard, of Fairfield, Ill., near where he was born, and a nephew, Wayne G. Borah, a Federal judge in New Orleans.

Congress to Get Reorganization Plan 3 Soon

Provision Made To Transfer Forest Service to Interior

President Roosevelt is expected to send to Congress soon his Reorganization Plan No. III, with an outstanding provision calling for transfer of the United States Forest Service from the Department of Agriculture to the Interior Department, it was learned yesterday.

Unless countermanded by joint resolution of both Houses within 60 days of its transmission by the President, such a reorganization plan would transfer 161 national forests containing 175,000,000 acres from the Department of Agriculture to Interior.

A large part of the 5,000 field and Washington personnel also would be shifted.

Congressional and conservation leaders who have had advance word of the transfer have warned the President that, if persisted in, it is likely to precipitate the first major battle under the reorganization act of 1939.

Reorganization Plan No. I, sent to Congress April 25, 1939, and Plan No. II, on May 9, encountered no difficulty.

Victory for Ickes

The warnings of battle reaching the White House have not thus far dissuaded President Roosevelt from his plan to make the transfer, according to latest reports.

The transfer plan would give a victory to Secretary Ickes in a long tug-of-war with Secretary Wallace. Ickes has been fighting to get the Forest Service transferred to his department for several years.

The present time has been selected as propitious for renewal of Interior Department pressure for the transfer because a vacancy exists in the office of the chief of the Forest Service. By waiting until the transfer is completed to select a new chief, Ickes would have an opportunity to make sure the new appointee would go along with the reorganization program.

The late F. A. Silcox, forestry chief under the New Deal, was, up to the time of his death a few weeks ago, such a staunch foe of the proposed transfer that he refused an offer from Ickes to become Undersecretary of the Interior.

Would Undo Work of 30 Years

President Roosevelt, in backing Ickes for the transfer is understood to be influenced in part by his successful experience in New York State, where supervision of State forest lands and parks was combined in a single State department of conservation.

The transfer, if finally carried through, it was said, would undo part of the work of President Theodore Roosevelt and Gifford Pinchot, more than three decades ago in taking national forest lands out of the supervision of the Interior Department, and placing them in the Department of Agriculture.

Forest conservationists, fearful of what may happen to conservation program in the Interior Department, farm organization leaders concerned about the work of conservation on 180,000,000 acres of forest land on farms, and critics in Congress of Ickes and Interior Department tendencies toward centralization of Federal power, are expected to fight in Congress to block the transfer, President Roosevelt has been informed.

The American Forestry Association, the American Farm Bureau Federation, and the National Grange are among the organizations on record against the transfer.

However, the foes of the transfer would have to win in both Houses of Congress, and put through a joint resolution against it within 60 days. Under the terms of the reorganization act, an adverse vote of one House, which suffices to kill legislative measures, would be of no effect in blocking the reorganization plan.

New Bill Halves Naval Program

total cost of the bill now is estimated at about $750,000,000.

As revised the program would provide three 25,000-ton aircraft carriers about 22 1,500-ton submarines and an unspecified number of cruisers. Indications were that from 6 to 8 cruisers of varying size would be built, some of them huge, heavily gunned craft of 20,000 tons or more.

"It's cornfield lawyer sense," Vinson said in presenting his new bill. "The Navy wants to see the whole program put on the books at this time, but I think it is wise not to pile up too much construction ahead of the time that it can be actually carried out."

Representative Maas, ranking minority member of the group, supported the move, but declared "the record should show" the reduction was in "no wise cutting down the Navy."

"We are simply substituting a short range for a long range program, and if conditions are the same next year, we will go ahead with the balance of the program," he declared, as Vinson nodded agreement.

Rear Admiral Samuel M. Robinson, coordinator of naval shipbuilding, agreed that the curtailed program was all the Navy could complete within three years without considerable enlargement of building facilities.

In lieu of provisions in the original bill waiving various restrictive laws on contracting for ships, the new measure drops authority to let orders without competitive bidding, makes the Walsh-Healey labor law applicable, applies the 10 per cent profit limitation and requires ships be allocated half and half between naval and pri..te yards.

White House Conference Agrees on Need For Religious Training in American Schools

A report presented yesterday to the White House Conference on Children in a Democracy showed that in ten years, the number of persons aided by public funds in the United States had increased from 1 to 100 to 1 in 6. Attending the conference were (top, left to right) C. S. Winslow, professor of public health, Yale University; Katharine F. Lenroot, executive secretary of the conference; Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer. Lower—Elizabeth Christman, secretary-treasurer of the National Women's Trade Union League of Washington; Mrs. Mary Anderson, director of the Women's Bureau, Department of Labor, and Mary E. Dreir, vice president of the trade union league

For the first time, delegates to a White House Conference on Children yesterday turned their attention to the need for teaching religion to the boys and girls of America—but they could come to no agreement on how the country should go about it.

A privately financed commission which would study the problem objectively and report on techniques that could be employed was recommended.

"That we even are meeting and are agreed on the belief that religion and democracy are inseparable is something," Rabbi Edward L. Irasel, chairman of the group on religion, declared.

Atheism Feared

"At the last White House Conference ten years ago we could not have done it. The big question before us boils down to how we are going to keep church and state separate and yet have the religious fervor we need when assailed by atheistic forces."

Dr. F. Ernest Johnson, of the Federal Council of Churches in America, said that although such never was intended "separation of church and state in this country in the minds of many people has united the public school system with atheism."

The religious group was but one of 11 which opened sessions yesterday to report to the President on child conditions and to plan another decade of action in regard to their welfare. In all, 83 recommendations were adopted at the first meetings. Others can be added today and tomorrow.

Roosevelt to Speak

President Roosevelt will address the conference tonight following a reception at the White House, and Mrs. Roosevelt will be heard tomorrow. Secretary of Labor Perkins is presiding at the general sessions, which are sponsored by the Children's Bureau.

High among points approved by the conference groups were:

A Federal policy for continuing flexible work programs, to aid in building up family incomes—the belief being that "the best thing which could happen to children would be an end to the unemployment of their parents."

Large-scale slum clearance and low-cost housing under Federal leadership.

Federal aid to education, given in such a way that inequalities in the country "gradually would be eliminated."

"The fostering of democratic relationships among members of the family," which was termed the "threshold of democracy."

Vocational guidance and job placement, "work or school opportunities" being asked for youth over 16.

Public responsibility of development of recreation.

State aid for local public libraries and rural service.

Well-rounded public health programs and publicly financed medical care for low-income families.

Avoidance of race prejudice and discrimination in public administration.

60 Confer on Family

More delegates attended the meeting on "The Family As a Threshold of Democracy" than any other, approximately 60 men and women gathering to argue the family's merits and to condemn its failures.

Vigorous denials that the family is "crumbling" were made from the floor, and the report turned into the general conference was changed to read "not gone, only facing in a different direction."

Mrs. Anna Compton, of Chicago, declared she objected "strenuously to the gloomy tone used here this afternoon."

"Frankly," she said, "I would not want my four children to hear it. At our house we look upon the family as a successful idea. The girls of this country had rather have families than to be successful lawyers or doctors. I think the family is growing in favor, rather than crumbling."

A "White House breakfast" for school children was recommended at the session on health. Harriet Silverman, of the People's Health Committee, said the balanced diet thus insured would prevent "dental decay among children."

Dr. W. C. Bower, of the University of Chicago, said the committee drawing up the report on religion had at first included "strong recommendations" and then left them out as "treading on dangerous ground too quickly."

"The public health program of the country grew out of broad principles, stated generally. When we left the report without 'teeth in it' we were not pussyfooting. We just thought it would be better.

"The disagreement here as to method for teaching and planks on which we all can come together convince me we were right. The subject needs surveying."

Dr. Russell J. Clinchy, Congregationalist minister, objected to any stress on the idea that "religion grows out of democracy."

"It is the other way around and I want to say that religion offers the only basis for democracy," he declared.

"There, that's just it," Dr. Bower said, "we of the committee did not want to consider religion as an addenda to a public school program."

(A comprehensive story on findings of reports in the eleven fields selected for study at this conference was printed in The Washington Post of last Sunday.)

Ontario Votes Censure of War Regime

Legislature Charges Inefficiency; Hepburn Leads Attack

By the Associated Press

Toronto, Jan. 18.—The Ontario Legislature late today adopted, by a vote of 44 to 10, a motion condemning the Canadian government's alleged inefficiency in war effort after Provincial Premier Mitchell Hepburn, sponsor of the motion, had threatened to resign if it failed of passage.

The motion was an indorsement of statements made in the provincial legislature by Hepburn and by Conservative Leader George Drew. It regretted that the government at Ottawa was putting "so little effort" into its war plans.

Hepburn presented the motion after three members of his own Liberal Party had disagreed with his criticism of alleged insufficient equipment for Canadian troops and tardy marshaling of war supplies.

Hits Wheat Sale to Russia

Deploring the recent sale of a million bushels of Canadian wheat to Russia, which he characterized as a "potential enemy," Hepburn today told the legislature that "the Dominion Government is not prosecuting this war in the manner the Canadian people desire."

Continuing an attack of several days duration, Hepburn said he had seen Canadian Air Force recruits drilling in zero weather without proper clothing, and declared that Ontario sanitariums are "admitting many, many men who today suffer from active tuberculosis because they were not supplied with necessary clothing, shoes and bedding when they enlisted."

"All the propaganda will not put at rest the feeling of misgiving arising in the hearts of the Canadian people in regard to the conduct of the war," the premier said.

Hepburn said there had "almost been a riot" among the 500 men at the Royal Canadian Air Force center near St. Thomas, Ontario, "because of the conditions under which they had to live."

He spoke after William Duckworth, Conservative member, had referred to Winnipeg reports of the sale of 1,000,000 bushels of wheat to Russia.

"Is It Really a War?"

Predicting the wheat eventually would reach Germany and be fed to German soldiers who next spring "will be firing at our Canadian boys," Duckworth said those responsible should be "interned."

"Is it really a war or what is it?" he demanded. "Is it a financial war, or what is it all about?"

Finally, Hepburn presented the motion as a climax to a bitter attack which he made on the Dominion premier, Mackenzie King.

He shouted:

"I stand firm on the statement that he (King) has not done his duty by his country and he never will."

The House voted immediately, after the provincial premier announced he would quit if his motion was defeated.

Britons Urge Tighter Strangleholds on Foe

By Hugh Wagnon
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Jan. 18.—Commercecanny Britons, pushing shillings to the front like soldiers in a vast siege of Nazi staying power, tonight demanded appointment of an economic warfare overlord to apply an even more relentless stranglehold to Germany.

Satisfaction over the report of Economic Warfare Minister Ronald H. Cross to the effect that Germany already has been pinched to the needy stage of 1916 was tempered by increased neutral and British ship losses and the outcry that men and munitions could be spared by freer use of British gold to dam Nazi trade.

Neutral nations lost four ships today; Britain one and Germany one—to war and weather.

The British also saw these developments:

The Labor Lord Strabogli predicted Germany's economic collapse before the end of the year.

Protesting piece-work rates, 250 aircraft factory workmen in the midlands struck.

The King and Queen Elizabeth, in bitter weather, toured 50 miles of the Aldershot military training area.

American-born Lady Astor, titled teetotaler, asked Commons to ration barley supplies to brewers to save it for animal food.

The Archbishop of York told the Church of England's convocation of York, "We are fighting for Christian civilization."

Prime Minister Chamberlain promised a Commons' debate next Tuesday on blackout traffic fatalities, which caused 895 traffic deaths out of a total of 1,455 in December alone.

Leslie Burgin, British supply minister, and Raoul Dautry, French minister of armaments, agreed on details of pooling Allied manufacturing resources.

Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard, claiming overlapping between the several ministries dealing with economic and foreign affairs and "wasteful delays in our export trade," said L. S. Amery was the man for the job of economic warfare overseer.

Amery, 66, long has been known as a trade expert and an advocate of war debt settlement with the United States.

Today's table of ships lost read this way:

Norway—Fagerheim, 1,590 tons, reported torpedoed in Bay of Biscay, 14 lost. Enid, 1,140 tons, reported sunk by submarine action off Shetland Island; crew saved.

Denmark—Olga, 803 tons, wrecked on rocks of southern Norway; crew of 12 saved.

Greece—Asteria, 3,313 tons, sunk by mine in North Sea; 13 out of 24 crewmen believed drowned.

Great Britain—Cairnross, 5,494 tons, sunk by mine off English west coast, crew of 48 saved.

Germany—August Thyssen, 2,342 tons, sunk off Aland Islands by mine believed to be Swedish, crew in drifting boats trapped by broken ice; Swedish warship trying to reach them.

(This situation is sea warfare sent the known toll of all nations to 318 ships having an aggregate tonnage of 1,127,355. At least 2,773 lives have been lost.)

Zero Is Forecast As Cold Kills Man

was heralded by sharp drops in temperature. Hagerstown had a low of 7 degrees below zero Wednesday night, with slowly rising temperatures yesterday. Big Savage, Md., reported zero weather while at Frostburg it was 5 degrees above and 7 degrees above at Cumberland.

The Weather Bureau las tnight ordered storm warnings posted from Cape Hatteras to the Virginia Capes. A storm was reported forming over North Carolina and moving eastnortheast, accompanied by strong northwest winds.

Temperatures plunged below the zero mark in a wide tier of Northern States east of the Rockies, reached new lows for the season in many cities and fell to levels untouched in three or four years in several others, the Associated Press reported.

The readings scaled down to —32 in Cody, Wyo.; —31 in Butte, Mont., and —30 in Lemmon, S. Dak., and Bloomfield, Nebr.

U. S. Funds Godsend to HomelessFinns

Buy Clothes for Those Driven From Houses in Subzero Temperature

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, Jan. 18.—Money from the Finnish Relief Fund in the United States, of which former President Hoover is national chairman, is proving a Godsend to war refugees on these desperately cold days.

A total of $600,000 from the fund already has reached Finland.

A central committee, headed by former Premier Aimo Cajander, is administering its expenditure, buying warm clothing and shoes in both the Finnish and Scandinavian markets.

In addition to purchasing winter clothing, the central committee is setting aside a portion of the fund to supplement milk rations provided by the government for persons compelled to leave their homes.

There are more than 500,000 refugees now—the largest numbers coming from cities and towns in the actual war zone.

One of the tragic difficulties has been that some of the very towns which received the greatest number of refugees have been bombed the most often.

Each community outside the so-called war zone is under obligation to take up to 60 per cent of its population in refugees but in some towns and villages the number of refugees taken exceeded their normal populations.

Frederick Dorsey Stephens, who represents Hoover's organization here, said that he has found families with just enough to live on were sharing their homes, beds, food and clothing with refugees.

Schools have been closed throughout Finland and the buildings, together with other public buildings, are being used to house refugees.

Leaders Seek Finn Aid Accord

Senate circles was a plan to foster a second private Finnish relief drive, similar to the nongovernmental aid movements in progress in Norway and Sweden. It was suggested private money thus raised could be used for purchase of war materials without affecting neutrality policy. It was proposed that a new campaign, with a nationally prominent chairman, might be coordinated with the drive of former President Hoover, limited chiefly to collection of funds to provide food and clothing.

No War Declared

Senator Brown said he had heard this discussed but feared it would not yield funds in the volume needed.

"We all know what Finland needs most now is war equipment," said the Michigan Senator. "That is why I have been standing by my bill for a Governmental loan without restrictions on purchases. No war has been declared and until the neutrality act is invoked certainly there is no conflict with our statutes."

In agreeing to work with Administration agents on a compromise bill, Senator Brown declined to discuss what concessions might be considered on both sides in the interest of speeding action.

Field Narrowed

As the President and Jones have stood firm against military loans, the field appeared narrowed to a $30,000,000 to $35,000,000 aggregate credit grant to a Finnish corporation by the Export Import Bank, with requirement that it be spent here for farm and manufactured products of a nonmilitary nature.

While such a compromise would seem to bar military aid to Finland, increasingly discussed in unofficial conversations with Finnish diplomats has been the possibility that Britain or France might take nonmilitary products purchased here "in trade" with Finland for weapons.

England, it has been suggested, is now in a position to supply Finland planes, rifles and ammunition. If large-scale fighting developed on the Western Front, England might be forced to conserve all of her plane strength, but would still be able to provide Finns with rifles, ammunition and the like, it was said.

Representative Celler, in introducing his bill for a $50,000,000 loan for Finland, declared America should not be "finicky" about it.

"Finland needs no food, no gifts or charity or clothing," Celler said. "It has all of those items it needs. Its vital necessity for its very existence are modern army Garand rifles, bombs and planes. There is no reason for timidity. In supplying such ammunition to Finland we are not violating the neutrality act for there has been no declaration of war. In international law there is no war. We must boldly strike out and help this courageous republic which, in the spring, might become helpless against overwhelming odds. Finland's fight is a fight for democracy. We are vitally interested.

China Loan Cited

"All the Baltic states are threatened. Finland is the last barrier there. We were not finicky about a $25,000,000 loan to China."

Senator Townsend, who raised the charge of "inconsistency" in Administration transactions with Russians and Finns, first protested Treasury purchase of Russian gold at Wednesday's closed hearings of the Senate Banking Committee, it was learned.

Townsend, who last session nearly succeeded in barring further Treasury purchase of foreign silver, said he has been considering introducing a bill to end the $35 an ounce fixed Treasury price of foreign gold. He has not done so, he said, because of its likely effect on American exports. But he said the Treasury should use its authority to start scaling down the price.

Patent Chief to Speak

Commissioner of Patents Conway P. Coe will speak on the development of the American patent system at 7 p. m. Monday at a dinner of the American Patent Law Association in the Mayflower Hotel. Guests at the dinner will include members of the Senate and House, judges of the District courts and officials of the Department of Commerce and Patent Office. William B. Kerkam will preside.

Grim Evidence of Earthquakes That Rocked Turkey

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

While a soldier stands guard, workers clamber over wreckage of a four-story building that housed the Governor of Tokat, Turkey, before the earthquake of December 28 tumbled it into ruins. Yesterday a second series of quakes were reported to have killed 50 and injured 160 in the Nigde district for a solid front, observers felt, however, that both Denmark and Norway at the moment would reject any direct move toward collaboration on grounds that their position was not fundamentally comparable with that of Sweden.

The Swedish government clung to its policy of "wait and see" and political circles in Stockholm discounted the immediate possibility of any crisis or change in government.

Four contingents of Swedish fighters and others from Denmark have gone to Finland, but these were strictly volunteers.

Sandler Applauded

Indications of which way the wind was blowing were seen in the applause which greeted Sandler's remarks during parliamentary debate yesterday and the significance attached to a statement by Frederik Strom, Sweden's outstanding Socialist leader, in favor of a Scandinavian defense alliance.

Sandler declared that the time was not ripe for northern military cooperation before he left office December 13—reportedly due to differences over his stand for fortification of the Aaland Islands—but that developments now had convinced him otherwise.

His declaration and the reply of Premier Per Albin Hansson that "the idea of northern collaboration is by no means shipwrecked" greatly encouraged liberal and conservative elements favoring active aid to Finland.

The premier added, however, that any opinion that Sweden was obliged to stand at Finland's side could not be the deciding factor in the government's position, being based as it was on sentiment.

"Finland would have escaped war if the northern countries earlier had established a northern countries defense league," Storm said in a published statement. "Perhaps it is not too late to fashion such a league. Every day is costly now.

"The only thing we can do now is to utilize all our strength, as hurriedly as possible in building up a strong army, navy and air force."

Socialists Urge Caution

The Socialist press pled for restraint and caution, especially as regards possible antagonism of Germany.

On the other hand, the conservative Svenska Dagbladet and the liberal Stockholms-Tidningen continued their campaign for help, including the dispatch of troops, to Finland.

Political observers in Norway stated flatly that Norway was interested only in fighting in direct self-defense.

Denmark took no official or editorial notice of the Stockholm developments.

Walk Signs Stop Star Reporter on Big Assignment

seeking crowds. Rather in some quiet retreat on the outskirts of the city, in some rural spot far removed from the senseless rush of the busy modern world would it be likely for a man approaching the twilight of life's span to seek surcease.

And it was there that I would find him.

Having arrived at this conclusion, I acted swiftly. Swinging along at a rapid gate, I soon reached Thirteenth street and darted out across the Avenue toward the point across the street where I had parked my car.

The street was thick with traffic, and here again I brought into play the keen qualities of a well-trained mind. Ignoring the flashing "Walk" and "Don't Walk" lights which serve but to confuse the ordinary pedestrian, I darted nimbly between truck and taxi, limousine and motor lorry, neatly averting disaster, or worse, at every step.

Here too, I felt, was a challenge, and one that would be met with typical Hornblow resourcefulness. Halfway across, I became aware of persistent loud blasts from a shrill whistle of some sort. Dimly I wondered, as I leapt hurriedly from the path of a speeding truck, what it could mean. Some fiendish scheme, I thought, to make even more hazardous the already-perilous crossing. I dismissed it from my mind.

A heavy hand fell upon my shoulder. Startled, I pivoted to confront a sturdy, blue-clad man, his face beet-red, a whistle in his hand. He was panting. I spotted him at once as a policeman.

Firmly he led me by the arm back to the curb I had so recently departed. Once there, he planted his feet somewhat apart, placed his hands upon his hips, and thrust his face within an inch of mine.

"You," he began, when he had regained his breath . . .

The "Walk" lights flashed on and off. The traffic signals changed from red to green and back again. The great office buildings poured out their thousands of homeward-bound employes. The sunlight faded from the sky, and twilight settled.

But still we stood there.

Repeatedly I attempted to point out that I had not been aware of doing wrong. To no avail. Finally, hoarse and exhausted, the policeman turned away. But the day was gone and it was too late to fulfill my assignment. For a moment I was sad, standing there in the deserted city. But only for a moment. For like a bright light from above an idea struck me . . . there was tomorrow!

And tomorrow I would not fail!

Planes, Ships Fight In North Sea

half an hour and German planes, numbering at least 15, were seen flying in a southwesterly direction, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Tonder.

The long fingers of searchlights criss-crossed in the sky during the second raid, the dispatch reported.

15 German Planes Seen

It was possible the earlier attack was directed against Germany's North Sea "Gibraltar" at Helgoland. The wind was from the southwest and could have carried the sound of gunfire the 65 miles from Helgoland, making it appear closer. This also was indicated by the fact that the 15 German planes flew toward Helgoland.

Tonder is on the Danish mainland opposite Sylt, which has been raided several times by British aircraft engaged on "security patrol" to stop German minelaying planes and scouts at their source.

British bombers struck at the Sylt anchorage on January 10 in three raids, bombing the Hindenburg causeway which connects the island with the mainland.

The Germans were reported to have removed the civilian population from the island early in the war.

hint that Helsinki is looking northward expectantly.

Karelian Front activities seem paralyzed by the extreme cold. Viipuri and the nearby southeastern front lines are in a deadly frigid zone where the cold is more dangerous than shrapnel.

The frozen situation of the Soviet fleet is indicated by the monotonous repetition of recent daily communiques:

"At sea: Nothing to report."

Soviet Communique

Moscow, Jan. 18 (AP).—Tonight's communique of the Leningrad military area headquarters:

"On January 18 military actions at the front consisted chiefly of activities of scouts and artillery fire in a number of districts. Soviet aviation made reconnoitering flights."

Russians Eat Horses

With the Finnish Forces Forces in Lapland, Jan. 18 (AP).—Flesh sliced from dead horses—apparently for food—disclosed today, Finnish officers said, the privations which a Russian force underwent for more than a month in its besieged camp of dugouts and bombproof shelters here on the Salla front before beginning a retreat.

A Finnish detachment which occupied the camp shortly after the Russians' departure also reported the bark was gnawed off the trees, apparently by horses in search of food.

The woods within a large area of the camp had been chopped down by Red army to provide shelter.

Finns said expertly built shellproof dugouts, with roofs made of successive layers of pine logs, earth, stone and pine boughs, explained how the Russians were able to hold out during a siege of more than a month despite the privations of wild Arctic hills.

Supplies Destroyed

The camp, strategically located, was built after the Russians found their advance suddenly stopped within 125 miles of cutting Finland in two.

But, Finnish commanders said, Finnish patrols managed to practically isolate them by successively destroying Red army supply columns and by constant forays.

The Finns said the Russians appeared to have begun stealing out of their fortified camp and trenches last Sunday, after attempts to penetrate the ring of Finnish besiegers had failed.

Ski scouts sent out along the road to Salla discovered the flight. The Finns sent advance patrols through the forests parallel to the highway along the line of retreat. The main Finnish body followed close behind the patrols.

One Finnish scouting party came suddenly upon a large enemy patrol, only a few of whom were on skis, and by superior mobility, managed to ambush the party. The Russians were killed to the last man, the Finnish patrol reported.

'Wherezit' Party Tonight

SHAR-ZAD GOES LINCOLNIAN. To those thousands who'll want all possible glimpses of the stars and celebrities coming to town for the Monday premier of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" . . . You might hang around the Carlton's Shar-Zad or cocktail lounge. For the whole "A. L. I. I." will arrive at the Carlton over the week-nd. You may see Abraham Lincoln (Raymond Massey), Ann Rutledge (Mary Howard) and Mary Todd Lincoln (Ruth Gordon) all enjoying cocktails together. Also Author Bob Sherwood, Director John Cromwell, Producers Harry Goetz and Max Gordon. R-K-O star Lucille Ball is also due at the Carlton tomorrow. . . . Shar-Zad's Maestro Bill McCune is sending out operatives in all directions to find out the favorite tunes of these celebs.

HI HAT CHANGES COMING. The Opalita and Garcia International Trio will arrive in Hi Hat on Monday, January 29, says Manager Russell A. Conn of the Ambassador Hotel. This is a really fancy unit that has appeared in top spots both on the West Coast and in New York. They sing both in English and Spanish, lovely Opalita plays the accordion an the lads play violin and guitar . . . This leaves you just ten days to visit with Jack Manning's popular "Strings of Romance."

TANGO PERFECTION is exemplified in the polished dancing of Nitza and Ravel in the Shoreham Blue Room. They're among the most brilliant Latin-American dancers ever booked into the hotel. Nitza's gowns have that Parisian chic and dash, especially that black taffeta with the saucy leg o' mutton sleeves . . . Badminton champs Ken Davidson and Hugh Forgie will be held over next week in the Blue Room, also Barytone Gene Archer. New will be dancers Stuart and Lea.

ACCENT ON MUSIC. Mayfair. Maria, Joann and Joy, the charmers of the Karson Trio, will be among the night spot artists on WOL's program boosting the President's Birthday Ball next Thursday.

Troika. Sasha Bolshikoff, whom you may have heard with Gen. Platoff's Cossack Choir last Sunday, has joined the Troika. He's rehearsing skits with Lola and Mara, and will be out there with the floor show in a day or so.

Mayflower Lounge. Dick Koons' Orchestra is already playing the Cole Porter tunes from "Broadway Melody of 1940," new picture not yet released. Next thing you know, these boys will play tunes from pictures before they're made.

Salle Versailles. Jean Cathon is singing that classic of World War 1, "Madelon" as only a Frenchman can sing it. The customers are demanding it ten times a night.

King Cole Room. Tommy Suter's parodies with guitar accompaniment are pleasing the folks mightily. Suter suits, huh?

Rainbow Room. Lew Berman's back from New York with a flock of new music hot off the presses. We hear it includes some ballads only to be classed as "Berman's sizzling specials."

Nitza and Ravel, star Latin-American dancers in the Blue Room

Neptune Room. Bert Granoff is complimenting both the Palace and Earle Theaters by singing both Stephen Foster sons and numbers from the "Desert Song."

Pall Mall Room. Russ Cullen gives special Caruso touches to "Little Man Who Wasn't There," Makes it sound as though it was written by Verdi.

Del Rio. Say, there's some one singing at Del Rio besides Mary Martin. It's Guitarist Lew Davies of the Max Binder Orchestra. You've certainly often enjoyed his vocals at the Capitol Theater.

LOTUS ORIGINALS. When that tremendous Twelfth Anniversary Week begins at the Lotus on Monday there'll be many folks there who enjoyed the rainbow opening of the Lotus back in 1928 . . . Heading them will be Lotus' Manager Dick Lamm and Maestro Bill Strickland . . . Bill was not present as band leader at the opening, but he was up on the bandstand a month or so later . . . Congratulations to the Lotus management on a dozen big and successful years!

FASCINATING FIXTURES. That little red telephone that's carried around Cafe Caprice. Well, it does depend on who's calling you. . . . The dizzily high bar of the Lounge Riviera. They must use an elevator to get down the glasses on the top shelf . . . The port and starboard lights in the Anchor Room. A great help to amateur navigators . . . That hot plate heater that's installed square in the middle of the radiator in the white paneled main room of Hall's seafood restaurant.

ROAMIN' IN THE GLOAMIN'. Tonight is "All-Swing Night" down at River Bend. George Stein has assembled scores of hot-cha arrangements and is going to deal them out smoking. Lee Mason will do the song-age . . . Down Virginia way, too, you'll find the Nightingale where Lee Downe and his big band specialize on "honey swing music." A cheerful and tuneful spot . . . If you head out toward Maryland, you'll be attracted by the bright lights of the Fat Boy on New York avenue extended. You'll do well by yourself to stop here for a spot of supping and dancing to DeVaughn Clements' orchestra . . . Out at Wheaton, Md., is the hospitable Log Cabin, a pleasant spot for small parties and also available for big private parties.

Inconsistency Of U. S. Policy Is Criticized

Money and Economy Largely Mishandled, Says Morgan Partner

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer

Inconsistency in Government policy, such as the encouragement of gold imports and the discouragement of other imports, was criticized by Russell C. Leffingwell, partner of J. P. Morgan & Co., in a statement filed yesterday with the Monopoly Committee.

His conclusion was that, in the 22 years since the World, the Government had managed the Nation's money, and, to some extent, its economy, and to a large degree had mishandled both. He felt that, on the basis of this record, it ought to abandon economic planning and money management and turn the job, or at least the major part of it, back to the people.

Leffingwell, who was Assistant Secretary of the Treasury under Secretary Carter Glass during the Wilson Administration, elaborated in his statement on testimony before the committee at the investment banking hearing last month.

Dividing his criticism between Democratic and Republican administrations, he blamed equally the Fordney-McCumber and Hawley-Smoot tariffs, and the New Deal's spending and deficit financing policies, for the huge pools of stagnant, idle money in the Nation's banks.

Commends Trade Policy

He commended the Administration's reciprocal trade agreement policy. He only wished, he said, that Secretary of State Hull, in carrying out this policy, "could go faster and farther."

He blamed the Administration for the 1937 recession. Causes of the decline, he declared, were President Roosevelt's statement that certain prices were too high, the increase in member bank reserve requirements by the Reserve Board, and the Treasury's gold sterilization program.

The Reserve Board, he maintained, brought on the 1921 depression and mishandled the credit machinery in the years preceding the 1929 stock market crash. Nevertheless, he felt that the abandonment of the gold standard in 1933 was the result of "sheer, grim compulsion."

Leffingwell, however, opposed the monetary theories of Prof. George F. Warren and the 1933 gold buying and dollar devaluation. Coupled with a present policy of holding down domestic prices, he said, the high price paid for gold as a result of dollar devaluation "gives a double discount to buyers of American goods and securities."

Usefulness of gold impaired

He argued that a high tariff structure to keep usable goods out and a high price for gold to bring that metal in, together with restrictions on foreign loans, operated to dislocate world economy and to "impair the usefulness of gold as a monetary metal."

Nevertheless, he did not favor changing the gold price. To raise it further, he said, would be "lunacy," and to lower it would be deflationary.

"The wise course," he declared, "would be to allow commodity prices to rise somewhat, and thus reduce the gross disparity between the gold price and the commodity price level."

Devaluation of the dollar, the influx of foreign "fright money," high taxes to redistribute wealth, labor laws, the present policy of holding down price advances, "bureaucratic interference" with normal economic processes, and Government competition with business, all have contributed, he argued, to make money idle.

Kennecott President Heard

E. T. Stannard, president of the Kennecott Copper Corporation, told the committee that members of the industry should be given the right to consult among themselves on restriction of production. Cornelius F. Kelley, president of the Anaconda Copper Mining Corporation, previously had testified that producers should be allowed to limit production under Government supervision.

Stannard denied that the statement by President Roosevelt last September that 12½ cents per pound was a sufficiently high price for copper had resulted in the price being held to that figure until this week, when some companies cut the price to 12¼ cents.

He felt that it would be advisable to prevent speculation in copper prices, declaring that speculation aggravated price fluctuations.

Lindy's Serves 400,000 Coffees Yearly, Hears Congress Out-talked

(This is the second of three articles on the favorite restaurants of New York celebrities.)

By Gladwin Hill.
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Jan. 18.—The international stronghold of the spoken word, probably outranking even such citadels of verbiage as Congress and the telephone system, is a unique glass-and-chromium restaurant on Broadway.

In this restaurant, in the course of a year, are served some 400,000 cups of coffee—and over each cup a couple of thousand words are spoken.

The establishment is subconsciously familiar to millions on several continents who have never seen it, but who know it by the tagline:

Started Across the Street

"Mindy's" is Damon Runyon's fictional name for Lindy's, another celebrity haunt that grew from a delicatessen, the hangout of actors, musicians and above all everybody in the sports world, among them the originals of most of Runyon's bizarre characters, including Regret, the horse player; Bookie Bob, and Harry the Horse.

Lindy started across the street, where his old place, now supervised by Mrs. Lindy, still stands, frequented notably by the slim-fingered, hawk-eyed gentlemen who handle the more speculative aspects of improving the breed of horses.

At the new Lindy's, 24 hours a day, sports promoters, stars, sports writers and theatricals luminaries, with a generous sprinkling of feminine pulchritude, sit around absorbed in the oral recreation known as batting the fat.

May Last to 7 A. M.

It is nothing for a round-table session to start with the midnight rush and be still proceeding, unabated, at 7 o'clock the next morning.

Joe Jacobs will expound fantastic plans for staging a battle royal on Pike's Peak while such heckling experts as Writers Eddie Brietz, Hype Igoe and Joe Williams sit by and protest that Pike's Peak has long been under option to the Russian army for ski practice.

Passersby chime in and out, and the anecdotes start to flow, and presently Damon Runyon, a keen-eared listener, will quietly withdraw to hasten to his typewriter and bat out another "I'm Sitting in Mindy's . . ."

The admission of women to Lindy's is mostly a concession to expediency. The bull session is primarily a male institution, and the ladies are tolerated principally because with them there, their husbands don't have to go home so soon

Amid the rising tide of social woman suffrage, a diligent search discloses in Manhattan only four hangouts still absolutely inviolate to the male.

Three of them are midtown hotel men's bars—the Biltmore, the Roosevelt and the Waldorf—where suburban swains account for half the Nation's annual 'phone calls telling the Mrs. that they have been detained at the office.

The fourth is McSorley's, the humble East Seventh street tavern immortalized in art by John Sloan—its walls dulled, but its atmosphere hallowed, by nearly a century of suds.

There are white-aproned waiters, sawdust on the floor, a pot-bellied iron stove and four or five generations of cats all over the place all the time, and never in the memory of man has a woman set foot inside the place.

Not that anything untoward happens—the place closes on the dot of 12 each night and on the wall is a sign "Be Good or Begone"—but McSorley's goes back to the days when women in bars were no less than adventuresses — unprincipled adventuresses even—and now whenever a would-be female patron starts in, or a neighborhood lady calls to retrieve her errant spouse, a waiter politely blockades her in the vestibule.

No drink but ale is served, and so much is that revered that, to attain the perfect temperature half of each glass is drawn from the cooled tap and half from a pitcher kept on the bar at room heat.

To Check Constipation Get at Its Cause!
If constipation has you down so you feel heavy, tired and dopey, it's time you did something about it. And something more than just taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble.
If you eat the super-refined food most people eat, the chances are the difficulty is simple—you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean heavy food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines.
If this common form of constipation is your trouble, eat Kellogg's All-Bran regularly, and drink plenty of water. All-Bran isn't a medicine—it's a crunchy, toasted cereal. And it will help you not only to get regular but to keep regular. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

Assistance For Ruhland

In the course of an address to the Health Institute yesterday, on the very timely subject of pneumonia, Dr. Harry F. Dowling took occasion to speak warmly in praise of Dr. Ruhland, whose removal as District health officer is now being sought by persons afraid to disclose their identity and for reasons which will not stand publicity.

It is primarily, if not almost wholly, due to Dr. Ruhland's leadership, said Dr. Dowling, that the District of Columbia is now ranked with the few States which have vigorous and effective public programs for the control of pneumonia. This program consists not only in the education of laymen and physicians but also in providing facilities for the prompt typing of infections and the prompt distribution of the proper serums.

Dr. Dowling, who has had an active share in the pneumonia-control program, knows what he is talking about. Many other local physicians are also in a position to know what the devotion and energy of Dr. Ruhland have come to mean for the health and well-being of the District. They have an opportunity to serve their community doubly now by speaking out.

Looking Ahead

Senator Harrison's plan for a joint Congressional committee to study budget estimates and secure a comprehensive picture of the fiscal situation appears to have been definitely shelved. House leaders maintain that the proposal came too late, as work on various appropriation bills is already completed or far advanced. There is considerable force to such objections so far as the present session of Congress is concerned; but that makes it all the more imperative to consider plans for better supervision of future budgetary procedure.

Our so-called executive budget is a travesty on budget-making. It consists of a series of tentative recommendations in respect to appropriations and presents necessarily unreliable and partial estimates of income. The President freely exercises the right to revise his estimates, and Congress feels no obligation to keep within budgeted appropriations or to find additional revenue from taxes to cover unbudgeted outlays. This kind of irresponsible budgeting puts a premium upon extravagance.

At a time when current outgo far outstrips income a committee representing the revenue producing and appropriating agencies of both houses of Congress is especially needed to hold spending proclivities in check. A great deal could be accomplished simply by assembling facts and making individual committees realize that specific outlays have to be related to total governmental costs as well as to particular requirements. Such general supervision of the work of individual committees of the House and Senate would do much to improve our deplorably defective budget-making procedure.

It is to be hoped, therefore, that Congress will give some thought to the feasibility of establishing a permanent committee to guide spending and revenue-raising policies. The idea behind the Harrison plan is excellent. Even if the present Congress should succeed in resisting pressure groups and in keeping appropriations within budget estimates, future Congresses would find the work of retrenchment made easier by centralized, intelligent guidance.

They Don't Know

The results of the poll conducted by the New York Stock Exchange to find out what the public thinks about it are chiefly interesting as a revelation of widespread public ignorance regarding that body.

The survey covered 5,000 representative individuals of both sexes located in all parts of the country. Nearly 40 per cent of those interrogated assume that the exchange makes a profit when the public loses money. Nearly one-fourth asserted that prices are set by the men who run the exchange. Almost 9 per cent think that livestock is dealt in on the exchange and close to one-fourth are sure that grain is traded in.

In view of the widespread misconceptions of the functions of the exchange, opinions expressed concerning its usefulness and indispensability have little value in themselves. However, it is important for the exchange management to find out whether the public views it with favor or regards it with indifference or downright hostility. While few of those replying thought the exchange ought to be "done away with entirely," a very large percentage of the answers indicated complete indifference to its fate. That, of course, is not surprising, but it emphasizes the need for more information about the operations of the exchange. For public indifference and hostility to it are to a very large extent the result of ignorance.

Another significant discovery resulting from the exchange poll is that a very large number of people—over 40 per cent of those questioned—think that the New York Stock Exchange and Wall street are just "two names for the same thing." This sad confusion of thought is doubtless due to our habit of using catch words and phrases without stopping to define them. Both "Wall street" and the "stock exchange" have come to signify for many Americans financial power and privilege, associated in many minds with activities of dubious legitimacy.

Evidently, a great deal of elementary educational work needs to be done before the rank and file of Americans will be able to express an intelligent opinion about either the work of Wall street or the usefulness of the stock exchange.

The Dead Hand

Huey Long was assassinated on September 8, 1935. Since that time some of his principal henchmen have also passed from the scene. Others are now serving jail sentences. Still others are under indictment and await trial on a wide variety of charges.

So far as personnel is concerned, the political gang that ran Louisiana during the Long dictatorship appears to have been effectively broken up. But the exposure by Federal authorities of extensive political corruption in Louisiana has only weakened, it has not destroyed, the powerful machine which the Kingfish had built up. Indication of this is to be found in the results of the Louisiana State primaries held this week.

The principal contest was over the governorship, with the incumbent, Earl Long, brother of Huey, battling four other candidates for the Democratic nomination which in Louisiana is tantamount to election. When Huey was alive, there was no love lost between him and Earl. Since the death of the dictator, however, brother Earl has made his peace with the machine.

Earl Long's principal supporter is Robert S. Maestri, Mayor of New Orleans and one of the triumvirate that ruled the Louisiana roost after Huey's assassination. The other two were Richard W. Leche, recently Governor of the State and now under indictment on Federal charges, and Seymour Weiss, who was convicted of fraudulent use of the mails. Maestri is today, therefore, the only one of Huey Long's principal lieutenants on whom no law-violation charges have been pinned, a circumstance which has enabled him to achieve practically unchallenged control of the old Long machine.

In the primaries, Earl Long, with the support of Maestri and the machine, seems to have managed to pile up a vote not very much below that of his four opponents combined. But if he has failed to secure a majority, a run-off election will have to be held. The real test of the machine is thus still to come and if the other candidates throw their support behind Samuel Houston Jones, of Lake Charles, there is a chance, if only a bare chance, that Long will be defeated.

The very circumstance that the latter has managed to poll so large a vote, despite all that has happened in Louisiana in the way of exposures of corruption, indicates, however, that the people of that State are not yet fully aroused to the need of drastic house cleaning.

Record Production

In December the Federal Reserve Board index of industrial production, adjusted to allow for the usual seasonal variations, attained a record high figure of 128—that is, the index was 28 per cent above the 1923-25 base average and 9 points higher than the unadjusted index for the entire year 1929. While the January seasonally adjusted index is expected to be somewhat below the December level, current business activity remains extraordinarily high.

In contrast with the production figures, indices for factory employment show a pronounced lag. The Bureau of Labor Statistics index for November, the latest available estimate, stands at 103.4, only slightly above the average for the base years, 1923-25. While advance reports from leading industrial States indicate that factory employment in December showed a less-than-seasonal decrease, thus pointing to a December rise in the employment index, it is safe to assume that the gain will not be spectacular.

Having reached a record level of industrial activity in December, we have good cause to be worried about the much slower rise in the index of factory employment. The slower upturn calls attention to the fact that we still have millions of idle workers for whom there is virtually no hope of providing jobs in the near future through an expansion of industrial activity. That, of course, is merely another way of saying that we are confronted by a problem of chronic unemployment due to technological improvements which have greatly increased labor's per capita output.

The situation calls attention also to the fact that business activity has reached a level at which it is no longer possible to assume the existence of depression-created emergencies of a temporary character, providing an excuse for delay in cutting the costs of Government. If Congress fails to reduce expenditures at a time when the index of industrial production is at, or close to, a record high, the prospect for ultimate balancing of the budget is, indeed, remote.

The Silent War

Ronald H. Cross is a name practically unknown to a world well aware of the activities of such men as Gen. Gamelin, generalissimo of the Allied forces on the Western Front, or Winston Churchill, who, as first lord of the admiralty, is in charge of the most active of Britain's fighting services.

Yet, as Britain's minister of economic warfare, Mr. Cross is a man to be watched. For the sphere of action allocated to his department happens to be as significant as it is undramatic. In this war, as in the last, it may play a decisive role in determining the ultimate outcome. For this reason the accounting he gave the House of Commons on Wednesday was of great importance.

According to Mr. Cross, Germany, after four and a half months of war, finds herself in as serious an economic plight as she was in 1916, two years after the outbreak of the last war. Technically stronger because of the tremendous advance preparations, and possessing the advantage of having to fight on only one front instead of two, as in 1914, Germany is, nevertheless, today increasingly feeling the pinch of Allied economic pressure.

This pressure is taking two forms. In the first place, there is the blockade which has resulted in the disappearance of the German merchant fleet from the seas and the effective separation of the Reich from overseas sources of essential raw materials. In the second place, the Allies, with the aid of the finance weapon, are carrying on a continuous war of attrition against German economic activities in the European area not directly affected by the blockade. Among other moves is the purchase of surpluses from Balkan and other countries to which Germany looks to make good the shortages arising out of the blockade.

"We have placed contracts," says Mr. Cross, "of a kind at which sober businessmen would shudder in peacetime."

Mr. Cross spoke to the House of Commons in sober vein, as befitting the head of a ministry which operates in so unspectacular a fashion. He did not minimize the difficulties facing the Allies in their attempt to weaken Germany by economic pressure. But his humdrum recital of the steady, relentless pressure to which the Allies are subjecting the Reich provided the best clew to the puzzle of which side is winning this strangest of all wars.

Breaking a Chain

Within his own orbit—and not such a small orbit either—the personal powers of Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of organized baseball, rival those of any ancient despot or modern dictator. These powers were vested in him, at his insistence, when, in 1919, he undertook to rescue the game from the obloquy resulting from the Black Sox scandal.

It is something of a paradox that, within the past few days, Judge Landis has been exercising his autocratic powers to strike a blow at the cartel, or "chain-store," system which now dominates baseball and to restore something of the old spirit of open competition. He has declared 90 or more players, whose contracts were controlled by the Detroit American League Club, to be free agents. Thus, at one swoop he demolished, more completely than Mr. Thurman Arnold could have done by years of litigation, the club's elaborate monopolistic edifice. The baseball world has not yet recovered from the shock.

The contracts, declared Judge Landis, had been "mishandled;" it is not yet quite plain just what he means by that, but doubtless he will make it clear in the statement he has promised to issue. Moreover, there is some reason to believe that what Judge Landis has done to the Detroit Club is merely the beginning of what he intends to do.

Commissioner Landis' distrust of the "chain-store" system, whereby certain major league clubs by their ownership or control of minor league clubs seek to assure themselves of an unfailing supply of players, is well known. He has tolerated it, when conducted in strict accordance with the established rules. But he is himself the sole interpreter of rules. It is obvious that he considers the Detroit Club has violated them.

Defenders of the system insist that without it most of the minor leagues must go out of business and that the quality of major league baseball would suffer severely. Nevertheless, it seems something of an anomaly that this most intensely competitive of vocations should also be the most severely regimented and that it should require the powers of a "czar" to give them the right even of individual bargaining.

Truth may hurt, but you don't get enough of it with flattery to hurt you.

"The Ruhland Mystery"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your searching editorial, "The Ruhland Mystery," effectively summarizes a number of questions of general interest to Washingtonians. District health records and statistics when studied indicate that the doctor has been successful in starting our city on the road to better sanitation, lower morbidity and mortality rates, and a sounder knowledge of health hazards.

He has succeeded to a considerable extent in lifting Washington from the disgracefully low health status formerly our lot, up to levels which promise to give our community a place among the top ten cities in the country if a similar rate of progress is maintained. Assuming these public records to be correct, why the sudden and unexplained effort for his replacement?

One is reminded of the famous passage from Vergil which poses a series of questions starting with "What divinity offended" and concluding "Is there such wrath in celestial minds?"

Allow us to commend The Post for going to bat on this issue.

RAY H. EVERETT,
Executive secretary, Social Hygiene Society.
Washington, Jan. 12.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial "Opportunity Muffed" is an able and concise exposition of facts. Many of the South American republics, as well as Australia, have federal districts, but every one of them have representation. In this respect they are far ahead if us.

As you well put it, when the Commissioners, in their proposed set-up, called for a local group of citizens to guide them in their policies, it was an admission on their part of the inadequacy of the system. An organization of the District government with such a proviso will be ineffective. Past performances along this line have shown us that.

The intended removal of Dr. Ruhland, an efficient public official, is a vivid demonstration of our need for some say in our local affairs and shows only too clearly the small regard those in high places have for the District's welfare. It would have been better to have left Mr. Allen in his private field of endeavor instead of reinstalling him here as chief of the "Kitchen Cabinet," which with its secret conferences at the White House have done nothing but obstruct the normal progress of an enlightened self-respecting, tax-paying community of some 7,000 people, who only ask a square deal in local self-government. Put in another way, we will get nowhere as long as the voteless residents of the District of Columbia are made the victims of the hogging patronage dispensers.

The citizens of the Capital City are still hopeful that Representative Kennedy, a competent and courageous member of the House District Committee, will not surrender his plan of reorganization of the District government to a clique of high salaried officials who seem willing to sacrifice our public betterment for their own selfish purposes. Wider Circulation?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I congratulate The Post and M. Del Vecchio on the superb photograph of the Lincoln Memorial and the wintry Reflection Pool, which appeared so appropriately displayed in the rotogravure section of last Sunday's edition?

Merely to glance at it not only reminded one of the glory and grandeur of past times, but evoked the pride which every Washingtonian must feel in the majesty of a great world capital, which our city is so surely developing.

In order that this splendid picture may have sometime a world-wide view (not that The Post's circulation is in any way restricted!), I think. The National Geographic should have a copy for republication in some future issue. READER.

Weather Vanes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There appears in The Post of January 16 an advertisement with this threat: "Gone With The Wind" will not be shown anywhere except at advanced prices—at least until 1941.

I know two people will not see "Gone With The Wind" until 1941, or at least until the present prices have "Gone With The Protestations" which undoubtedly will accrue.

The movie industry is rich enough now, and this show of greed is obnoxious; and how can any self-respecting person even dare to pay such price for a screen play, when there are human beings in this city on these freezing nights asleep over gratings trying to keep warm?

Washington, Jan. 16.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: All of us who are proud of our great American heritage now once again raise our voices in an united and vigorous protest against the counter-American precepts, which under the guise of "entertainment" are being permitted to overflow this land of ours. I refer to the motion picture "Gone With The Wind." It is against the interests of the 130,000,000 people of this country. It englamours and makes a strong plea for racial hatreds, intolerance, minority persecutions and makes a mockery of civil liberties.

This picture is the modern counterpart of the renegade who has appeared at different and numerous times in our country's history with the purpose of destroying the foundations of our Government and betraying the people of our Nation. It makes a mockery of, and is a direct insult to the intelligence and sincerity of every American today.

We who love America and what it stands for, we who are fully aware of the harm and insidious corruption of that picture and understand the duty which becomes ours, say: That picture must not be shown! That picture must not be seen by any person who, true to our great American tradition, dedicates himself to the cause of democracy, liberty, tolerance and equality! That is the American way!

Babes And Newspapers

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of those slips that sometimes happen in newspaper offices appeared in The Post January 15.

On page 13, last column, an item appears reporting the proceedings of the Sunday night meeting on the subject of civil service at the Interior Department auditorium. Item bears this caption, "Moser Says Politics Ruin Civil Service."

On page 14 the same heading is noted. The text following is a review of a local production of the play, "Criminal at Large." This appears to be an example where a vital truth accidentally gains a proper label.

Barefoot Children?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read, not with pride but regret, your article in The Post of January 14 regarding Miss Lenroot having removed the picture of "The Barefoot Boy" from reports previous to the Conference on Children in a Democracy beginning January 18.

When looking at a picture of "The Barefoot Boy" I think of the first line, "Blessings on thee, little man," and others perhaps think further:

"With the sunshine on thy face" . . .
"Outward sunshine, inward joy" . . .
"Nature answers all he asks" . . .
"Part and parcel of her joy" . . .
"Every morn shall lead thee through
"Fresh baptisms of the dew" . . .
"All too soon these feet must hide
"In the prison cells of pride" . . .
"Happy if their track be found
"Never on forbidden ground;
"Happy if they sink not in
"Quick and treacherous sands of sin" . . .

I think if we read often the poem, "Our Master," by John Greenleaf Whittier, author of "The Barefoot Boy," more of us would be willing to—provide more children with shoes of their own size instead of the children being obliged to stay home from school or go only on the days when their mothers are not working, so as to wear their shoes.

"From my heart I give thee joy—"

Washington, Jan. 14.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Anent Miss Lenroot's statement in The Post of January 14 that children do not go barefoot any more, that is all too sadly true, but does not speak for improvement in the child's preparation for life by the acquiring of an enduring body. Though perhaps one may say that endurance is not the present-day requisite. Well, that may be true for an age of millennium, but not for today's struggle.

Does no one rise up to say how going barefoot puts into the human body, for all the rest of life, a sturdy quality of endurance and health not obtained by the shoe-wearer. For the soles of the feet are made by Nature, absorbent to take up from Mother Earth her electric, sun-bathed strength that is the basis of human as well as plant growth.

Loan To Finland

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am beginning to feel an acute attack of nausea coming on because of all this mealy-mouthed pussy-footing about lending the Finns some money.

If ever a race or nation deserved to survive, it is these sturdy Finns whose national integrity, tough physique, intelligence and fortitude demands the admiration of the world.

While President and Congress are passing the buck, the Finns need help, and to cap the climax we say with disgusting smugness that we will arrange something but "not for war materials." When every one knows that what they need is money for bullets and implements of war!

And what kind of precedent could this loan set? Aren't we free agents? If we lend to the Finns that is no reason that we have to lend to any one else, unless we see fit.

Let us give the money now. What they use it for is none of our business. The credit is good. And if the Russians think this is not neutral—so what? R. H. MORSE.

The Post Impressionist

The Snows Of Yesteryear

I read in the public prints the other day that at Mahwah, N. J., a man has invented a new snow shovel provided with a synthetic coating to which snow will not stick.

It took only a little filler like that to set me to shoveling snow again. I don't mean actually, of course. (Snow-shoveling is not a rite in Washington. I suppose there isn't a single bona-fide snow shovel in our block.) I mean I began to recall the old days when shoveling snow paths added considerably to the hiemal gloom of an adolescent schoolboy. I began to recall, and then I ran across some verses by Norma Lay, beginning—

Before the milkman's horse, like some old clock,
Had ticked the wintry dawn along the block
With steps dulled by a snow as light as chalk,

That, certainly, was the way it used to be. Now, the horse is gone, and the neighbor waits at least until after breakfast to give the municipal snow plow a chance.

Our house in up-State New York stood several hundred feet back from the street. One sidewalk led up (it was really up hill, and a wind-swept hill, at that) to the front door, and another to the side door. The side-door walk had to be done first, and finished before school, too.

Often by the time you had reached the street the snow had sifted the path nearly full again. Shoveling snow was something like washing dishes—so futile yet so everlastingly necessary. And what, we argued, was the sense of shoveling to the front door when, except for an unaccustomed peddler or two, everyone in winter used the side door? Well, said Father, it'll give you some exercise and, besides, it'll look better. So we shoveled.

The walk paralleling the street was covered, after a fashion, by the horse-drawn snow plow furnished by the town. But it happened that right in front of our house (it would be!) was a stretch where the snow always drifted adamant, as the wind swept it down over the knoll. As the snow plow never got quite to the bottom of this, there was nothing left to do but shovel it out manually, for the sake of the life and limbs of a few pedestrians who ventured as far as our part of town.

Snow, then, did not endear itself to me in any marked fashion, even considering a few winter sports that depended on it. I would have, had it been chronologically possible, hilariously concurred with Ogden Nash, who says:

Man is said to want but little here below,
And I have an idea that what he wants littlest of is snow.

And there was also ice. Nine times out of ten the pump would be frozen solid and would have to be released from its rigor mortis with a teakettle-ful of boiling-hot water poured around and into its glottis. Gasping, crackling, steaming, gurgling, it would finally give.

Sometimes, too, the creek would be frozen so tight that, without human succor, the cattle couldn't break through to drink. Cattle, it may be remembered, drink lots of water. I have seen a cow stand and drink just as a tour de force, to see how much water she could possibly hold; and after about half an hour walk away, bleary-eyed but happy. You either had to open up a fountain for the beasts through the ice or carry water to them from the house. (At this period in our agricultural history not all stables were steam-heated or provided with running water. I doubt, nowadays, whether a self-respecting cow would be seen drinking through a hole in the ice. She'd rather go on relief.)

A word, too, about snow shovels. Needless to say, they didn't have any synthetic coating to keep the snow from sticking to them. There were, of course, snow shovels and snow shovels. There were the dull, clumsy wooden affairs. And there were the wide, short-handled metal shovels that held more than a person could lift.

The kind I liked best (if I could be said to like any of them) was the long-handled, metal shovel with sloping sides, sharp, neat and efficent if manipulated along with a reasonable quantity of elbow grease. They had a professional ring, and it took a good man to wear one out.

I cannot with impunity, I fear, go any further without giving Stoddard King's poem, "To A Brand-New Snow Shovel." It is the zenith of all snow-shovel literature, domestic and foreign:

Your duty, while the snow still flies,
Will be to give me exercise
And, incidentally, you know,
To keep the sidewalks clear of snow.

I shall require of you a pledge
Not to curl upward at the edge.
I shall demand of you an oath
Not to get lost or broke, or both.

If neighbors take you as a loan,
Having no shovels of their own,
Remind them in some sort of way
That you did not leave home to stay.

Refuse, no matter what is said,
To serve small children as a sled;
Do not debase your free-born soul
By serving as a clothesline pole.

So let us make our winter's rounds
That I may lose a dozen pounds
And you may greet the springtime sun
Conscious of duty truly done!

Snow is something I'm afraid I can't get romantic about. It was only about three weeks ago that I was driving with my brother-in-law blithely along within sight of cold, blue Lake Erie. Suddenly we hit a patch of uncleared pavement, and before you could say J. R. we were shoveling ourselves and car out of a snow bank. While we were waiting for a truck to help pull us out I went over to a signboard and wrote the following hymn:

I think that everyone should know
I do not care for ice and snow;
I do not care for snow and ice,
I do not think that they are nice.
I can't tell which I like the least;
I hate them north and west and east.
In fact, I cannot tell you whether
I hate them singly or together.

Ellender's Protest

FOR RAW effrontery and sneering defiance of the bedraggled American ideal of popular government the protest of Senator Allen Ellender, of Louisiana against confirmation of Frank Murphy's appointment to the Supreme Court has had no equal since the last days of the Senator's late fuehrer, Huey P. Long, himself. The question of Murphy's fitness for the court need not be considered at all in this connection. He has been confirmed, anyway, and Ellender's protest, far from reflecting on the appointee, amounted to a tribute.

Ellender opposed Murphy's confirmation because the Department of Justice, under Murphy, had repudiated the disgraceful political bargain between the New Deal and the incorrigible thieves of Louisiana government and politics with whom Ellender had closely associated and collaborated for years. Murphy created a Federal receivership of a State which had drifted into civic and political bankruptcy. The Attorney General himself had not been a party to the second Louisiana purchase and refused to be bound by its terms.

Therefore, when a New Orleans newspaper dug up evidence of new rottenness in the State government, Murphy moved in along the same lines of attack that have been followed in Kansas City and Atlantic City.

State's Situation Close To Anarchy

THE GANG which Ellender himself served as speaker of the Lower House of the Louisiana Legislature and as United States Senator in Washington has been thrown into confusion and many of its members have been thrown into prison, where they, and others still at large, belong.

"I do not want to believe that the head of the Department of Justice is aware of how his assistants are misusing their sacred trust," he said in a telegram to the Senate Judiciary Committee. "These tactics are nothing short of persecution, and are intended to intimidate the citizens of a sovereign State."

Now, unfortunately, there may be something to what Ellender says about sovereignty, but, more unfortunately, his gang has created a situation so close to anarchy in Louisiana that the national authority had to move in. A State has certain responsibilities attending the privilege of Statehood.

If a State simply collapses, as Louisiana was on the point of doing the other States are endangered. It has been held and by now conceded that if a State is unable to care for its poverty and unemployment the Federal Government has a right and, as Senator Ellender has said, a duty to intervene.

State Institutions Were Graft Source

THE SAME theory would justify the intervention of the Department of Justice to do work which crooked judges and prosecutors of the State court could not be trusted to do. And Louisiana, under the mob of which Ellender was a member and to which he had given important service, was not really a State at all. The gang had stolen from every public treasury, from the township up to the Federal; they had robbed the State University, corrupted the education of the students with their foul contempt for the American form of government, and had even chiseled money from the lunatics and the sick poor for "testimonial" contributions to grafters in office and out.

The mental picture of Ellender siting on his puppet throne as speaker of the State house of representatives in the sessions when Huey was abolishing popular government and the right of citizens to inspect the State's financial records, will not be forgotten by anyone who saw him there. He said nothing against persecution and intimidation of the citizens of a sovereign State then, and he owes his job in the United States Senate to the very thieves whom he has the gall to depict as victims of oppression after they have robbed the State into destitution and made junk of the liberties of the people.

Resignation Asked As Effective Rebuke

MURPHY'S speech in New York last Sunday is a good reply to Ellender and a reminder to the people of Chicago as well as those of Louisiana.

"We need, somehow, to erect safeguards that will protect the public service from corruption," he said. "Don't be so cynical as to believe that there must be corruption or a measure of it in municipal and State and Federal governments. It doesn't need to be at all."

If Ellender really wished to serve the cause of good and decent government he could find no more effective rebuke to its enemies than to resign from the United States Senate as a repudiation of the kind of politics and the type of public enemies who sent him there.

Roulette With Destiny

THE ACTION of the United States Congress in the matter of the loan to Finland is simply incredible.

In one of the most critical moments of history Congress has chosen to behave with supreme frivolity. In a moment when every small neutral in Europe is trembling in fear of an extension of undeclared war; when all Scandinavia fears a break through of the Russian armies, and when Holland and Belgium fear an assault from Germany, the world's greatest neutral has slapped Finland's face in the most ostentatious way and in view of the whole earth.

And it has done so after we have led Finland on. Throughout the country there have been verbal and substantial expressions of American sympathy for Finland's cause. An outraged sense of decency has demanded that we sever relations with Soviet Russia. Governors, mayors, organized labor, and a former President of the United States—men of all parties and views except one, the Communists—have been raising money for Finnish relief and expressing sympathy for the Finnish cause.

Stalin's Greatest Bloodless Victory

FINLAND WOULD never have applied for a loan had there been the slightest indication that it would be refused. The refusal is a staggering political blow. It is the greatest bloodless victory that Stalin has had thus far. It is, at the same time, aid and assistance to the most immoderate forces in Germany. The moderates have been trying to stay Hitler's hand by telling him that another aggression against a neutral state would outrage all neutral countries, particularly the United States.

Now the Congress has given notice that our outrage will only be expressed in sending a handsome wreath to the funeral, bearing the inscription, "He was an upright man and paid his debts."

We will collect money from individuals to feed the innocent neutral victims of the Russian or German steam roller. Millions for bandages and food, but not one cent for a gun with which to defend yourself.

Save your money, friends. Dead men don't eat.

WE MUST BRING ourselves to realize that every action taken by the United States Government today has positive diplomatic and political effects, outside and inside the United States.

The international effect of Congress' refusal to distinguish between declared wars among great powers and undeclared assaults on neutrals is to strengthen revolutionary gangsterism all over the world outside this country and inside it, as well.

The Communist Daily Worker, the mouthpiece of the Soviet government published right in New York and distributed to American workers, is jubilant this morning. Congress in its interpretation has helped refuse finance aggression against the Soviet Union!

The Daily Worker is much more clear-sighted than the United States Congress. It is right that this is a political victory for Russia and communism. The Daily Worker at least knows that the European struggle is of terrific revolutionary implications. The gangster revolutions, Communist and Nazi, who intend to build their new world on the complete destruction of the existing civilization make war not only with guns but with the spreading of confusion, defeatism and lies. It is as great a victory for them as a captured town. Every indication of feebleness, wavering, and, above all, every indication of fear in any democracy, and especially at this moment among the neutrals, is received by them as a triumph for their policy.

Subversive Groups In U. S. Rejoice

DOES THE American Congress not know that the very subversive elements for the investigation of which Congress has already given millions to the Dies Committee, are all rejoicing today?

The essential propaganda of the Christian Front and the Communist Party and the German-American Bund, whose leaders are, at this moment, under indictment or already condemned for fraud or planned violence, is that there are no issues in Europe that concern America, and that all who say there are, are war-mongering profiteers.

It is of no concern of ours, according to them, whether Finland, Sweden, Norway, Holland, Switzerland, Belgium—small nations but solid, solvent nations embodying as deep a western culture as exists—are cynically erased off the map tomorrow!

For in the welter of destruction and despair that will follow such collapse the gangster with the gun will be the sole rallying point! Meanwhile, in the United States, a bland and complacent feeling of security and isolation will have been created. The distinctions between right and wrong, between aggression and defense, between civilization and barbarism, will have been broken down. "If we lend money to the Finns, we shall be dragged into war." must be put alongside Earl Browder's statement before the Dies Committee that he would try to make a civil war in the United States if this country were ever in hostilities with the Soviet Union!

DOES NOT the Congress see the connections between these things?

Does not the Congress know that inside Germany those who want to get rid of the gangsters and make a decent European place in which Germany and France and England and the small states can live again will be in despair today, hearing the news that the United States considers in fact, if not in platitude, that Finland and Soviet Russia have an equal case and an equal right to our political and financial support?

And where is the consistency in our policy? We refuse to recognize territorial changes brought about by force. We do not recognize Manchukuo or the Bohemian-Moravian state carved by Germany out of Czechoslovakia. We stand for the sanctity of treaties and the rule of international law. We have exacted from the nations of the world a solemn pledge not to resort to war as an instrument of national policy. We have lent money to China and refused to apply the neutrality act in the Far East. We have—in our own words—stood for order and recognition of law.

But if we turn down the loan to Finland, we shall stand for international anarchy, and hope that by repressive measures at home we can stop it from spreading here—while we give notice to the world that the United States is scared.

Will We Be Safe In This Attitude?

THERE SEEMS to be a wish to make the American national symbol the three monkeys in a row, one with his eyes closed, another with his mouth muffled, another with his ears stopped up. See not, speak not, hear not, and we shall be safe!

No, we shall not. We shall not be safe if for want of arms the Finns give way and the northern states are overrun. We shall not be safer if in utter contempt of the world's greatest neutral the forces of destruction break through the low countries. We shall not be safer if in the few last strongholds of freedom and democracy the common man feels that he is risking his life for a lost cause—a whimsical gesture against "the inevitable stream of history."

Perhaps the future belongs to the gangsters, as they so confidently believe. Perhaps theirs is the truer morality. For they have at least the primary virtue—courage.

But this time I think Congress has made a mistake. It is wrong in gauging public opinion. The American people want to send substantial help to Finland with the object of helping Finland and all the other neutrals resist invasion. The Gallup Polls show it. Conversation with any man you speak to in the street shows it. The people have a far better instinct than Congress has. They know that the earth is round and that if this anarchy spreads we shall suffer.

The behavior of Congress indicates, however, that the Nation is at present without leadership and without policy. The party leadership has collapsed. The Republicans are not following any one and neither are the Democrats. There is no direction in foreign policy. Congress is not accepting the views of the Department of State. We are not even being governed by Gallup polls—that curious form of direct democracy that has emerged. We are not, in short, being governed or being allowed to govern ourselves.

What happens from day to day depends upon how Senators and Congressmen have laid their bets on the political roulette wheels. This preposterous irresponsibility sews confusion abroad, breaks down the confidence of this Nation and leaves us open to intermittent and inexplicable waves of fear.

This is unfortunate. We are not behaving like ourselves.

A Basis For Peace

By Ernest K. Lindley

President Ponders New Appeal

THE PRESIDENT'S mind is dwelling on the possibility of an appeal for peace in Europe. If a suitable opening presents itself the President's attempt at intercession will probably come before March 1. As a preliminary, he is considering the appointment, within the next few weeks, of an Ambassador to Germany.

The President's preoccupation with affairs abroad is well known to all who have frequent contact with him. It has been increasingly apparent since the Munich crisis, and for almost a year it has been intense. One of his advisers said recently, in a half-dispirited moment: "His mind is so filled with affairs abroad that there is hardly a cranny left where thoughts of home affairs can lodge."

No problem has intrigued the mind of the President more than the hitherto insoluble one of finding the basis for a permanent peace in Europe. It fascinated him before the present war broke out and, of course, since then it has doubly attracted him. He has various experts and idea-men working on the question.

Enduring Peace In Europe Sought

WHEN THE PRESIDENT sent his Christmas message to the Pope, and sought the aid of other religious leaders and simultaneously announced that he was sending Myron C. Taylor as his "personal representative" to the Vatican, he still seemed to have in mind the terms of an enduring European peace rather than early intercession in the current war. He knew that Mr. Taylor, on account of his health, would not be able to go to Rome before February, and perhaps not until March.

The Christmas actions of the President neatly parried the demands on him for a holiday effort to bring about a cessation of hostilities in Europe. It served other purposes, including perhaps the further weakening of Italian ties to Germany. In conversations with close advisers the President himself spoke of his actions as a step toward a closer alliance of the moral forces opposed to Nazi and Soviet aggression, and favoring an ultimately just peace settlement.

Since Christmas, however, the President seems to have shifted the emphasis somewhat. He seems to be stressing the terms of peace a little less and the desirability of early intercession a little more. This is the impression of several persons who have talked with him, including more than one member of his cabinet. During the last several cabinet meetings foreign affairs, and especially the possibility of a peace appeal to Europe, have held the stage almost to the total exclusion of domestic questions.

Not Interested In Temporary Truce

IT IS A SHIFT of emphasis—no more. The President is still interested in peace—not a temporary truce. But he seems to have become impressed increasingly with the argument that there may be a better chance of obtaining a reasonable and workable peace before, rather than after, the war has spread further and become more furious.

For weeks reports have been coming from Germany that a great Nazi offensive in the west, by air and by sea, and perhaps by land, will be launched early in March.

These reports seem to have made an impression in France and Great Britain. Lord Lothian, British Ambassador to the United States, predicted such an offensive in his recent speech in Chicago. Prime Minister Chamberlain warned Parliament that more trying days lay shortly ahead.

The reliability of these reports is doubted by some observers in Washington. Some guess that the Nazis will move first into Scandinavia or the Balkans, in combination with the Russians. Some guess that the offensive in the west will come this winter, while the canals of Holland and Belgium are frozen. Some guess that the Nazis will try to sit out the blockade instead of consuming vast quantities of materials in a great offensive.

President Seeks Favorable Opening

THE PRESIDENT has heard all of these conjectures and the data which support them. The war may spread and become fiercer before he sees an opening for his intercession. But in recent conversations he has shown more sympathy than he did before Christmas with the argument that, as the European war becomes more destructive, of property and of human beings, it will become more difficult to obtain anything but a Carthaginian peace, imposed by the victors, whoever they may be, on the vanquished.

The opening for which the President is searching may not materialize. Indeed, he has not made clear what he would regard as a suitable opening. But his mind is focussed on the possibilities of intercession in Europe. He has left some of his recent callers with the firm conviction that if he can find so much as a crevice he will put his finger into it, in behalf of peace, before another six weeks have passed.

Kefauver to Tell Of 3 Confederates

Representative Kefauver, of Tennessee, will eulogise Robert E. Lee, Stonewall Jackson and the scientist, Matthew Fontaine Maury, at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow in Confederate Memorial Hall, 1322 Vermont avenue northwest.

The meeting is sponsored by Camp 171, United Confederate Veterans; D. C. and Maryland Divison, Sons of Confederate Veterans; D. C. Division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, and Children of the Confederacy.

J. C. Lennendecker's painting of Gen. Lee astride his horse, Traveler, will be presented to the organizations by W. C. Geleng, Washington manager of the Curtis Publishing Co. Maj. W. F. Van Swearingen will preside. There will be a musical program and informal reception.

Senate Acts to Acquire Patrick Henry Home

The Senate completed Congressional action yesterday on a bill (S. 1919) authorizing the acquisition of Red Hill, birthplace of Patrick Henry, in Charlotte County, Va., for establishment as a national monument.

Acquisition would be subject to future appropriation. The Senate accepted, at the request of Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, a House amendment reducing the cost limit from $125,000 to $100,000.

29 Girl Scouts To Get Awards

Victor Keeler, field commissioner of Washington Boy Scouts, will present Junior Red Cross first-aid certificates to 29 Girl Scouts from six Southwest troops at 10 a. m. tomorrow at the Hine Junior High School, Seventh and C streets southeast.

"America's finest ambulance," as shown at the New York World's Fair, will be inspected after the exercises by Keeler, his son, Victor, jr., and two other Eagle Scouts.

The Boy Scouts, the instructor, the captain, lieutenants, and troop committee chairman will be entertained at a luncheon by six Girl Scouts of Troop 114.

'Americans Over 40' To Hear Karl Karsten

"Americans Over Forty"—an organization "offering no synthetic panaceas for ending unemployment—will hear Karl Karsten, economist, at its regular meeting at 8 o'clock tonight at Epiphany Parish House, 1317 G street northwest.

The organization of the local and national chapters will be completed and membership charters closed at the meeting. Reports will be made on a plan of cooperation with the American Association of University Women and for a weekly program of broadcasts. William Downs is president of the organization.

Finland And The Realities

THE DISCUSSION precipitated by President Roosevelt's timid suggestion that Congress approve a loan to Finland for the "purchase of agricultural surpluses and manufactured products, not including implements of war," reveals a widespread desire to fly headlong from reality.

The President's note was itself an unrealistic document. It set up a distinction between "agricultural surpluses and manufactured goods" on the one hand and "implements of war" on the other which has as little relation to existing circumstances as Col. Lindbergh's proposal that we permit the sale of "defensive" weapons but prohibit the sale of "offensive" arms.

Food today happens to be as much a munition of war as artillery shells. A belligerent nation can do as little without the one as without the other. That is why in the application of their principal instrument of warfare—the blockade—the Allies are as eager to prevent Germany from getting butter as to keep her from getting guns—or the raw materials out of which guns are made.

WERE FINLAND a highly industrialized nation—such as Belgium, to cite another small country—she might be able to carry on her struggle against Russia without having to import much in the way of arms and munitions. Her principal need, then, would be food and raw materials. And in providing her with food we would be helping her to fight.

Finland happens to be an agricultural country. Undoubtedly she needs food; but she needs implements of war far more. She could get all the food in the world and yet lose the war. She has a fighting chance to win the war or at least make Russia's imperialistic venture extremely costly if she is quickly supplied with the kind of aid she particularly needs. And despite her remarkable success in thus far holding up the Russian steam roller it is foolish to assume that she will be able to do so indefinitely.

We have it on no less authority than Marshal Mannerheim, commander in chief of the Finnish armies, that she may not be able to do so. In an interview with the Paris Soir the marshal admitted that it would be difficult for Finland to hold out unless outside aid was increased.

FINLAND'S special needs do not, however, alter the fact that if it is wrong for the United States to lend her money for the purchase of arms it is equally wrong to lend her money for the purchase of "agricultural surpluses." And, to be perfectly logical, if there is any danger in rendering Finland any official assistance, the danger also exists in raising private funds for her relief.

Totalitarian nations recognize no difference between "private" and "public" within their own territories and they tend to be blind to such distinctions abroad.

TIMID as President Roosevelt's proposal is, however, it had at least the great merit of resting on the assumption that the United States cannot be unmindful of Finland's plight; that in one way or another we have a stake in the outcome.

This can hardly be said of the arguments advanced by some of the critics of his plan. They assume that a Finnish loan would first and foremost be an exercise in generosity, largesse from a rich uncle to a hard-pressed but decent nephew who has lived soberly, punctiliously paid his debts, but now finds himself in a difficult situation not of his making.

It is assumed, in other words, that while the plight of Finland is regrettable and her conduct worthy of praise it has nothing whatever to do with the interests of the United States. And because a loan to Finland might, at some conceivable time in the future, set the precedent for a loan to be asked on behalf of less worthy debtors, we must refuse to open our purse to the Finns, however much our hearts bleed for them.

IT WOULD BE fine for the United States if what happened in Finland or on the Western Front had no basic relation to our present and future welfare. Unhappily that is not the case. And the hard-boiled gentlemen who have the defense of the United States in their keeping offer very decided proof of this fact.

Appearing before the House Naval Affairs Committee, Admiral Stark, chief of naval operations, suggested that a very considerable expansion of our naval establishment is in order. And this suggested increase in naval expenditures, be it noted, would follow an already sharp rise in appropriations for the Navy, concurrent with a marked increase in the appropriations for the Army as well.

The theory behind this suggestion for the addition of a large number of new naval vessels is that the United States cannot afford to assume that the Allies will win the war. If they could be sure of that, there would be no need to spend large sums of money for naval purposes at a time when economy is so much the order of the day. We have nothing to fear from an Allied victory. On the contrary, such a victory would very considerably ease the situation for us. We have, on the other hand, much to fear from an Allied defeat, one inevitable consequence of which would be the destruction of British sea power.

IT WAS BASICALLY this consideration which led Congress at the special session to revise the neutrality act to permit the sale, on a cash-and-carry basis, of arms, munitions and implements of war to the Allies. In doing so we limited our involvement in the present war to economic assistance that could be bought and paid for and despite the alarms of the embargo bloc, the result of the action of Congress was not to bring us closer to entry into the war but to make our peace position more secure.

The Finnish bastion is, geographically, more remote, so far as the United States is concerned, than British sea power. But we should be making a very sorry mistake if we failed to see that in stemming however temporarily, the tide of aggressive totalitarianism in Europe, Finland is at long range contributing to our safety and our welfare and the welfare of all other neutrals as well.

Insanity's 'Rip Van Winkles,' Wakened, Stir Hope of Cure

Cases Averaging 20 Years Show Progress Under New Intense Treatment; Success May Revise View of Advanced Dementia

By Francis E. Carey,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Boston, Jan. 18.—The awakening of "Rip Van Winkles" among the insane—dementia praecox sufferers who had "slumbered" for 20 years—has brought new evidence that the advanced disease may be curable, a Boston psychiatrist said tonight.

Dr. Kenneth J. Tillotson said the progress was made in the first long-term tests of a new "total-push" method of treatment, designed to "push" patients out of their realm of hallucination and phantasy, and institute normal, social habits.

Declaring the method included occupational therapy as well as psychological and physiological pressure in a "more intense form" than previously attempted, Tillotson said in an interview:

"The results of this therapy during 15 months with 67 patients, including a dozen who have been in mental hospitals for an average of 20 years, strongly indicate that we have grounds for revising previously held ideas of advanced dementia praecox—namely, that patients in the chronic stages could not be called back from their worlds of unreality and phantasy."

Tillotson, psychiatrist in chief of McLean Hospital, in Waverley, Mass., reported his findings to the Boston Society of Psychiatry and Neurology. He said that of 38 patients in the chronic group (under hospitalization from 6 to more than 20 years) only five failed to show improvement during the treatment.

Court Opposes Legal Aid by Auto Association

Justice Jennings Bailey yesterday declared the claim adjustment bureau of the American Automobile Association to be an unauthorized practice of law.

Richard D. Merrick, chairman of the District Bar Association committee on unauthorized practice of the law, started action against the A. A. A. several years ago.

Justice Bailey also found improper the practice of A. A. A. emloyes of filling out blank forms for use in the Small Claims division of the Municipal Court.

The court, however, approved the functions of the A. A. A. of obtaining attorneys for its members, obtaining the names and addresses of witnesses to accidents and of arranging for bail for members arrested on traffic charges.

Turkey Votes Decree Power in Case of War

Ankara, Turkey, Jan. 18 (AP).—The national assembly voted decree powers for the government today for use if war threatens.

The measure requires national service by both sexes and permits requisition of transportation and industrial facilities and rationing of goods or food.

The assembly also approved a special military appropriation of $20,000,000, raising the total of military expenditures to $340,000,000.

Pearl White's Estate Set at $369,067

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Pearl White, star of the old movie serial, "Perils of Pauline," left a net estate of $369,067 when she died in Paris last August 4, a State tax appraisal filed today showed. Her jewelry alone brought $49,106 at auction.

Aboard Resort Train

The excitement and confusion at Penn Station . . . "See what track it's on, Elmer." . . . "Porter, don't forget to count the bags." . . . "Are you sure you have the trunk keys?" . . . "I distinctly remember giving the tickets to you, John." . . .

The indignant look on the face of the woman who paid $8 for a container in which to carry her Pomeranian aboard and discovers a man getting aboard with a Great Dane on leash without any argument with the trainmen . . . "Good-by, mommer." . . . "Take care of yourself, Milton." . . . "Send us a card."

The beauty of Washington in a snowstorm. . . . The spell of the Capitol dome aglow against the white trees in the late dusk. . . . The Potomac . . . Quantico . . . Fredericksburg . . . Richmond . . . Petersburg . . . Countless towns bringing back the Civil War days . . . The decision to hit the hay early . . . "In which bag did I put those pajamas, anyhow?" . . . The realization that the railroads, despite all inventions and innovations, still don't know how to pull into or out of a station without hurling everybody out of bed. . . . Boy, do those engineers like to play Snap-the-Whip!

The decision to take a sleeping powder. . . . The engineer's decision to show you that it makes no difference what you take.

The first peek out of the window and the realization that all the scenery between North Carolina and most of Florida, all cut to one pattern . . . Parched fields . . . swamps . . . thousands of trees with tin pots attached to catch the turpentine . . . skinny cattle . . . the rickety log cabins askew in the fields, and looking 50 per cent worse than anything Harriet Beecher Stowe ever described . . . Has anybody ever delivered a quart of paint below Savannah? . . . Is there a law against new shingles throughout the Southland? . . . Is it illegal to repair a porch? . . . Does a paint brush come under the head of a concealed weapon below the Mason-Dixon?

The signs along the road "Good and Bad Furniture," . . . "Slim's Gas Station," . . . "Bar-B-Q." . . . "30 Miles to Kamp Komfort," . . . "Alligator Farm." . . . The strangest sight on the whole trip: a fat cow, a native in a blue suit and white collar, a little girl with her shoes on and a flivver without one door missing.

Flashes from the train window: Route A and the worn looking auto tourist who swallowed the story it was a delightful trip from New England by auto . . . White egrets rising from the lake country . . . Buzzards over a field . . . A particularly dilapidated skimpy cabin in the pines and the thought how dismal it looks until you see—suddenly—in the doorway a mother with a babe in arms . . . The father, joining the pair and waving, too. . . . And the smiles you realize are so much more genuine than those on the mugs of the de luxe passengers, who, as the saying is, have everything.

Futility: Spanish moss trying to win a battle with the steel telephone wires. . . . The first orange grove, its yellow fruit hitting the eye like a sudden flash of diamonds in a dog wagon. . . . A sudden change to tropical scenery . . . coconut palms . . . poinsettia bushes . . . oleander covered cottages. . . . West Palm Beach and the industrialists at the station, trying to look carefree but wondering what Roosevelt will do next. . . . Miami. . . . Racing extra!. . . . Racing extra! . . . Reeve Lewis, Attorney and Clubman, Dies

Distinguished Self As Athlete in Early Days of D. C. Sports

Reeve Lewis, patent attorney and Washington club man, died here yesterday after an illness of nearly two years. He was 67.

A native Washingtonian, Mr. Lewis was born in the 1600 block of Park road July 18, 1872. He was the son of Joseph Coates Lewis and Mary Fulton Lewis.

Mr. Lewis was educated in the public schools of the District, and in the Columbian (now George Washington) University.

One of Club's Founders

He was one of the founders of the Columbia Country Club, and at the turn of the century was one of Washington's best known amateur athletes. He distinguished himself particularly at golf and rowing.

Graduating with the degree of bachelor of laws in 1894, he continued his studies and received the degrees of master of law and master of patent law in 1897. He was admitted to the local Supreme Court bar in 1894, to the bar of the Court of Appeals in 1900, to the bar of the Supreme Court of the United States in 1902, of the Circuit Court of Appeals in 1917, and to the United States Court of Claims in 1912.

He was admitted to practice before the Patent Office in 1897.

Son Succeeds Him

Lewis was married in 1900 to Miss Maria Matfield, of Chihuahua, Mexico, and they had one son, Reeve Lewis 4th, who succeeds his father in the firm of Lewis and Mauro.

Besides being survived by his wife and son, he is also survived by an older brother, Fulton Lewis.

He was a member of the Chevy Chase Club, Metropolitan Club, University Club, and the Lawyers Club.

Services will be tomorrow morning at St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church, at 11 a. m.

For many years, Lewis made his home in Bancroft place, but since his illness, his family has been residing at 1911 R street northwest. He also maintained a summer residence at Bass Rocks, near Gloucester, Mass.

'Help Us or We Perish,' Finns Appeal to U.S.

DR. EDMUND A. WALSH

The Rev. Dr. Edmund A. Walsh last night announced that latest reports from F. Dorsey Stephens, Finnish representative of the Finnish Relief Fund, indicate that "upwards of 1,000,000 persons in Finland—men too old to fight and women and children—have been driven from their homes in subzero weather without adequate clothing and little or no nourishing food."

Dr. Walsh, chairman of the fund's Washington unit, pointed out that every cent paid for tickets to the benefit performance of "Gone With the Wind" at Loew's Palace, January 27, will be sent immediately to Finland for relief.

As fast as payment is received the receipts are forwarded to Helsinki through the fund's national headquarters, Dr. Walsh asserted. He said more than 40 per cent of the 2,300 tickets had been sold in the first four days of public sale.

"The Finnish government," he declared, "is doing everything possible with the limited money at its command to care for these homeless refugees, but insufficient funds make it impossible to give them the necessary care.

"While the fund has already sent more than $800,000 to the Civilian Relief Fund Committee in Helsinki, Mr. Stephens says the Finns are in dire need and additional funds must be forthcoming immediately if untold suffering is to be prevented.

"The Finns are performing a miracle of heroism and military genius against a ruthless adversary who outnumbers them 50 to 1, but these hundreds of thousands who are routed from their homes in subzero weather send to you and me their prayer: 'Help us or we perish.'"

Tickets for the benefit performance of "Gone With the Wind," priced at $3, $5 and $10, are on sale at the Carlton, Shoreham, Wardman Park, Willard, Mayflower and Washington Hotels and at the Finnish Relief Fund office in the Transportation Building.

Nation Floods Capital With Birthday Dimes

The response of the country to the March of Dimes is "colossal," Commissionere George E. Allen told the President yesterday.

"We've collected so far $30,000, which is six times as much as we collected at this time last year," Allen said. He is chairman of the March of Dimes campaign.

With the Commissioner were Keith Morgan, national chairman of the committee for the celebration of the President's Birthday, and Col. D. Walker Wear, assistant national chairman.

All dimes sent to the President are forwarded to the District Building for handling. Special envelopes for dimes have been sent all over the Nation and many come back with coins of higher denomination and even bills.

Summing up the campaign, Morgan said in all the States "our workers are starting out to raise sufficient money to enable the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis to carry on the declared war to save children—not to destroy children."

"We believe the campaign will succeed because the people of the country realize the importance of a national fight against this crippling disease," he said.

Commissioner Allen said more than 10,000 celebrations will be held January 30, the President's fifty-eighth birthday. He explained that after the money is taken from envelopes, the amount is recorded and finally the total amount from each State and county is determined. One-half of the March of Dimes proceeds is returned to the county for local work in combating the disease.

Plant Detective Proves Trees Stay Much the Same

Encouraging progress on a "plant detective" job, which is one of the most painstaking assignments ever undertaken by science, was reported yesterday by the Smithsonian Institution.

After ten years of patient sleuthing, Dr. Roland W. Brown, Geological Survey and Smithsonian paleobotanist, has uncovered proof that certain species of trees living today are scarcely different from their ancestors of 80,000,000 years ago.

Dr. Brown's job consisted of searching for fossilized seed impressions in rock throughout the western United States and comparing their shapes with the seeds of a Japanese katsura tree on the lawn of the National Academy of Sciences Building. Likewise, fossilized and living leaves were matched.

"As a result of his investigation," said the Smithsonian's announcement, "he has reduced the 147 species to five, thrown new light on the extensions of the ancient woodland and furnished another clew as to its appearance in the days when the first singing birds appeared in its branches."

S.S.S. Tonic is the choice to increase the appetite...to boost energy

COUNTLESS thousands of men and women can testify to the benefits S.S.S. Tonic has brought them.

The facts are simple because of all conditions effecting the human body a low blood count is most deceptive. If you feel rundown . . . lack a keen appetite . . . have lost weight . . . don't give up until you restore those precious red-blood-cells back to normal.

S.S.S. Tonic may be just what you need to get you on the right road to health and happiness again.

In S.S.S. Tonic you go after the trouble in two ways . . . first you increase the appetite and better your stomach digestion—thus making better use of the food you eat—secondly, thin, weak, watery blood is made rich and red again thus giving you a boost in energy.

Try S.S.S. which any drug store can supply and no ethical dealer will suggest a substitute. The big 20 oz. size is a two week's treatment and represents a saving in the purchase price. (S.S.S. Co.

Chowder Is Among Indian's Contributions to Table

Monticello Slave Made Veal Croquettes

Cold roasted veal was made into croquettes by a Monticello slave at the home of Thomas Jefferson, and were called "Croquettes of Roasted Veal 'Arnette.'" They were made as follows:

Take cold roasted veal and chop it very fine. Put some butter in a saucepan with some chopped herbs and fry them a little. Add a spoonful of broth or water and when it is thick enough put in the veal for a little while, then take from the fire. Make into balls the size and shape of an egg. Let them become cold, dip into batter and bread crumbs and then fry.

One doesn't have to go native by eating chowder and gumbo with an Indian clam-shell spoon—made of a shapely shell, blanched, polished and fastened to the end of a conveniently curved stick—for these all-American dishes will be just as appealing served in attractive pottery dishes as shown in the picture above

Gumbo of Gulf Coast Is an Unmatched Dish

By The Post Food Editor.

CHOWDERS are the most American of soups. The word "chowder" was coined in New England, supposedly by Chinese navigators calling the Indian stews "chow." Pioneer housewives learned from squaws they found in residence when the Mayflower landed how to make succulent corn, bean, fish and seafood chowders.

The great gumbos of our Gulf Coast can't be matched by any other country. When made with crab, shrimp and oysters they become our native bouillabaisse, and most of them have oysters or oyster liquor as a prime ingredient, even when the meat is chicken, turkey, squirrel or rabbit.

Miss Bourgeois

Pioneer Classic

Miss Lizzie E. Bourgeois, 1806 Kilbourne place, wins the first award with her recipe for Shrimp, Oyster and Crab Gumbo, which she brought from New Orleans, the native ground for gumbo. Miss Bourgeois wins a prize of $3. Following is her winning recipe:

Shrimp, Oyster and Crab Gumbo

Scald and shell 2 pounds of fresh shrimp with boiling water. Into a skillet put 1 tablespoon of fat and brown 1 large finely chopped white onion. Into a heavy aluminum saucepan which will hold 3 quarts, place 2 tablespoons of fat. Heat well and fry to a golden brown 1½ pounds of fresh okra or 1 No. 2 can of okra. Stir constantly to prevent burning, this will require 10 to 12 minutes. Blend thoroughly with the fried onions, 1 No. 2 can of tomatoes, 1 finely chopped sprig of thyme and 1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley. Cook over a low flame for 3 minutes, stirring constantly. Add the shrimp and 1 can of crab flakes. Stir well. Season with salt and pepper. Put in 1 finely chopped bay leaf. Over this pour 1½ quarts of hot water and 1 quart of heated oyster liquor. Stir thoroughly and bring to a boil. Allow this to simmer for 45 minutes. Three minutes before serving put in two dozen oysters. Add desired seasonings. While the gumbo is simmering put 1 pound of rice to boil. To serve, place 2 tablespoons of boiled rice in each plate and over this pour the gumbo.

Nutmeg State Variety

A raging clam chowder controversy that has continued almost uninterruptedly in New England for generations, centers on the use of tomatoes as an ingredient in its preparation. Rhode Island and Connecticut housewives uphold the tomato—the rest of New England scorns it. Mrs. Blanche J. Oliver, 819 Richmond avenue, Silver Spring, sends in her version of New England Clam Chowder and wins the second award of $2. Following is Mrs. Oliver's recipe:

Mrs. Oliver

New England Chowder

Split the head of each clam (from 1 quart) so that it is open flat, and rinse in clam liquor to remove grit; remove the black cap. Separate the belly or soft part from the firm part, reserving about a cupful of the plumpest clams. With the thumb and forefinger, squeeze out the dark part of the bellies. Chop or grind the firm parts coarsely. Strain ½ half cup liquor. Fry out ¼ pound salt pork, diced, remove when crisp. Saute 1 large finely-sliced onion, add 3 medium-sized potatoes, sliced thin; ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, and saute slowly, stirring often for 10 minutes. Add the chopped clams and cook 20 minutes. Add the cleaned bellies and cook for a few minutes longer. If a scum forms, skim it off at once. When clams are tender, add 4 cups milk in which six salted crackers have been soaking, 2 tablespoons butter and place kettle at back of stove, or over low heat, and allow the chowder to flavor

An All-American

Veal blends with chicken and other ingredients to make a winning dish, the recipe being submitted by Mrs. Louis Harris, 216 Spruce avenue, Takoma Park, Md. Mrs. Harris wins a $1 award for this recipe. She also gives a very attractive manner in which to serve it. Her recipe follows:

Chicken Gumbo in Veal Fricassee

Cook a 2-pound chicken until tender in water to cover. Remove from fire and chop. Dice 1 pound veal and brown in 2 tablespoons butter. Remove veal and saute 1 cup canned mushrooms in layers in a casserole, sprinkling over each layer a little celery salt and onion salt—1½ teasopons altogether. Pour the chicken broth over all, dust with paprika and bake in a moderate oven, 375 degrees, for 40 minutes. Pipe potato roses over the top, brush them lightly with cream and place in oven until a light golden color. Put a stuffed olive in the center of each rose and serve hot.

Modern Classic

A modern version of chowder is the one developed by Miss Jean Frantz, 1623 Thirty-fifth street. This is a dish that is an excellent one to serve on cold days. For this recipe Miss Frantz wins a $1 award and the following is her winning recipe:

Miss Frantz

Hamburger Chili Chowder

Brown 1 pound hamburger in 2 tablespoons fat. As it browns add 3 medium-sized onions sliced thin, 1 cup diced celery and 2 cups shredded cabbage. Brown slightly. More than cover with water and let simmer slowly for ½ hour. Add a No. 2 can red kidney beans and 1 No. 2 can tomatoes. Season with salt and pepper and about 1 teaspoon chili powder. Use more or less chili powder according to taste. Cook slowly for ½ hour. Chili should be just medium thick. Serve in soup bowls.

Chef's Delight

Josefa A. McCormick wins a $1 award with his recipe for a Chicken Gumbo Superb. If his directions are followed a superb dish is sure to be the result. The following is the recipe:

Chicken Gumbo Superb

Grind ¼ pound breakfast ham and saute in 2 tablespoons butter, add first 1 small onion cut fine and 1 clove of garlic cut fine; next 3 tablespoons tomato puree. Cook 5 minutes by moderate heat. Add 2 cups okra cut up in small sections; then 1 teaspoon salt and a dash of pepper and cayenne. Pour into 2 quarts chicken stock (best is made from a hen) into a soup pot and add 1 cup diced potatoes and let simmer for ½ hour. When ready to serve, thicken with 1 teaspoon flour dissolved in water. Serves six.

Dried Peaches Afford Delicious Hot Pudding

Dried fruit such as peaches can be made into delicious food. A hot peach pudding is a splendid cold weather dish. Following is the recipe:

Hot Peach Pudding

Trim and wash 1 pound dried peaches, cover with 3 cups water and cook until tender; let cool and cut into pieces. Make a custard by sifting together 2-3 cup sugar, 1/16 teaspoon salt and 3 tablespoons flour. Add 2 well beaten eggs; mix well, add 3 cups hot milk while stirring. Cook and stir in a double boiler until thickened. Remove from the fire and add warm peach juice. Mix well, and add the warm peaches. Serve while warm.

Market Basket Is Coming Back In Popularity

Women Find They Can Save on Food, Get Better Items

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor.

AN ELABORATED version of the old-fashioned market basket is staging a comeback. Housewives of today are taking a leaf from the housewives of the early Twentieth Century and "going to market." It looks like the old-fashioned roast beef dinner, legs of mutton and family style meals are with us once more. With the styles following closely on those of the gay nineties, markets are crowded with wasp-waisted women. But for the parked motor cars, instead of the horse-and-buggy, the scene could well be a duplicate of an earlier period etching.

Martha Ellyn

According to a survey conducted by one of the leading publications in the food trade field, on household marketing habits, phone calls to groceries are diminishing. Women are taking greater interest in the selection of the food that goes into the home; figures show they are saving money by this practice.

New Products Flow In

By going to market one can almost keep apace of the new products constantly flowing from the laboratories. Many of the new food items are ready-prepared foods of home-like quality. One of the newest items is a canned macaroni with cheese sauce. All one has to do is heat it. It is worthy of a prominent place on the emergency shelf.

One of the 1940 meat products is a pork sausage. Pork sausages are not exactly news, but those made in dinner size, especially adapted for luncheons and dinners, that have been dipped or sprayed with fresh pineapple juice so that the casing is extra tender, are certainly news. You don't taste the pineapple juice, but you see the magic it performs when each link cuts at the touch of a fork.

For the Unexpected Guest

The unexpected guest is as sure to arrive as the monthly bills. But they can be a pleasure rather than an annoyance if one has a well-stocked emergency shelf. An emergency shelf is another reason for personal visits to the market. With notepaper and pencil it is well to plan some basic dinners for the unexpected guest that may be readily assembled from the emergency shelf. The following is given as an example of such a meal.

Basic Dinner for the Unexpected Guest

Consomme with Avacoda Cubes
Dinner Pork Sausages
Pineapple Slices
Macaroni with Cheese Sauce
Cress Salad
Hot Biscuits Date Pudding

Today's Social Notes

From the Truthtown Torch

Mr. and Mrs. Robertus Whittlebottom entertained approximately 100 guests over the week-end at their new country retreat "Hide Away."

With the Bachelors

The Truthtown Bachelors' Club will hold its annual Leap Year dance Friday night at the Pink Hunting Jacket Club. The group includes such noted men about town as Jack (Chuck) Weaver, real estate salesman and bon vivant; Marty Montmorency, advertising solicitor and society notable; George (Gorge) Fullertap Government employe and gourmet; Col. Maxmillian Witchhazel, retired National Guard officer and raconteur; Harrington Gadfly, press agent and cosmopolite; and Arthur (Art) Shaker, drug store employe and boulevardier.

New Career

Mrs. Myron Musher is starting a movement to establish a home for pet dogs of alien ancestry and unfashionable lineage. Many of Mrs. Musher's friends recently have found themselves socially embarrassed by owning Dobermann Pinschers, Schnauzers, dachshunds, Russian wolf hounds, etc. and have been unable to take their pets for airings except at night. Mrs. Musher also has many prospective clients from among persons who own pets that have lived past the changes in dog styles. She will seek some sequestered country location for her refuge.

'Belles' Reunion

Among those seen at Mrs. Buffington Birdhaven's open house—Mrs. Broadhurst Chubb, leading belle of the 1935 crop of debutantes; Mrs. Maynard Chitterton, who as "Babs" Plusher was a great belle of Detroit; Mrs. Reginald Van Tinsel, one of Gotham's favorite belles; the Countess Pimento, celebrated Continental belle; Mrs. Rutherford Racy, No. 1 belle of the 1935 social season; Mrs. Chett Toddy, who as Marjorie Duffer was a famous belle of Centerville, Nebr.; Mrs. Morriston Clack, a famed belle of New Orleans; Mrs. Christopher Moss, a belle of old Charleston, and Mrs. Adam Stalactite, once the toast of old Virginia.

The Gargantuans

". . . and this is Mrs. Keener—of course you've heard of Keener & Keener the big lawyers? . . . well, that's her husband . . . and this is Mrs. Pelf—Mrs. Chauncey Pelf, you know, her husband's a big banker here . . . Oh, and I do want you to know Mrs. Carver—now this is Mrs. Dr.—I mean this is Dr. Rutherford Carver's wife, you know, the big surgeon . . . and of course you know Mrs. Spieler—Oh you don't! Why Dr. Spieler's one of our biggest preachers here . . . and now I want to introduce you to Mrs. John Q. R. Chase—you know, the big fox hunting people . . . and this is Mrs. Horatio Shrink, the wife of the big writer—why Mrs. Shrink, he is TOO a big writer! You oughtn't to be so modest . . . Oh, and you haven't met Mrs. Steppit Van Cann! Now this is the wife of—Oh I beg pardon Mrs. Van Cann! What I mean is, Mrs. Van Cann WAS the wife of the big chain grocery man . . . and this is Miss Euphemia Portleigh—now her husband—Oh beg pardon Miss Portleigh! I forgot! Well anyway, Miss Portleigh is one of our very biggest women—"

Jewelry Pick-ups

Rare and fanciful touches of jewelry are assured tonics for winter dresses that have been worn to death by now. These need not be costly gems either—but imagination and sparkle must go into the selection of just the right accent for the mid-winter doldrums.. Here are two such selections. The girl at left is enmeshed in a silvery fishnet edged with miniature cork-flats and filled with brilliant fish, shells, bits of coral and everything but Old Man River himself. A scintillating bib for plain black daytime dresses as well as for evening prints. Aquamarine life again appears above as a necklace of sputtering crystal-like fish, spouting pearl bubbles all the way up the colored cord. Both rollicking bits of costume jewelry were designed for the popular Castlecliff collection by witty Clifford Furst

Long-Suffering New York Subway Riders Cheer Man Who Hit Guard; Bette Davis Reported Coming to Broadway in a Play

New York, Jan. 18.

ONE OF the chief miseries of life in our city is subway riding at the rush hours, which occur on the way to work in the morning and when returning to the little home after business. I doubt that a single citizen who rides these underground plummets has not wanted more than once to take a vicious swipe at the subway guard who pushes him by main strength into the car.

Alice Hughes

Now it has happened! The avenger, who will go down in history is Mr. John Brooks, who labors daily in the financial district and travels back and forth each day on our foul and evil-smelling subway. At last, after many years, he reached the end of his patience and received one too many pushes from the so-called guardians of order in the subway. Jammed into his car, he drew back a mighty right and let the man in blue, Mr. Matthew Walsh, have it square on the nose.

Even subway attendants have feelings, to our surprise. So Mr. Matthew Walsh summoned a policeman and had the suffering Mr. Brooks carted to the hoosegow, where he faced a judge. The court was sympathetic, but the law had its way. The man in the black robe received an instantaneous plea of guilty, which he accepted, and through he found Mr. Brooks guilty, he suspended his sentence. Whereupon New York's hero went into the night a free man, though with a stain on his record. The embattled Mr. Brooks had only done what thousands of citizens have yearned to do for many years. No doubt some sort of medal will be struck off in his honor for taking a poke at a subway guard and long-sufferin citizens are cheering mightily for Mr. Brooks.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN:

The rumor that Bette Davis is headed our way before the end of the theatrical season to do a play is getting stronger every day—and this, in spite of the fact that her motion picture bosses are doing their utmost to keep her in Hollywood.

The Spanish dancer named Argentinita is one of the sensations of the winter dance events. It is now realized by local critics that she is a wondrous performer of her type, and it is odd to realize that in 1928 this same performer laid an enormous egg during her first appearance in New York.

I wonder if you remember the cute little girl with the doll face who appeared in "Our Gang" comedies 13 years ago? She is in our town right now, at 17, and still extraordinarily pretty. Studying voice and about to make her debut with the Municipal Opera Association, she now oddly hates the movies.

THE LEADING paradox of the week fell to the lot of Councilman Clinton Harrison, who lives just across the river in Jersey. His pet project is advocating a safety patrol to protect school children while crossing streets. Certainly a worthy cause. Having finished a night-long labor in this behalf, at 8 in the morning, he decided to drive home. Overcome by good works, he unfortunately fell asleep. When he returned to consciousness he found that his car had struck six children directly in front of the township school of Caldwell, which adjoins his home city. Councilman Harrison did not feel very well about this, but no charges were preferred against him, and the children were but slightly hurt.

Living Room Gives Space For Diversity

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

The lady of this house is the wife of a well-known radio symphony conductor and a musician in her own right. But she considers her family and home her first career and that's as it should be, especially since she's done a gracious job of blending musical interests into the pattern of a charming suburban life. It's the sort of a house where string quartets gather to play just for fun, where singers come for musical evenings and composers play their unpublished works. Yet high school children come in and out—in herds it seems.

The necessities, in planning the furnishings of this large living room, were tranquillity, practicality and beauty. A big order! But the room has all those qualities plus the even more illusive ingredient of individuality.

She began with a pewter-gray broadloom rug for the floor, then painted the walls and woodwork in that same shade of pewter gray. (The room was sunny enough to stand that color). For curtains she chose yellow shantung-taffeta which she had made to draw back and forth. Sofa and easy chairs were all slip covered in chintz, a yellow flowered pattern on a light gray ground. Lamps and accessories were all in brass and in old red cinnabar, while the lamp shades were in natural silk. The furniture was mostly walnut with small pieces in bleached finish.

Thus, the very simplicity of the color scheme has achieved both tranquillity and beauty, while the rug, of texture weave, can stand hard wear and all the slip covers come off for washing. It is a room that can be full of a crowd without losing its poise.

How to Rid Home of Humiliating 'Guests' Of Winter Period

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

INSECTS and their annoyances do not disappear with the end of summer. A number of domestic insects which are not only annoying, but dangerous, are more in evidence in the winter than in the summer. The bedbug heads the list of these.

In the modern home, humiliation and horror follow the discovery of a bedbug, but if the standards of cleanliness are lowered only a very little, these visitors will appear. In hospitals and hotels they are a constant menace.

In order to cope with them it is important to understand the life history. The bedbug is primarily a parasite of man, but it does feed on other warm-blooded animals, such as mice, chickens or birds. Bedbugs are brought into the house either by mice or men, as a general rule. Because their bodies are flat they can hide in microscopic crevices, under loosened wallpaper, in the joints of wooden bedsteads in folds in mattresses and bedding, and even in clothing.

Eggs Easier to Conceal

The eggs are even more easy to conceal. The eggs are white when first laid and quickly change to yellow. The female produces two or three eggs a day, until she lays about 500. The young reach maturity in about 30 days after being hatched, but if they encounter unfavorable food conditions, this period may be prolonged considerably.

They are usually nocturnal in habit, but they do not necessarily stop their predatory habits in the daytime. They are good stayers and if a house or cottage becomes infested, it is just too bad. They have been known to exist a year without food.

The bedbug does not bite, but saws his way through your skin with an extremely efficient lower jaw. After he is through the skin, he injects a secretion into the wound which prevents the blood from clotting and then he sucks. Some people do not react to the bedbug bite; to others it is very irritating.

Fumigation by Sulphur

To get rid of bedbugs fumigation by sulphur is the most practical way. It destroys the eggs and reaches all hiding places. Before and after fumigation the walls and ceilings should be repaired so that no cracks appear. Gasoline and kerosene are efficient in cleaning beds.

Another winter insect is the cockroach. It may become a menace to health by crawling over food and contaminating it. Practically everything is food to the cockroach, although they prefer that which is found around kitchens. They can be destroyed with a cheap white powder known as "sodium fluoride" which is harmless to man and animals. This is deadly to insects by contact and by ingestion.

Fleas and lice are also winter visitors. The rules that apply to bedbugs apply to fleas, in that any lowering of the standards of household cleanliness invites them. They are usually transmitted from person to person, children being especially liable to infestation by the head louse through the indiscriminate wearing of other children's caps.

When in the scalp, lice can be destroyed by a shampoo of equal parts of kerosene and vinegar. The solution may be left on for half an hour, the head being wrapped in a towel.

Man Who Resigned From Naval Academy Says Student Policy Is to Strip 'Plebes' of Moral Idealism

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: While I am not a regular reader of The Post, I chanced to see the issue of January 15 in which readers offered (through your column) advice to a midshipman whose girl friend wants him to pose as her fiance in order to get her out of a jam.

Let me say that I am not surprised that a midshipman finds himself confronted by such a proposition. It is a wonder, actually, that you are not being constantly called in on such cases. I was a midshipman for over a year and left the Academy honorably, of my own free will. And I found that the moral standards prevalent there were far below what one would expect from a group of young "officers and gentlemen."

Every effort on the part of upperclassmen is made (unofficially, of course), to remove any ideals of conduct and morality from an entering "plebe." His hazing consists in large part of memorizing a large stock of obscene stories and verses. If it is discovered that a boy has any objection to make, he is subjected to the ridicule of superiors and classmates alike.

While closely restricted in Annapolis, the average midshipman, when on leave, either at home or in foreign ports, reflects in his conduct this extra-curricular "training." On the surface he is a perfect gentleman, but I would not want my sister alone with him.

I do not feel that I am possessed of an unduly "delicate" mind. I have traveled considerably as a merchant seaman and I have attended other schools and colleges. I have no objection to sex as a topic of conversation among groups of young men or women, but I do not feel that common vulgarity and immorality have a place in the training of our future naval officers . . . I hope, Miss Haworth, that this letter may be of some value to you in advising others who bring you questions involving midshipmen. Very sincerely yours.

EX-MIDSHIPMAN.

Only Vulgarians Relish Ribaldry

DEAR EX-MIDSHIPMAN: To read your letter is to recognize the spirit of fearless sincerity in which it was written. One judges it to be the detached comment of a man who knows whereof he speaks, and who is none too pleased with what he knows.

If any young "officers and gentlemen" at the Naval Academy consider ribald lasciviousness to be proof of manliness or savoir faire, their ignorance is lamentable, as they must soon discover if required to associate, on a peer's basis, with persons of intrinsic good breeding and genuine sophistication.

However, with regard to the midshipman whose "problem" inspires your letter—there was nothing vulgar or cynical in his statement of the case. On the contrary, there was a decent matter-of-factness about the recital which indicates moral soundness and incorruptible refinement of social outlook.

Calls Women Fortunate Who Live Without Men

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I should like to make a few remarks concerning the letter from "L. A. P.," discussed in your column of January 13. You can't imagine how refreshing it is to learn that there is one woman in the world who isn't love starved or dependent in some way upon a man. Fortunate, indeed, is this woman, who holds no illusions about men, and who reached her conclusions through observation, instead of learning from painful experience, as I did.

I am a married woman. And for years before marriage, I was quite popular with men. I associated with many types and it seemed to me then that there was something sweet and worthwhile in all of them. There were single men who made love to me, and married men who came to me occasionally for consolation. I heard many sad stories, involving the misunderstood husband, the mismated wife and the slovenly wife. The general idea seemed to be that if the man were not happy, it was some woman's fault.

Well, finally I married a man with whom I was very much in love. He had some faults. I recognized them, but I was sure I could correct them in time. But I have lived with that man long enough by now to learn that marriage does not bring out the good in any man. It only accentuates his bad points, and there is nothing spiritual in man. I doubt that you could find a spiritual man even in the religious world . . . With man, self gratification comes first, last and always.

So I say to "L. A. P."—bravo, sister! Your life may not be complete, but at least it is peaceful and secure. The woman who is financially and psychologically independent of man is indeed a lucky creature.

Imported Fabrics

The expensively beautiful fabrics that formerly were imported from France and England will be missed by those who like fine brocades, rich damasks, sheerest mulls. Some of this quality of merchandise is still coming in from Italy but costs and risks of shipments on this route are high. The best hope is the increasing skill in fine weaving being developed by American mills where unbelievably intricate and luxurious materials are now made and where the added stimulation of demand for American goods should redouble native efforts.

Make New Chair Covers

YESTERDAY an attic orphan—today an aristocrat! That's the story of a chair. A two-fabric slip cover wrought the change—and you can make one easily, inexpensively.

The trick is to get a remnant of a lovely brocade, printed linen—or a similiarly handsome material and combine it with a less expensive fabric

This slip cover uses crewel embroidery in lovely greens, reds and yellows against a natural background for the inside chair sections; for the rest of the cover, plain green linen. The skirt is smartly edged with fringe in one of the embroidery colors.

But whatever combinations you choose, whether you use one fabric or two, you make your slip cover the same easy pin-on way.

Begin by smoothing material over inside back and seat, leaving a 4-inch tuck-in between them as in top diagram. Then pin along lines of the old upholstery and cut, leaving 1½ inches for seams. Similiarly you fit arms, back, sides and front.

Arm fronts and wings you cut from patterns you easily make yourself. To get exact shapes, hold paper against chair, mark lines with pencil as in lower diagram.

Next, pin pieces together, remove cover and baste, try on and stitch. If you are adding a skirt or flounce, sew it on last thing.

Week-End Stuffing Offsets Diet Regime

If You Must Eat Heavily at Parties, Skimp at Breakfast

By Ida Jean Kain

SOMEONE has called our attention to the people who diet, go on dieting, never seem to get over it—and never seem to get any slimmer.

One good reason for this predicament is a "balanced diet" of the reducers' own contriving. Their feast days just about balance their fast days. They diet from Monday to Friday, oh, so rigidly. Then they make up for it from Friday to Monday. There is one thing to be said for the Monday to Friday dieters: Their weight doesn't usually go any higher.

We know one determined young woman who made it a rule never to gain more weight over the week-end than she had lost during the preceding week. She was overweight when she started the system and she still is.

But unless you are unsociable, you will have to reckon with the week-end calories. Otherwise the scales will be forever seesawing up and down. You may keep from getting any fatter but, like our friend you will never get any slimmer.

Diet When You Can

Now, here is a solution that may turn the trick for you . . . continue your rigid diet through the week and count the calories even more carefully during week-ends except for the social affairs. If you are invited out to dinner, keep your calories for breakfast and luncheon down to 500. Then you can have 700 or so calories, which means quite a lot of food, and still keep within your day's reducing allowance.

Don't try to go without food all day or you will be too weak and hungry by dinner to be your usual charming self or even to have a good time.

The next rule is not to make table talk of your diet. The world's worst bore is the one who sits down to a delicious dinner and informs her hostess that she is on a diet. And don't be one of those "I shouldn't eat this but I'm going to" girls! There are too many of them already! Either eat it and say nothing or don't eat it and say nothing.

Alcohol Not Food

If nobody suspects you are on a diet you can get out of eating hundreds of calories. You don't have to eat the rolls and butter and you don't have to take second helpings of anything. It's no faux pas to turn down the second servings!

Nowadays, alcoholic beverages must be figured in with the week-end's sociability. Those average 100 calories a cocktail but you need not feel conspicuous if you take only one. For all it's calories, however, alcohol does not take the place of food and you should never try to skip dinner following a cocktail party. You need good, solid food. But you can very well skip the dessert.

New Attorney General and Mrs. Jackson Stir Attention at White House Reception

President and Mrs. Roosevelt Entertain For Members of Departments and Agencies; Flowers Deck Table Under Lincoln's Portrait

The Attorney General of a few hours, Robert H. Jackson, and Mrs. Jackson, furnished a ripple of excitement at what was otherwise a very placid affair at the White House last night when the President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained in honor of members of various governmental departments and agencies.

Mr and Mrs. Jackson marched in along with the Cabinet for the first time, Mr. Jackson having taken his oath of new office only that morning in the President's study. All evening they were gazed upon by the curious anxious for a good look at the newest member of the Cabinet.

As so many in the crowd last night were New Deal appointees, harmony reigned supreme. Many adoring phrases were heard concerning the Roosevelts, and one couple who had passed through the receiving line stood at the door to the state dining room for about 15 minutes gazing longingly back.

"I just love to look at Mrs. Roosevelt" confided the lady to her husband.

The usual mildly stimulating punch and cookies which feature state receptions at the White House were served on a long table centered with flowers. Directly above, on the mantel underneath Lincoln's portrait, were massed dozens of pale pink roses.

Promptly at 9 o'clock, the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, preceded by the solemn-faced aides and followed by members of the Cabinet, made their appearance. Their approach was a signal to the red-coated Marine Band to strike up the tune of "Hail to the Chief." The First Lady was gowned in a robin's-egg blue chiffon frock cut on simple lines with a knife-pleated skirt. Brilliants were embroidered on the bodice and three pink camelias completed the ensemble.

Mrs. Farley Makes Rare Appearance

Mrs. Cordell Hull, who wore black lace and net, was escorted by the Secretary of State. Creamy gardenias were pinned to her dress and she wore a rope of pearls. The Secretary of the Treasury was accompanied by Mrs. Henry A. Morgenthau, she wearing a deep rust taffeta gown. Next in line were Attorney General and Mrs. Jackson, she in a smart frock of silver and white brocade. For the first time this season Mrs. James A. Farley attended a White House reception, and was accompanied by the Postmaster General. Down from New York especially for the occasion Mrs. Farley was chic in her frock of deep smoke-blue tulle. It was made with a heart-shaped neckline and very flared skirt sprinkled in glittering blue sequins.

Just back from Florida are the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Harold Ickes, who attended the reception last night. A smartly cut gown of emerald green brocade—quite becoming with her flaming red hair—was worn by the youth-Mrs. Ickes. Mrs. Henry a Wallace escorted by the Secretary of Agriculture, wore a pink and blue net gown. The Secretary of Labor Miss Francis Perkins, was escorted into the Red Room by the Assistant Secretary of Commerce, Edward J. Noble. Enjoying the reception immensely were Mr. Noble's two daughters, June and Sally. June, who is very blond, wore a chiffon frock banded in sequins, while Sally had selected a dance frock of peach taffeta. Also coming in for his share of attention was the newly appointed Undersecretary of the Interior, Alvin Wirtz, accompanied by Mrs. Wirtz.

The Federal Security Administrator and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, who were guests at the White House dinner before the reception, were joined later in the evening by their house guest, Miss Lucy Taggart, of Indianapolis. Her father was the late Senator Taggart, of Indiana. Pretty Mrs. McNutt, one of the handsomest women of the official circle, wore black velvet made with a bustle and an enormous orchid pinned to her shoulder. Miss Taggart had chosen powder-blue chiffon with a shirred bodice.

Mrs. Frank T. Hines, who accompanied her husband, Gen. Hines, was attired in black velvet, made with a flared skirt, slight train, and beaded with rhinestones on the bodice. The general heads the Veterans' Administration.

Many of the women were there in their own right, as important executives rather than as wives of same. Miss Mary Anderson, director of the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor; Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward of the Social Security Board, and Mrs. Benton McMillin, only woman member of the Civil Service Commission, were a few of them.

Mrs. Woodward had chosen white crepe embroidered with silver beads, particularly becoming with her tittian hair. Mrs. McMillin's frock of heavy satin in the new moonstone gray shade had a bustle and a train, and she completed the ensemble with emerald clips. Miss Anderson wore dark blue taffeta trimmed in brocaded velvet.

William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, was present, but we didn't see Jonn L. Lewis anywhere. Mr. Green had a long and cozy chat with Miss Perkins, who also talked in a corner with her solicitor, Gerard Reilly. Mrs. Reilly looked stunning in a white crepe dress with jacket embroidered around the edges with gold.

There were two Territorial Governors present last night, from two opposite ends of the map. The Governor of Alaska and Mrs. Ernest Gruening were there, and so were the Governor of the Virgin Islands and Mrs. Lawrence W. Cramer. The Gruenings returned only recently from Nome to be here while the allotment of some funds for Alaska is under consideration. Mrs. Cramer wore a smart black dress with a pink bodice covered with the black material and a full skirt.

Fewer Black Ties Noted

Escorted around by Oscar Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, was Miss Josephine Roche, who flies to Washington from her Denver home every so often. She is here for the meeting of the Interdepartmental Committee on Health, which she heads, and also for the Conference on Children in a Democracy in which Mrs. Roosevelt is so interested.

The Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Daniel W. Bell were among the first to pass down the line, Mrs. Bell, handsome in a blue and black lace dress. Followed immediately by several other Treasury officials, among them the Assistant Secretary and Mrs. Herbert Gaston, the latter in red crepe.

The chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Jesse Jones, was accompanied by Mrs. Jones, who wore white brocade.

Col. Francis Harrington, Works Progress administrator, was among the bachelors present. Another was Edward Foley, general counsel of the Treasury, who was accompanied by his sister, Miss Katharine Foley.

Col. E. W. Clark, important official of PWA, made the rounds with Mrs. Clark, who wore becoming black lace and net, with pink roses at the belt, and a gold ornament in her hair. Also in black was Mrs. Nathan Straus, wife of the United States Housing Administrator, whose frock was made with a very full skirt.

Though black ties seem to be creeping in to White House receptions this year, there were only four or five noted last evening, as contrasted with about a hundred at the last state function.

Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital, was accompanied by his wife, who wore black lace with a red rose at the bodice. One of the loveliest frocks noted was that of Mrs. Metcalfe Walling, who was gowned in blue satin with a diagonal silver stripe and a very full skirt. Mr. Walling, who accompanied her, is head of the division of public contacts in the Labor Department.

Guests Dance In East Room

The Comptroller of the Currency and Mrs. Preston Delano were there, Mrs. Delano wearing a white crepe gown trimmed with fringe. The Postmaster of Washington and Mrs. Vincent Burke had their family in tow.

Whirling about the dance floor with a White House aide was pretty Miss Joanne Barnes wearing a stunning velvet frock with a black and white striped bodice and full white skirt. Not far away, watching the dancers from the sidelines, were her father and mother, the Executive Assistant to the Treasurer and Mrs. G. O. Barnes. Also there were Mr.

One of the most striking gowns there was that worn by Mrs. Emil Schram, wife of one of the members of the board of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Her model of Peranche blue tulle was fashioned with rows and rows of pink sequins which extended from the bodice down to the hem of the full skirt. Sequin straps glittered over her shoulders.

Vincent M. Miles, Solicitor for the Postoffice Department, and Mrs. Miles, chatted with Postmaster General and Mrs. Farley. Mrs. Miles' gown of aqua satin had a matching wool jacket made of sequins.

Playing "Scarlett" for the day was bonnie Miss Patricia Hill, debutante daughter of Mrs. Uline Hill. Chosen for her striking resemblance to the Georgia heroine of "Gone With the Wind," Miss Hill has among her distinguished ancestors, Roger Clapp, Colonial Governor of Massachusetts. However, with an English actress, Vivien Leigh, playing in the movie version, Miss Hill's Yankee connections are minimized. The gown which she modeled at a local store is of white muslin edged in lace. Dozens of petticoats, stays and hoops give an authentic air to the frock—which was one worn by Miss Leigh in the making of the picture

The Roosevelts Give Dinner Before Reception

President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained at dinner last evening before the reception for departmental officials at the White House.

Guests were the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Morgenthau, the Postmaster General and Mrs. Farley, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Wallace, Secretary of Labor Perkins, Undersecretary of Commerce Edward J. Noble, and Miss June Noble; the Federal Security Administrator and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt.

Still others there were the Undersecretary of Agriculture and Mrs. M. L. Wilson, the Assistant Secretary of Labor and Mrs. Charles V. McLaughlin, Miss Catherine L. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Howland Davis, Frank Harting, Lowell Mellett, and Mr. and Mrs. James H. Rowe, jr.

Pink carnations, stevia and maidenhair fern decorated the table.

Mrs. F. G. Morrill Will Give Party For Sen. Lucas

Mrs. Frank Gillingham Merrill will entertain a few friends at her home Sunday afternoon in honor of Senator and Mrs. Scott Lucas, of Illinois. A feature of the entertainment will be a theaterlogue, "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," a part of a pageant written and produced by Mrs. Morrill for the Illinois Centennial.

Senator Lucas and Representative James M. Barnes were reared in the Lincoln country, and it was largely through the efforts of both that the Lincoln Memorial Village of New Salem became a national park.

Among the guests at the Sunday afternoon party will be Representative and Mrs. Ralph Church, Representative Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Schram, Canon and Mrs. Albert Lucas, Col. and Mrs. Ralph Wheeler, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Murray Thornton, Maj. and Mrs. Melvin Hall and Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth Alvord.

Pompano Hunt Dinner Held

A full house, superb menu and old-fashioned square dances, in which the guests participated, were features of the second annual pompano and partridge hunt dinner at the Hotel Raleigh last night. Composed chiefly of residential society, guests came early and stayed late to one of the best parties of the season.

At a gay table W. E. Hayes entertained a group. Attending his party were Justice and Mrs. James M. Proctor, Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. Fleming, Mrs. Harry Kite, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Parker, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Hilleary Hoskinson, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Bowie, Col. and Mrs. Julian Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. Thilman Hendrick, Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Hayes, Mrs. Gladys Church and Frank Morse.

Miss Parker, Mrs. Hull and Mrs. Adams Present as Justice Murphy Takes Oath

HERE AND THERE:

Miss Anne Parker was among those who witnessed Associate Justice Frank Murphy take his oath of office yesterday at the White House. Mrs. Cordell Hull, wearing a Persian lamb coat, was also there. . . . Former Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams, and Mrs. Adams, are due shortly from Boston for their annual visit here. They will be given a tea a week from Sunday by another prominent Republican, William Castle, and Mrs. Castle.

MLLE. EVE CURIE has landed in New York for a lecture tour and is expected to stop here in her travels . . . Life in Paris has its lighter side, in spite of war, according to Miss Caroline Nash, who recently returned after driving an ambulance for the American Hospital at Neuilly. During the first weeks, all telephone conversations had to be carried on in French. One day Miss Nash and an American friend were obediently chatting away in their best French when the operator interrupted to say, "Mais parlez Francais."

THE ATTRACTIVE VISITOR also reports that many women are going to bed with their make-up on in case of an air-raid. During the first alarm Miss Nash took her portable radio down to the "abri," but the only thing they could get was a German station which was playing "Deutschland ueber Alles" over and over again.

Another time Miss Nash was in a shop having a watch fixed when the eerie sound began. She rushed out to her waiting taxidriver, who considerately said, "I'll turn off the meter until it is over." In paying tribute to the good sportsmanship of the French, Miss Nash said that on those occasions when she was in uniform the waiters and taxi drivers refused to take tips from her.

CAUGHT IN DEAUVILLE when war broke out, Miss Nash rushed to Paris and volunteered her automobile and herself for service. She took out a truck drivers license immediately—altogether, with the card bearing her fingerprints, Miss Nash had 14 papers she had to carry around with her. As people in the streets were frequently stopped by policemen and asked to identify themselves, she was never without her bundle.

Miss Nash returned to this country by Clipper. She paid $140 extra to bring along one more suitcase than was allowed per passenger. In March or April she expects to return to Paris and her work there. Mis Nash says the morale of the French people is wonderful.

A SECRETARY in the office of a prominent member of Congress has sent in another contribution to this column's collection of strange letters from constituents. This one is a rhymed epic from a follower of Father Divine who protests that the names which the "angels" take for themselves (his is Habbakuk New Mind) are not recognized legally for voting purposes. Some of the 17 verses follow:

"We are denied our Constitutional rights
Because by our Creator some of our names are changed.
We are still true American citizens,
Now this we zealously acclaim.

"A Name is not the only identification,
It is what you say or do,
We endeavor to be law-abiding citizens,
And to every human be true.

"In the high light of this advance Civilization,
From an Executive, Judicial and a Legislative point of view,
We are making this request of you,
That we might receive that which is due.

"Thence we desire to express our Citizenry
In this God-given land of the free,
And live a life of legality,
In a Spiritualistic glee."

Educator Addresses Federation's Board

William G. Carr, Secretary of Educational Policies Commission, and Clarence Streit, 'Union Now' Author, Among Speakers

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor.

The concept that the individual is more important than the state was emphasized as indispensable both in education and international relations at yesterday's sessions of the board of the General Federation of Women's Clubs at the Mayflower Hotel.

Last night, William G. Carr, secretary of the Educational Policies Commission, declared that "A truly democratic school system would strive above all else to recognize and provide for individuality, having as guiding principles the concepts that people are more important than the state, that human beings differ from one another and that each individual is an unique personality."

In the afternoon, Clarence K. Streit, author of "Union Now," discussed his plan of an Inter-Democracy Federal Union. He drew a parallel between it and the Federal Union organized by the 13 States in 1787 whose great success, he said was "in the organization of the country not on the basis of the State but of the individual."

The two addresses, although on different subjects, dove-tailed in the principles set forth by the speakers as essential to a democratic way of life.

Mr. Streit Heard At Afternoon Symposium

Mr. Streit was one of three speakers for the afternoon symposium on "What kind of world organization can best serve the cause of peace and insure the democratic way of life?" Advocating a federal union of those democracies which "speak the same language" in their concepts of government, he proposed that the plan begin with one of the older democracies: The United States, Canada, Ireland, United Kingdom, France, Switzerland, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Sweden, Finland, Union of South Africa, Australia, New Zealand. These 15 are most suitable, he explained, because they are the oldest and most mature; they provide the "most congenial nucleus," as shown by the fact that there has not been a single war between any two of them in the past 100 years, since they have gone into democracy and they have the power to insure peace by "sheer overwhelming preponderance" of force, ruling half of the world and having half of its people.

Hitler's idea that "it is totally unimportant whether we live, but it is essential that Germany lives," that the nation is more important than the individual, is the principle we face today, he said. "As a Nation we've got to get rid of the soft ideas we've developed in the past few years—that we can depend on the Government or others to bring us through."

The result of the "challenge" is going to depend on what each individual is going to do about it. Mr. Streit showed how in every crisis this country has faced, the "bulk" of the people indicated they wanted to go ahead for stronger union, though some didn't believe in the forward step in each instance.

Common people throughout the world are tired of depressions, wars, troubled times, and under the pressure of the present situation the world is far riper for a federal union than it was at the end of the World War for a League of Nations, Mr. Streit stated.

Other speakers on the symposium were Miss Mary Dingman, until recently president of the Peace and Disarmament Committee of the Women's International Organizations in Geneva, and Warren Kelchner, acting chief of the Division of International Conferences of the State Department. Miss Dingman declared the United States would never find peace alone, but must unite with other groups in the world to find world government. Mr. Kelchner discussed the relation of the Union of the American republics to world organization. He declared "the American peoples are behind their governments in the employment of reason and justice in their international relations," and asserted that no amount of peace machinery could insure friendly relations unless there were this "will to work together to build a better world in which to live."

"The Integrity of Education" was the subject discussed last night by Mr. Carr, in which he approached from the viewpoint of the educator the importance of making the individual the primary concern.

"Many of our school systems have been forced by lack of funds or lack of vision, or both, into a system of mass education, with large classes, highly detailed routine, and severe externally imposed discipline. The resulting factory method brands thousands of children as misfits, denies educational opportunity both to the gifted and the handicapped exceptional child, and hampers the real work of education at every turn. Examples of this regimentation may be found in all parts of the Nation."

The ideal of equal educational opportunity has little foundation in fact, Mr. Carr stated. "Between one State and another, between communities within the same State, the most indefensible and obvious differences in educational opportunity prevail.

Selection of Students Held Undemocratic

"Another aspect of undemocratic procedure in our schools is to be found in the plan, or rather lack of plan, followed in selecting the youth who are to have the advantage of college education," Mr. Carr stated. A democracy would make advanced educational opportunity available first to those who were most competent to learn, he said. "A leadership of brains and ability is not undemocratic; an aristocracy of special privilege is obviously so." Thousands of highly competent young people are now excluded from college, declared Carr, because they and their families do not have the money to continue their education. Democracy must not tolerate "multiple-track educational systems based on economic and social distinctions."

There were also talks last night by Edward M. Kirby, director of public relations for the National Association of Broadcasters, and Morris L. Ernst, author and member of the New York State Banking Board, who discussed the NAB Code.

Mrs. Roosevelt Greets 350 At Congressional Club Party

First Lady Stands in Receiving Line For Hour at Affair Given in Her Honor, Then Has to Attend White House Parley

The season of official receptions at the Congressional Club opened yesterday afternoon with that given annually in honor of the First Lady—the largest in several years.

Mrs. Roosevelt arrived shortly after 4 o'clock and remained for an hour in the receiving line with the club president, Mrs. Edward Burke, wife of Senator Burke, of Nebraska, and the other officers. She wore a green velvet gown with shoes and hat to match, the hat trimmed with an ostrich plume that curled down in back. When 350 members and guests had been received she was obliged to hurry back to the White House for a series of conferences, and could not take time to inspect the new clubhouse kitchen which is the pride of the membership and a showplace for visitors.

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, Jr. and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, two Cabinet wives who assisted at the tea tables, were among those who looked in and admired the clubhouse addition.

Mrs. Morgenthau wore a costume of gray, with a close feather turban, and Mrs. Wallace was in black. Others who poured in were Mrs. William B. Bankhead, wife of the Speaker of the House, who wore a dress of blue with at hat of the same shade, trimmed with tan and white quills; Mrs. Morris Sheppard, wife of Senator Sheppard, of Texas, wearing a black dress and green turban with a drapery in black; Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts, in black and white; Mrs. George Norris, wife of Senator Norris of Nebraska, in a costume of black; and Mrs. Charles W. Tobey, wife of Senator Tobey, of New Hampshire, who wore a stone blue dress and wide straw hat. She took the place of Representative Jessie Sumner, of Illinois, who was unable to attend.

Mrs. Otis Bland, of Virginia, wearing black, and Mrs. Harry L. Engelbright, of California, in a spring print, served ice cream. Mrs. Richard Duncan, chairman of the hostess committee, wore a black gown, beaded on the shoulders and sleeves with gold, green and white.

The Marine Band played in the southeast room adjoining the ballroom, their red jackets adding color to the scene.

The receiving line stood before the fireplace in the ballroom on the second floor. Mrs. Burke wore a gown of navy blue with white trimming. With her in the line were Mrs. Robert L. Doughton, of North Carolina, wearing black, and a corsage of gardenias; Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, of Minnesota, in black velvet with a real lace bertha and a mauve velvet flower turban; Mrs. Clarence Hancock, of New York, wearing a burgundy hat and dress; Mrs. R. Ewing Thomason, of Texas, in black crepe with a gold sequin design on the shoulders; Mrs. Robert Rich, of Pennsylvania, in green, with dull gold trimming and a mink-trimmed hat; Mrs. John R. Murdock of Arizona, in black trimmed with silver, and Mrs. Clyde Smith, of Maine, in cadet blue with hat to match.

'Choose Own Literary Calories,' Fannie Hurst Urges Women

Novelist Declares Enthusiasms of Many Critics Are Too Often Due to Whims Or Current State of Their Digestion

"Choose your own literary calories" women were advised yesterday by Fannie Hurst, noted novelist, who was guest of honor and speaker at the "tea parfait" sponsored by the Washington section of the National Council of Jewish Women at the Mayflower Hotel.

She urged individual, constructive thinking in literary life instead of "tabloid judgments" dictated by book clubs, New York literary critics and radio reviewers. Literary standards, emanating from this limited area "come as neatly boxed and wrapped in cellophane as your favorite breakfast cereal," she said.

Charging that the enthusiasms of many first-line critics, including Alexander Woollcott, were often due to whims or the state of their digestion, she advocated literary browsing and adventuring in search of good books not on the best-seller list.

Miss Hurst wore a black silk jersey dress with a white-lined cowl in back and a small calla lily pinned on the left shoulder. Her white turban suggested the shape of the flower. Mrs. Edward Sonneborn, council president, who opened the meeting, wore a dove gray costume, with a hat of orchid shade. Mrs. Lester Pollock, chairman of the tea, who introduced Miss Hurst, wore a black velvet dress and white hat.

The lecture, in the Chinese tea room of the Mayflower, was followed by tea, served in the grand ballroom. There 12 tables were arranged, each in charge of two or three hostesses and so varied in their artistic appointments they might have been exhibited as examples of beautiful table arrangements.

That arranged by Mrs. Alvin Newmyer, Miss Bert Israel and Mrs. Sidney Heckinger was particularly striking. It was decorated in silver and white with silver pheasants on a silver-rimmed mirror in the center and, at each end, delicate silver figures standing on bases of white sweet peas and holding trailing garlands of smilax.

That arranged by Mrs. Edward Cafritz and Mrs. Herbert Sauber had a centerpiece of red carnations and spirea with crystal candelabra at either side. A Dresden table, arranged by Mrs. Nathan Siegel and Mrs. William Ogus, had a centerpiece in pastel shades and Dresden candelabra at either end. That of Mrs. Charles Dulkin and Mrs. Ed Ostrow had a centerpiece of white calla lilies with yellow roses at the base.

Mrs. David Simon and Mrs. Theodore Feyser had a table in red and white, with red carnations in large silver globes and white candles in silver candelabra. Carnations and candles shading from light pink to deep rose decorated the table at which Mrs. Norman Gerstenfeld and Mrs. Arthur Lyon were hostesses. Purple calla lilies and pink carnations formed the center bouquet for that presided over by Mrs. Morton Luchs and Mrs. Herbert Rich. White candles stood in individual silver holders of lyre design.

A Star of David, formed by blue tapers, was the decoration on the table of Mrs. Charles Frank and Mrs. Hortense Goldenberg; patriotic colors carried out with red and white carnations and blue iris on that of Mrs. Garfield Kass and Mrs. Morris Gewirz; soft tones of yellow, in snapdragons, daffodils and mimosa, on that of Mrs. Aubrey Fischer, Mrs. Samuel Schwartz and Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith; blue iris and white lilies in high, slender silver vases decorated the table arranged by Mrs. Elizabeth Kahn and Mrs. Samuel Pack, and lavender and white sweet peas and snapdragons that of Mrs. Morris Cafritz and Mrs. William Wolf.

N. C. U. Alumnae Plan to Honor Miss Elliott, Dean

Miss Harriet Elliott, dean of women of the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, will be honor guest of the Washington Alumnae Club of the Woman's College on January 29 at 8 p. m. at the Woman's City Club, 736 Jackson place.

This will be the first meeting under the direction of the local alumnae club's new officers. They are Miss Sue Wall Roberson, president; Mrs. John Kerr, vice president; Miss Mary Haynes, secretary-treasurer. The local alumnae group numbers over 100.

Miss Elliott is a frequent visitor to Washington in the interest of the committee on legislation of the A. A. U. W. of which she is chairman. She has held offices in the National League of Women Voters and the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and is now president of the North Carolina Conference for Social Service. She is also a member of the American Political Science Association and the National Associations for Deans of Women.

Her public interests have centered in political activity. She was a member of the platform committee for the Democratic Committee from North Carolina in 1936 and delegate-at-large from North Carolina to the Democratic conventions of 1932 and 1936.

Plans for Convention of Children of American Revolution Made at Meeting

PLANS for the national convention of the Children of the American Revolution April 19, 20, 21 and 22 were made yesterday at a meeting of the local committees yesterday.

There will be a stunt night program on Friday night, April 19, with Grahame T. Smallwood, of the District as master of ceremonies. A reception for junior national officers and an informal dance will follow. These will be at the Lafayette Hotel, headquarters for the convention.

Saturday night, April 20, a dinner-dance will be held at the Mayflower Hotel, preceded in the afternoon by the patriotic education committee's program on the ships of the Continental Navy and those of 1940 to be named for Revolutionary heroes and events. Sunday, the traditional memorial service at the Old Presbyterian Meeting House in Alexandria will be held as part of a pilgrimage to Mount Vernon. The pilgrimage will be in charge of Mrs. William T. Clark.

Mrs. Eldridge L. Myers has been appointed chairman of the dinner-dance committee, assisted by Mrs. Lee R. Pennington, jr., vice chairman; Mrs. C. B. Strong, chairman of patronesses; Mrs. T. Hunton Leith, seating; Mrs. William M. Carrigan, tickets, and Mrs. William E. Forbes, favors.

The junior committee includes William Pennington, leader of the cotillion; William Berner, of New Jersey, assistant, and Jerry Lee, chairman of the floor committee.

HOMEMAKERS ENTERTAIN—The Homemakers Department of the Takoma Park Women's Club yesterday afternoon gave its second annual tea at the home of Mrs. Jesse J. Ramsdell, 1411 Underwood street. The affair was for the whole club and was attended by 50 members.

The club president, Mrs. Paul Burk, Mrs. Ramsdell and Mrs. C. L. Snyder, the section chairman, alternated in pouring. Other hostesses were Mrs. William R. McQuaker and Mrs. John S. Seidel.

A feature of the afternoon was an exhibition of native American handicraft and a talk by Mrs. Louise Hall Hollis, who arranged it.

Club members also brought articles for the exhibit, among them Mrs. G. L. Oliver, who displayed pottery from the Southwest, hooked rugs and chairs. Mrs. Henry E. Ewing, the program chairman was in charge.

The homemakers themselves had made the tempting variety of cakes, cookies and candies which were served.

The tea table was appointed with crystal candelabra, family heirloom over 100 years old, as centerpiece and early American glass plates.

DISCUSS GREECE — Another function with an international angle will be the World Fellowship luncheon at the Y. W. C. A. with "Glimpses of Greece" as the subject. Mrs. William S. Culbertson, fellowship chairman, will present Achilles Catsonis as the speaker and Louis Callis, who will show pictures he recently took in Greece.

Traffic Ills Blamed on Court Laxity

Stricker Will Urge Permanent Judge And Prosecutor For Auto Cases

Failure of police court judges and prosecutors to "follow through" with rigid, uniform penalties against accused offenders will be cited to the Traffic Advisory Council tonight as a major barrier to Washington's safety efforts.

STRICKER

Paul F. Stricker, field director of the National Safety Council, is here as a "consulting physician" to prescribe for the District's traffic ills. He will urge appointment of a permanent judge and prosecutor to handle traffic court assignments, it was learned yesterday.

Stricker will address the council at 7:30 p. m. at a meeting in the Archives auditorium. He conferred for several hours yesterday with Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent; Inspector William E. Holmes, traffic supervisor, and Capt. Milton D. Smith, commander of the police traffic division.

Backs Brown Policy

A nationally-known authority on highway safety, Stricker indorsed Maj. Brown's recently-announced "crack-down" policy for the coming year. An analysis of the local traffic control program, Stricker said, showed that law enforcement leads by a "wide margin" all other accident prevention activities.

At the same time, he indicated lack of adequate personnel. It was brought out in yesterday's conference that in 1937 Maj. Brown asked Congress for a 10 per cent increase in his force, but so far has received only 4 per cent addition.

Of five separate safety activities in Washington, enforcement has been the best. He listed the other four as accident reporting and analysis, traffic engineering, school and child safety work and public education.

Interest Found Rising

A report made by Washington in the National Safety Council's annual "safe city" contest will form the basis of Stricker's recommendations. He spent yesterday bringing the report up to date and will present his findings at tonight's meeting.

"I have found," he said, "that there is a greater interest in traffic safety here than ever before. That interest will go far to produce a better record."

It is understood he will urge support of the current enforcement program against "moving violations"—but he added: "We mustn't overlook parking infractions. They cause trouble, too."

The entire District traffic setup, he said, will come in for "fair criticism" at the council session.

Miley, 34 Years Postman, Rings Last Bell Today

Robert L. Miley, who has been delivering mail for 20 years in the 1200 block of G street and the 600 block of Twelfth and Thirteenth streets northwest, will make his last round today.

MILEY

After walking the streets for 34 years with a mail pouch over his shoulder, Miley is going to retire because he has reached the age limit of 65 years.

A native of Trapp, Va., he said he planned to keep his home at 20 Adams street northwest, where he lives with his wife and daughter, Miss Ruth Miley.

Although he has made no plans, Miley declared he expected next summer to go to his cottage at Bay Ridge, Md., "where I fish and rest."

Miley's other daughter, Mrs. Edith M. Kilerlane, lives in West Gate, Md.

Capital News In Brief

Evil Old Bandits

Two colored men took $138 and three bottles of whisky from a liquor store at 61 H street northeast last night. Leon Pappas, proprietor, said one man covered him with a gun as the other dipped into the cash register—then grabbed a few choice bottles from the shelf.

K. L. Kelly Installed

K. L. Kelly was installed as president of the City of Washington Branch of the American Pharmaceutical Association at its banquet last night. Other officers installed were D. L. Maxwell, first vice president; R. Franzoni, second vice president; P. Reznek, third vice president; Dr. Charles O. Wilson, secretary, and William T. McClosky, treasurer.

Messenger Slugged

Leonard Pearson, 48, a messenger at the Veterans Administration, was robbed of $82 as he neared Third and L streets northwest last night. He was held up by three men, one of whom hit him over the head. Pearson lives at 1944 Second street northwest.

Hazen Rests Well

Commissioner Hazen's condition yesterday was described as "satisfactory" by his physician, Dr. Francis R. Hagner. The 72-year-old commissioner entered Garfield Hospital Tuesday for a general checkup, following a chill.

Tydings Bill Would Extend Free Schooling

A broadening of the controversial law which gives nonresident children free schooling in Washington was proposed yesterday by Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland.

Tydings' bill is designed to cover children whom the Board of Education has ruled ineligible except upon payment of tuition, and school officials predicted that it would increase the burden on local taxpayers.

All children of natural parents who work in the District or whose fathers are in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps or other Federal services and are stationed outside the Capital are now entitled to free education in Washington's public schools.

Would Include Fosters

Senator Tydings' amendment includes "persons standing in loco parentis to such children."

School officials interpreted this as meaning that any person who assumes the obligations of a parent, legally or informally, and meets the other qualifications may send children free of charge to District schools.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, last year told the House subcommittee on District appropriations that there were 2,482 nonresident pupils in local public schools and only 56 of them paid tuition. These pupils cost the taxpayers $231,354.79 annually to educate, he said.

Last November, school officials said, the number of non-resident pupils had increased to 2,793, or 311 more than in the previous term.

King Led Fight

While the number of pupils involved at the outset would be small, officials said, enactment of the Tydings amendment would open the door to an unlimited number of nonresidents.

Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, last year made a fight to bar all nonresident pupils from Washington public schools unless they paid tuition. Similar fights have been made in previous years, but the Maryland and Virginia delegations always have been successful in retaining the law.

Tuition costs in the District range from $246.89 in Wilson Teachers' College to $63.64 in elementary schools. Night and summer schools from $246.89 in the Wilson's Teach- are much less costly.

Lorton Chief Pleads for Aid By Professions

Training Advisers Would Curb Recurrence Of Crime, Says Botkin

Claude O. Botkin, newly appointed superintendent of the District Reformatory at Lorton, said yesterday that rehabilitation of inmates is handicapped by the lack of competent training advisers.

A psychologist, a psychiatrist, an industrial adviser and several full time chaplains must be provided if the institution is to succeed in preventing convicts from committing crimes upon their release, he told the directors of the Bureau of Rehabilitation at their monthly meeting.

Scores "Mass Treatment"

"Mass treatment of prisoners has resulted in a tremendous expense to the taxpayers," Botkin said. "The only means of keeping a convict from returning to prison is to deal with his individual problems. It is essential that a plan of training be worked out for him which will permit him to compete economically upon his return to society."

Such a plan, he said, is in operation at all Federal prisons.

The District Penitentiary has established a classification committee to individualize treatment, he explained, pointing out that the committee has "not been as effective as it should be" because of the absence of professional advisers.

Points to Record

Botkin pointed to the record at the "open" penitentiary maintained by the District. He said that only three attempts to escape were made last year. Disciplinary problems are at a minimum, he said.

The following bureau officers were elected for 1940: President, Allen Pope; first vice president, Dr. Russell J. Fields; second vice president, Capt. Rhoda J. Milliken; third vice president, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle; secretary, Bennett Mead; treasurer, Dr. Carl D. Wells. G. Howland Shaw was newly-elected to the board of directors.

Four State Societies Open 1940 Social Season

MASSACHUSETTS STATE SOCIETY MEMBERS danced at the Wardman Park Hotel. Lucille Gorcey (left) and Vivian A. Flaherty "reserved" Representative Thomas Flaherty for the dancing. The Massachusetts lawmaker doesn't seem to mind it a bit, and, after all, who would?

WEST VIRGINIANS danced at their State Society's first function this year. Held at the Raleigh Hotel last night, the dance was attended by Mrs. John Kee, Representative Kee (center) and Representative Jennings Randolph. A reception preceded the dance

Visiting Nurse Society Springs To the Defense of Dr. Ruhland

The executive committee of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, whose membership includes wives of a Cabinet member and a Supreme Court justice, sprang to the defense of Dr. George C. Ruhland, the District's health officer, yesterday.

In a resolution adopted at a special meeting, the committee indorsed "the health administration which has been given to the District" by Dr. Ruhland, who is slated for removal if Congress accepts a plan for reorganization of the Capital's city government proposed by the Commissioners.

The resolution recommended that "any reorganization plan which is adopted for the District of Columbia make it possible to retain the services of Dr. Ruhland in his present capacity."

Dr. Ruhland's record in the District also drew praise from another quarter. Dr. Harry F. Dowling, of the District Medical Society, described Dr. Ruhland as "an excellent health officer . . . who has been a great aid in the District's present health control program." Dr. Dowling addressed the health institute in the National Museum Auditorium.

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of the Supreme Court Justice, and society president, cited in defense of Dr. Ruhland the reorganization and development of the Department of Health nursing bureau and the extension of infant and maternity clinics under his administration.

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, expressed the "highest regard" for Dr. Ruhland's "professional accomplishments."

Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling, wife of the United States Immigration Commissioner, declared:

"I feel that the method by which Dr. Ruhland has been appointed by the District Commissioners on the recommendation of an able local medical committee is a sound one. I feel that ability and experience should always be the basis for choosing a health officer for the District regardless of his affiliations."

Others speaking in Dr. Ruhland's behalf included Mrs. Charles B. Crawford, chairman of the society's dressings committee, and Mrs. John W. Davidge. Committee members unable to attend the meeting who were announced as indorsing Dr. Ruhland's accomplishments were Mrs. Whitman Cross, Mrs. G. Howland Chase and Mrs. Richard H. Wilmer.

Copies of the resolution are to be sent the Commissioners and members of the House and Senate District committees.

Assail Drive on Ruhland's Job

Attacking the attempt to oust District Health Officer Ruhland, the First Ward Neighborhood Council last night adopted a resolution opposing "the limitation of choice of District health officer to any particular group."

A member body of the Council of Social Agencies, the council also went on record as:

Approving the appropriation asked by the Health Department for 30 additional public health nurses.

Approving the WPA appropriation requested for 13 nursery schools.

Indorsing new legislation to curb child placement by private individuals. Specifically mentioned was revision of the bastardy act.

1,800 at Church Octave Here Urged to Seek Unity of Faith

Massed in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception for the opening of the seventh annual Church Unity Octave, 1,800 worshipers last night were urged to work toward unity of Christendom.

Robed seminarians of 33 religious orders of the university; skull-capped girls from parochial schools, and other students; representatives of Catholic fraternities, clubs and veterans' units, and others heard the Right Rev. Thomas J. McDonnell plead for men with the faith, zeal and courage of St. Paul in "restoring the sheep to the fold."

"As we look around at the world today," said the national director of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, "and see the breakdown of religion . . . the opposition of so-called Christian sects to a Christian plan of our President to negotiate with his holiness Pope Pius XII in his mission of peace . . . well do we need another St. Paul, in his fearless and convincing manner to . . . remind the inhabitants of this earth that there is only 'one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of us all.'"

Prevented by illness from officiating at solemn Benediction, Archbishop Michael J. Curley's place was taken by Bishop Michael Keyes, S. M., of the Marist Seminary and formerly of Savannah, Ga.

Other participants in the ceremony were the Rev. Edward A. McGuire, deacon; the Rev. Frederick A. Murphy, sub-deacon, and Frater Brian Lothar, master of ceremonies.

SCOTCH WITH A STORY

Capt. Harold A. White's next adventure story is entitled "Crime and Punishment in Abyssinia" Watch for it.

There is no end of wonders in Northern Sweden. One finds snow in the middle of June and a brilliant sun at midnight. Among those blue-white, snow-covered hills are found the hardy descendants of the Vikings. Sportsmen by tradition and training, the Swedes seem to have been born on skis. According to Captain White, the most exciting of Swedish winter sports is "tolkning". But he warns you not to try it unless you are as comfortable on skis as you are in shoes. All you do is find a high-stepping, high-spirited horse, get on your skis, and hold on for dear life. But if you cannot enjoy tolkning in the midnight sun of Sweden, here's a way to add to your winter pleasure. Biting frost and icy winds make White Horse all the more welcome. So learn how much fun it is to come out of the cold to the warm enjoyment of a glass of White Horse. For there is the good cheer of a bright fireside in each smooth sip of this world-famous Scotch. Stop at your favorite bar or package store today and call for White Horse, the perfect winter Scotch. Match it if you can!

Planning Commission Approves Drastically Revised Details With 40-Foot Setback

Drastically revised plans for the public library building at Fourth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest will be submitted to the Fine Arts Commission today, following approval by the Park and Planning Commission, yesterday.

Caught in the current economy undertow, the structure is being replanned to cost considerably less than the $7,000,000 estimated originally, it was learned.

The planning body, which is concerned with height and land use, rather than design, gave its indorsement to a 40-foot setback from Pennsylvania avenue. Previously a 27-foot setback had been authorized.

Today the Fine Arts Commission will be asked by Nathan C. Wyeth, municipal architect, to pass upon the building's modified design, as well as the setback revision. Under the economy plan, the library will occupy about half of the two-square-block site, with provision made for future expansion.

Congress last year appropriated $1,000,000 to begin construction of the building.

The commission went on record in support of the public building projects which were recommended by President Roosevlt and the Budget Bureau, but eliminated by the House yesterday when it passed the independent offices supply bill. Chief among them were a new home for the General Accounting Office, a Federal office building, a Treasury Department annex, a Bureau of Home Economics addition and a heating plant.

Progress studies on the future development of East Capitol street as a monumental thoroughfare were presented by John Nolen, jr., planning director, and William T. Partridge, consultant. The commission agreed that a 240-foot width between building lines should be adopted for what it hopes will eventually be the "Constitution avenue of east Washington."

The planners indorsed specifications, offered by the Civil Aeronautics Authority, for a service road connecting the old Richmond highway (No. 1) with Washington National Airport and which provide that it shall overpass the railroad tracks and the relocated Mt. Vernon Memorial Highway north of Four Mile Run.

Approval also was given plans for construction of two large buildings at the northern city limits of Alexandria, on the Mt. Vernon Memorial Highway; appointment of Fire Marshal Calvin Lauber to the coordinating committee; and two land transfers.

The District Commissioners will receive, from the planning agency, two squares north of the new Jefferson Junior High School for development of a playground and the National Capital Parks Office receives from the Army Engineer's Office a tract of reclaimed land on the banks of the Anacostia.

'Lincoln' and 'Gone' to Bring Out Notbales; The Lunts Stage Benefit in the Grand Manner; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

THOSE WHO HAVE experienced difficulty in securing the reserved seats they have desired for the premiere presentation of "Gone With the Wind," at Loew's Palace Theater on January 26, may find an explanation, if not a solution, of their problem in the eagerness of official Washington to view David O. Selznick's Technicolor picturization of the Margaret Mitchell novel and their characteristic alertness in making their ticket requirements known early. Probably never before in the history of the cinema in Washington has a motion picture aroused such widespread interest among the "Who's Who" of the National Capital.

BELL

When "Gone With the Wind" is unreeled for the first time on a Washington screen it will be a "name" audience that will witness it. A cross-section of those of prominence who are awaiting the local appearance of Scarlet O'Hara, Rhett Butler, Melanie, Ashley Wilkes, Aunt Pittypat, et al., on the silver sheet includes:

The Minister of Portugal; Adrian Recines, Guatamala; Ambassador Espil, of Argentina; Robert Brennan, Irish Free State; the Minister of Greece, Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black, Senators Styles Bridges, Henry F. Ashurst, Carter Glass, William H. Smathers, Charles W. Tobey, James J. Davis, Elmer Thomas, Elbert D. Thomas, Bennett C. Clark, Walter M. Pierce, Edwin C. Johnson, Josiah W. Bailey, Lister Hill, Dennis Chavez, Ernest Lundeen, John A. Donaher, John E. Miller, A. C. Schiffler, Jesse H. Jones, Eugene Meyer, District Commissioners Hazen, Allen and McCoach; Mabel Walker Willebrandt, H. M. Kanee, Harry Butcher, Gen. Edwin M. Watson, Henry A. Woodring; all members of the Georgia delegation in the Senate and House; Congressmen Caroline O'Day, Mary Norton, J. W. Wadsworth, John E. Rankin, Allen T. Treadway, Ross A. Collins, Jack Nichols, Everett M. Dirksen, Will Rogers, Joseph W. Byrns, jr., Sol Bloom and numerous others.

Members of the Southern Bachelors' Cotillion, numbering 150 gay unattached Southerners, who have planned a "Gone With the Wind" rally at the Willard immediately preceding the premiere. After sipping mint juleps, soda pop or black coffee, they will march in a body on the Palace and following the showing of "Gone With the Wind" will carry on at the Lounge Riviera.

With a similar outpouring of the cognoscenti assured for the world premiere of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," the RKO-Radio picturization of Robert E. Sherwood's Pulitzer Prize play, with Raymond Massey again in the title role which he created on the stage, at RKO-Keith's Theater next Monday night, January 22, the forthcoming week will go down in the annals of the Washington theater as something that usually is described as "epochal."

Speaking of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," Mr. Farley's peripatetic pavement-pounders has just left a copy of "Abraham Lincoln, His Life in Illinois" on the drama desk. It was written and compiled by H. E. Barker, curator, the Lincoln Fellowshhip of Southern California, and is illustrated with scenes from the picture. Being "year by year incidents from 1830 to 1865" and consisting of only 64 pages, it probably will be read before we manage to wind up that larger job of plunging through Margaret Mitchell's titanic tome.

It is no part of this column's knowledge—if any—and perhaps none of its business, to what extent the Theater Guild and the Lunts go in for benefit performances, but apparently when they do, they do it in the grand manner. Waving away the idea of a single performance for a worthy cause, the Guild and Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne will present the latter's "outrageous production" of Will Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew" for an entire week, beginning February 5, in the Alvin Theater, New York, for the benefit of the Finnish Relief Fund.

Mr. Lunt, Miss Fontanne, Richard Whorf, Sydney Greenstreet, Edith King and the 40 remaining members of the Lunts' acting company have waived their salaries for this special engagement. The Theater Guild, John C. Wilson, associated with it in the presentation, and the management of the Alvin Theater have donated all profits from the eight performances.

It will be recalled that this bizarre production of the "Shrew" was first presented at the Guild Theater, in New York, on September 30, 1935, and was an immediate hit. Early last summer, at the behest of the faculty of the University of Wisconsin, it was revived to open a new campus theater—having first played Washington—and then taken on a transcontinental tour. On Saturday afternoon, December 16, at the Biltmore Theater, in Los Angeles, the Lunts played Petruchio and Katherine for the 300th time. That is a record never before approached by any other acting duo in this play. So is a week-long benefit, barring, of course, some of the fund-raising tours put on during the Great War

Along with everything else that is going on in the way of ticket-selling and money-raising, tickets go on sale today for the special midnight performances to be staged in the Earle and Capitol theaters, January 30, at 11:30 p. m., as an important part of the Capital's celebration of the President's birthday. The entire proceeds of both performances will go to swell the fund for the combat of infantile paralysis. Both theaters will charge a uniform admission price of $1.50 Both bills will embrace the combined stage shows of the Earle and Capitol theaters, plus special added acts. Furthermore, patrons at each will be enabled to greet all of the famous personalities of stage, screen and radio, coming to town for the express purpose of participating in all of the gala events planned for January 30. Tickets for both performances are on sale at all Warner Brothers and Loew houses in the Capital.

Jubilant wire advices to their friends in Washington bring word that Mr. and Mrs. Paul Gerrits yesterday became the parents of a 7-pound son, born in St. Joseph Hospital, Houston, Tex. Paul Gerrits is that popular roller-skating comedian, who looks so much like Robert Montgomery that they might be twins. He has appeared frequently on local stages and also has served as master of ceremonies at the midnight shows in earlier President's Birthday celebrations. Paul and Elinor are so near bursting with pride that they have not gotten around to naming their son as yet.

Mrs. Louise Noonan Miller and Abe Tolkins, of the Little Theater, really have dug back into the dustiest of the archives for this one. Starting next Wednesday, they will present Charlie Chaplin, Edna Purviance and Ben Turpin in "Carmen," vintage of 1918, with piano player rendering appropriate score and other atmospheric touches. Since "Carmen" consumes only 30 minutes running time, it will be hooked up on a double bill with "Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde," Fredric March's Academy Award winner of 1932.

Signs-of-the-Times Note

We hate to do this two days in succession, but the Carolina Theater, in Southeast Washington, is announcing this double bill for a week from today:

indicating something of the expanded scope that may be expected in Robert E. In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Jan. 18.

Talked with Anna Neagle and director Herbert Wilcox yesterday, and both showed me letters from abroad, indicating that everything was quite normal again, that picture industry was humming and populace of London had turned to movies from tension of the times. "That news made me so happy," the English actress said, "for I fell so in love studying the history of Nurse Edith Cavell before I did the part that I felt like a slacker when war was declared over there and I remained here. I'd even have been glad to scrub floors."

HOPPER

"It's going to be interesting watching the reaction to 'Irene,'" Wilcox explained, "for when we traveled 21,000 miles in three weeks making personal appearances, audiences were astounded at Anna's youth. Her versatility was best emphasized in London when she played the part of the lad Peter Pan, in a legitimate theater at the same time she appeared as the aged 'Queen of Destiny' in a cinema across the street." When presented to the dowager Queen Mary before the picture, the latter thanked the actress for being such a charming "ancestor." Presentation to the Royal Family, incidentally, is done before and not after a performance, so they don't have to voice an opinion . . .

Wilcox is building up Miss Neagle's name internationally by having her do one picture here to each one she makes there. The war changed those plans however, though early next month the pair will return home to make a third picture, then Clipper-Ship it back to America for another—making them the industry's foremost Atlantic commuters. Wilcox prefers working here. "Your technical staff's are so expert they make it almost impossible for you to make a mistake" he enthuses, "in London it's just the opposite—there it's a one-man job and ten times more difficult." Coming from one of England's top ranking directors that's going some.

Looks like the only hair-raising pictures Orson Wells made out here were the stills showing him wearing a beard! "Forty Little Mothers" and all the extras on the set at Metro were delighted when Eddie Cantor went temperamental because they got an extra day's work. It seems the argument was all whether Mr. Cantor's hat brim was tipped up or down. If tipped down, he looked like a guy going into a dime dance hall. Tipped up gave him dignity. When they reached the armistice they discovered the babies' shooting hours were up for that day. The following morning Eddie appeared in a ten-gallon hat.

Congratulations to the Rev. Anderson Jardine, who had courage when he married the Duke and Duchess of Windsor and lost his parish because of it. Because he came to the rescue of Miss Winfrey, a dancer, who hurled a brick through a window on Hollywood boulevard because, for three days, she was hungry, homeless, and penniless—and preferred jail rather than accept proposals of passersby on the street. He and his wife have taken her home until she can find employment. And also to Mr. Van Norman, a prominent citizen, who has made arrangements to buy her a wardrobe for a new start in life.

Fun at the Junior Chamber of Commerce during a luncheon to successful bankrupt Sally Rand, who's become a business forecaster, and says it's no disgrace to be broke—it's only a disgrace when you stay broke; then called upon the organization to "stabilize this fantastic city of Hollywood." "Permanence and security seem to be the last thing people think about here." You're doing all right, Sally.

The first picture Jimmy Roosevelt's new company will make is "The Bat"—which is a perfectly fitting story for him, because all the Roosevelts, from papa down, are mystery yarn fans. Maybe he's making his picture to open at the Capitol—in Washington!

When Ann Rutherford returned from her personal appearance tour she ran into Edgar Selwyn. "When I was in Chicago I played at the Selwyn Theater—was that Selwyn any relation to you?" she inquired. "None," said Edgar; 'I only built the place!" . . . Gene Towne is chartering an airplane to bring a bunch of his pals on to N. Y. for the opening of Swiss Family Robinson."

Chester Morris, last year's president of the International Brothers of Magicians claims that Sardi's aren't particularly keen about the monthly meetings the magicians hold in their restaurant. At least a dozen forks and spoons disappear after every meeting!

This heart-throb just came to my attention—and as a part of Hollywood it made me wince. It all happened at the County Detention Home, in Juvenile Hall. A cunning 7-year-old boy, dressed in blue overalls was detained there for six days because his mother had scarlet fever and the child was a contact. Wistfully he pressed his nose against the glass of his window, as he perched on a chair, watching the boys "line up" in the hallway. The attendant thoughtfully gave him a broken toy to play with—for nobody in Hollywood sent him any toys. He was completely forgotten. But he was resourceful. He tore paper and built a fence—and then chided the other children by saying, "This is my yard—no one can get in," and with a sob, "and I can't get out!" Yet, a few short years ago, just like Baby Sandy today, this little lad was the toast of the town, the darling of millions—his name? Baby LeRoy!

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Jan. 18 (INS).—Maybe you wonder why Luise Rainer, twice Academy Award winner, had completely disappeared from motion pictures. I have! Now it looks as if she'll be brought back in Erich Maria Remarque's controversial novel, "Flotsam," and here is really hot news, my children: David L. Loew and Albert Lewin bought the sensational literary property from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer late Wednesday. It will be their first for United Artists.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Young Loew, who is the son of the late and beloved Marcus Loew, and Al Lewin, who for many years was Irving Thalberg's right hand man and associate producer, are negotiating with Luise to play the interesting role of Ruth Hollander, the refugee who becomes a "bird of passage" in her flight across a dozen international borders. Remarque, author also of the memorable "All Quiet on the Western Front," is being asked to write the adaptation.

There's no more popular actor around the country than Gene Autry, who is certainly much better known in cities outside of Los Angeles. But maybe now Gene will be appreciated for he's going to appear at the El Capitan Theater in "Green Grow the Lilacs," by Lynn Riggs, a romance with a dramatic background. Gene will play the guitar as well as emote, and it will be interesting to see what he does on the stage. He leaves here in a few days to appear at the President's birthday ball and Washington society will have a chance to see him at Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt's charity horse show. I almost forgot to say Gene and Republic aren't warring. He goes into "Rancho Grande" for them when he returns, doing the play after.

Susan Hayward lunched with the boy friend, Harlan Hobbs, in the Paramount commissary, and from the smiles both wore, there's little doubt this romance is serious. Susan is really being rushed at Paramount future movie promises. As soon as she finishes "Mystery Ship," she'll go into "Dance Little Lady." Joseph Santley's first picture. Originally called "Fifi and the Big, Bad Boy," it was bought from Columbia. I'm very glad that Joe Santley is going to direct Susan and I hope that he spends a lot of time with her for she is well worth developing.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Mrs. Dick Foran, the former Ruth Hollingsworth, denies that she and Dick are plotting a divorce. Just a little misunderstanding, she says, which happens in the best of families. I am glad it's nothing serious; Joan Crawford looking stunning, lunching with Rudy Valee at the Victor Hugo; Spencer Tracy heads the list for all-American screen favorites of 1939 for the second time in the poll conducted by Box-Office, a trade paper. Bette Davis is the choice for the most popular actress. The winners for 1938 were Spencer Tracy and Myrna Loy; Dan Topping is expected in Hollywood in two weeks and I am told, off the record, that one of the reasons for his visit is Marjorie Weaver. Come to think of it, she looks like his ex, Arline Judge. Wonder what happened to his romance with Virginia Peine? That was Jose Calderon, Mexican film producer, at the fights with Lupe Velez last night.

Jerry Colonna was voted "the oomph man" by Bob Hope's bevy of beautiful judges at the Troc; William Stephenson, Pat Ziegfeld's bridegroom, has all of the movie and social children in his dancing school. Marlene Dietrich's daughter is a pupil and young Margaret Roach has been taking lessons and you can see half of Hollywood's younger generation there; George Cukor and Olivia de Havilland with the David Selznick's at the Troc; a distinguished guest was pointed out as Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin; Sorry to hear that Jack Conway is in the hospital with pneumonia; Bill Powell presented his petite bride with a new car and she's taking driving lessons; the Pat O'Briens leave Friday for New York and they'll be met at the station by Jimmie Cagney; Ona Munson is headed for New York via plane.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Screen Greats Get a Break On Shoestring

Hollywood Old-Timers Tune Up New Revue For National Tour

By Frederick C. Othman
United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Jan. 18.—At 10 a. m. upon the bare stage of Gruman's Egyptian Theater—which had been loaned free of charge because none of the participants could afford to pay for it—one of the best shows we ever saw went into rehearsal.

It didn't have a star, it had five, and what stars! There were blonde Claire Windsor and dark-eyed Betty Compson for leading ladies. For comedy was Chester Conklin, looking like a white-haired banker without his droopy moustache, while for straight acting were two of the movies' greatest actors—Bryant Washburn and Kenneth Harlan.

Ten years ago any one of these celebrities could, and did, collect a king's ransom for his services on the picture stages. Today movie jobs are few and far between for them all.

Their show is so good that Columbia Artists Bureau had contracted to book it into theaters from here to New York, with dates running at least until June. In two weeks five former stars will begin to demonstrate that they're just as good performers as they ever were.

On Fractional Salaries

They will receive at least $250 per week each, which is only a fraction of what they used to earn, but if their show is a hit they all stand to garner large profits.

They're working in the meantime on a borrowed stage because nobody, not even Bob Oaklie, the impresario, has the money to rent a rehearsal hall.

Last summer Oaklie was master of ceremonies of the personal appearance unit featuring Marie Wilson. While the company was playing Milwaukee, visitors backstage wondered why they couldn't see old-time stars in person, too. They said they got to see lots of youngsters on the way up in Hollywood, but they'd especially enjoy a show featuring such performers as, say, Miss Windsor, Miss Compson, Conklin, Washburn and Harlan.

Hope Springs Eternal

Oaklie said that looked like a good idea to him. He returned to Hollywood, recruited his troupe on January 1 and went into rehearsals wherever he could borrow a place. He had nothing but hope. Neither did his troupers.

But their show worked into such a good one that West Coast theater operators became interested. So did the theatrical agents. Signature of the Columbia contract marked a happy day for all concerned—and if they can hold out until their salaries start two weeks hence, all will be well.

Their revue, which is designed for use in motion picture presentation houses, lasts one hour. Interspersed between the acts of the stars are dancing and singing turns by lesser-known performers. The show works out something like this:

Show Is Plotted

Harlan, known as one of the greatest of the screen's heavy lovers offers to give any member of the audience advice on love-making. A stooge comes up and asks for information. He even brings along his girl friend. Harlan uses her to demonstrate his technique. We never saw a funnier act.

Miss Windsor, who is blonde and beautiful and only a little more mature looking than she was when she played "Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model," does an interview on the stage with a newspaper reporter—but she winds up interviewing him.

Miss Compson and Washburn do a comedy playlet, in which a local boy and girl from each town visited will participate. Conklin, with false mustache applied, gives a monologue on pies he has met face to face. And more custard has landed on his head, perhaps, than on any other.

The show opens for a tryout next week in a Los Angeles suburb.

Three Persons Merged in One Film Figure

The voice of Sam Parker, Miami, Fla., radio announcer; the biceps of Jack Mercer, who personifies "Popeye" the sailor in films; and the features of a seventeenth century English sailor whose name has been lost with the years, were combined by motion pictures magic, to present a new film personality—that of Lemuel Gulliver, hero of "Gulliver's Travels."

Gulliver's three-fold self was christened in a sound-dubbing room at Paramount studio when the eight mute Technicolor reels of the film fantasy took voice after coming to Hollywood in completed picture form from the Florida animation rooms of Fleischer Studios, Inc., at Miami.

Announcer Supplies Voice

The announcer who allowed the Florida surf to buffet him about and roll him onto the sands as the waters of Jonathan Swift's tropical hurricane did to the original character was 29-year-old Sam Parker. Sam's outcries and Sam's voice in the later dialogue lines the sound element for the character.

But for a likeness, the artists had already agreed upon an adaptation from the old woodcuts of Dean Swift's original eighteenth-century editions. For this woodcut, a curly-haired young English seaman had modeled. The seaman's name disappeared a century ago.

"Popeye" Models Action

For the heat of Gulliver's dramatic action the robust physical vigor of Jack (Popeye) Mercer was modeled for the closeups.

This filtering of Parker's voice into the lips of the hero drawn by the artists, will proceed at full speed in the sound-dubbing rooms of Paramount studio for the next few weeks, in order that Gulliver may keep his date with the American public at simultaneous premieres in 56 key cities.

DOROTHY LAMOUR

To be seen on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater, beginning today, in Lloyd C. Douglas' "Disputed Passage," and later this month to be in Washington in person as one of the guest stars for the President's birthday celebrations. The exotic Miss Lamour is the first of Hollywood's feminine luminaries to accept the invitation of the entertainment committee for January 30

Varied Enterprises Engage Local Amateur Acting Groups

By Richard L. Coe

Plans for the thirteenth annual One-Act Play Tournament for the amateur dramatic groups of Washington and vicinity are now under discussion. The newly organized Community Center and Playgrounds Department, under the joint control of the Board of Education and the District Commissioners, has placed itself at the service of all groups interested.

Tentatively, the two weeks beginning March 25 have been reserved for the tournament. As in previous years, the contesting one-act plays will be performed in the Roosevelt High School auditorium, with three plays being given each evening. Naturally, the number of organizations participating will determine the length of the preliminaries and the number of evenings to be devoted to the contest each week.

Since interest this season has been keener than ever before in the contest, better productions and more of them are already predicted. The groups which so far have indicated their interest and their representatives are:

Many Groups Interested

The Eckington Players, Miss Pauline E. Oak; the Jewish Community Center, Arthur Reef; the Roosevelt Players, Rhodes K. Scherer; the Arts Club, Mrs. Maud Howell Smith; the Troupers of East Washington Community Center, L. Zaff Rogers; the Fellowship Players, Ashley B. Gurney and the Misses Ruth Childers and Charlotte Brown; the Agriculture Department Players, Paul Hammacher; the Department of the Interior Theater Group, F. Prevost Holmes; the Langley Lambs and the Wilson Windjammers, Forney Reese; the Players Club of Central Community Center, the Misses Edith Evens and Libby Taylor; the Players of the American Association of University Women, Miss Margaret Graham; the Rock Creek Players, Frank M. Stuart; the Peppertons, George E. Wilcox and Miss Peggy Stout; the Dramati Group of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Grant Stetten and the St. Paul's Players, Hubert A. O'Boyle.

Miss Sibyl Baker, director of Community Centerss, is the department's representative in charge of the tournament and her staff of advisers includes Miss Bess Davis Schreiner, Mrs. Maude Howell Smith and Denis Connell.

Students of Rose Robison Cohen's Children's Studios of Speech and Drama will present the concluding recital of their midwinter season on Sunday afternoon at the Grafton Hotel. Ranging in age from 4 to 14, the children will present scenes from three Shakespearian plays, "Hamlet," "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and "Romeo and Juliet;" the Ferber-Kaufman comedy, "Stage Door;" "Mary, Queen of Scots," and a one-act play, "Ten Minutes by the Clock."

When the Blackfriars Guild presents Sutton Vane's "Outward Bound" in St. Paul's auditorium on Tuesday, January 30, for a three-day run, the role of the worldly Mrs. Cliveden-Banks will be played by an "amateur" who promises to be more than just that. She is Miss Nell Fleming, making her first appearance in Washington after many years' experience with professional English companies in Australia. While down under, Miss Fleming also had her own repertoire company with which she made a record of three consecutive years at one theater, changing the bill each week. For the past eight years Miss Fleming has been with the Australian Broadcasting Commission.

Gertrude Heagney will have the role of Mrs. Midget, which Laurette Taylor played so memorably at the beginning of the season at the National. J. Loren Freund, Dorothy O'Donnell, Julien Zier, Paul A. Newlord, Rawley C. Donohoe and Sidney Bassler complete the cast. Mary Olive O'Connell, of the Institute of Dramatic Arts at Catholic University, will direct.

When former Ambassador Saito, of Japan, brought his children to a morning performance of "Rip Van Winkle" at the National Theater some years ago he remarked: "Well, I remember the story of 'Rip,' the entertaining old inebriate dear to the hearts of children, and I welcome the opportunity to introduce him to my family."

This classic figure of Washington Irving's, apparently one well-known to the Orient, will return to the National Theater Saturday morning, February 10, as this season's fourth local production by the Children's Theater of New York. Remaining seats are on sale by Clare Tree Major's group at 1734 F street.

With but two performances to go for "Criminal at Large," Director Day Tuttle, of the Civic Theater, is ending his week of comparative rest. No tryouts, no rehearsals were on the calendar of the nationally known producer of "Family Portrait." But if you must get in touch with him this evening or tomorrow night, the most logical spot to look would be row "W" at the Wardman Park Theater. Like any good director on his night off, he's watching his own production.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Jan. 18.

KILIAN, the German bike rider and six-day race champ, who had been conscripted into the Nazi army, will arrive in this country on the 20th. Only one man will await him at the pier—Trainer Vincent Denarie, a Frenchman . . . A movie course, similar to the drama courses at Harvard and Yale, will be added to the C. C. N. Y. curriculum at the next school term . . . The Hakim Bros., who produced a series of French prize-winning movies, will leave for Hollywood this week to confer with Maurice Evans about screening his uncut "Hamlet" in New York . . . The British Government this week ordered 2,000,000 copies of Harold Nicolson's "Why Britain Is at War"—to distribute among its soldiers, who might like to know.

GREGORY RATOFF is directing "I Was an Adventuress," and in the cast are Vera Zorina, Fritz Feld, Peter Lorre and Eric von Stroheim. And, so, over the studio door Ratoff has placed a sign: "No English Spoken Here" . . . Von Stroheim assured Gregory: "I will cooperate with you completely. When I'm in a picture I put myself entirely in the director's hands" . . . "Good," Ratoff beamed. "Who directed your last picture?" . . . Von Stroheim bowed and answered: "I did."

PROF E. G. CAPLIN of London University, who was exchange professor at Cornell, will publish an American weekly similar to London's let-wing political publication, The Week. His backer is one of the Whitney kin . . . Bill Dodd, jr., son of the former Ambassador to Germany, has completed the first volume of his father's diary about Berlin.

MERRY FAHRNEY CASSINI went from night club to night club Monday evening entertaining a party of friends, and at each place she offered a $1,000 bill in payment of the check . . . At 3:30, after consuming $50 worth of wine and food, Merry again proffered her $1,000 bill. "It's the smallest bill I have," she yawned, "and I need cab fare home" . . . John Perona went to his downstairs safe and brought the change, in six bills. One bill was for $500, four were $100 bills and one for $50 . . . "Here's your change," he stated. "That's the smallest I have."

DWIGHT WIMAN announced yesterday that a young Hindu student named Sregdor Drahcir had submitted the prize-winning title, "Higher and Higher," for the new Rodgers and Hart show. The "Hindu" was Richard Rodgers, whose name was spelled backwards . . . Mayor LaGuardia will find support for his contention that Hollywood can make its pictures here in the activities at the Fox studios on Tenth avenue. A set is being constructed there to shoot all the Carmen Miranda scenes for "The South American Way" . . . Heywood Hale Broun is editing a book of his father's columns. He'll include those columns his father thought were the best ones.

JOHN F. CASSIDY, one of the ringleaders arrested Sunday for seditious conspiracy, co-managed a successful campaign for a Brooklyn jurist last November . . . Henry Stix, vice president of the Associated Gas & Electric Co., is favored for the job of co-trustee of that company . . . Robert Kent, the screen actor, is relinquishing his membership in the Screen Actors Guild, intent upon pursuing a career in the theater . . . Philip Van Doren Stern, whose play, "The Man Who Shot Lincoln," opened last night was brought into the theater by physicians. He's ill, but wouldn't miss the premiere.

J. EDGAR HOOVER used a new car, with bullet-proof glass 3 inches thick, in making his "Christian Front" roundup. The first civilian to ride in that car was Brenda Frazier, Sunday night . . . Backstage at the Guild Theater Monday night a reporter asked Eleanor Roosevelt what she thought of "The World We Make." "I'd like to be the first to report what you thought of the show," said the reporter. Eleanor replied: "Oh, I can't tell you. I'm a newspaper woman" . . . The International Casino lost $230,000 before it closed. The new proprietors, who own the Argonne and Trianon ballrooms in Chicago, will pay the night club owners $60,000 a year for six years to convert it into a dance hall.

JANE WYATT and Sam Jaffe addressed the students and faculty of Queens College about the movie industry. "I'll give you one example of how strange is the business of making movies," said Miss Wyatt, turning to Jaffee. "I played Mr. Jeffe's ward in "Lost Horizons' and we both were featured after Ronald Colman. But let's confess, Mr. Jaffe. We've never met, spoken to or seen each other until this very moment. Hello, then—and welcome to Flushing's Shangri-La."

Shooting 'In Time' Liked by Morgan

For the first time in his screen career Frank Morgan has made a picture in its proper sequence and found it an enjoyable departure from the usual procedure of jumping around from set to set and scene to scene, not infrequently starting at the end and working back to the beginning. The film is "The Shop Around the Corner," starring Margaret Sullavan and James Stewart, which Ernst Lubitsch directed in chronological order, from the first scene to the last.

"All pictures, whenever possible, should be made this way," Morgan said. "It gives an actor more of a chance to develop a characterization as he goes along, adding those touches that often make the difference between a fair and a good performance, and work toward a logical climax. Production and schedule requirements unfortunately make it impossible in the majority of cases to do this, but from an acting standpoint, it is the most desirable method."

HERE! NOW! THE DRAMA NO WOMAN COULD EVER TELL!

"MY WIFE or the baby? Why can't they save them both?"

HERE IS a film so rich, so real, so human . . . it will grip your very soul! One of the most important productions of this, or any other, season. It is a story every mother will want her daughter to know . . . the story of all creation in ninety minutes of pulse-pounding, heart-stirring drama!

THE WORLD MUST KNOW THEIR STORIES!
by Head Nurse Bowers

GALE PAGE as HEAD NURSE BOWERS

I am head nurse in a maternity ward. I have seen all kinds of women come to meet their rendezvous with life! A murderess who would never see her baby again . . . hard women who hate their babies—before they are born . . . young wives, frightened in the face of the miracle of being a Mother . . . housewives, chorus girls, heiresses. But once the maternity ward doors swing closed behind them, they are all women facing life's greatest experience! I know their stories as no others do—and I am going to tell it to the world!

Now Warner Bros. tell this thrilling story proudly, tenderly, beautifully. It is a picture you won't want to miss. An experience you'll not soon forget.

Little Wins Medal in 'Frisco Match Play Open

The Washington Post Sports

20 WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, JANUARY 19, 1940 X*

Cliff Spencer, Coffey Fail To Qualify

Little Breaks Course Mark With 69, 139; Guldahl, Runyan, Shute Over Limit

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Jan. 18.—Breaking par and the hearts of his competitors with a sensational 69, Lawson Little posted a 36-hole total of 139 today to win qualifying honors in the $5,000 San Francisco Match Play Open golf tournament.

His 3-under-par round, clubbed out on a course made tough by chilly weather, was the lowest turned in during the two-day qualifying tests which trimmed the field to 32 entries for match play rounds.

The score equaled the competitive record for the Lake Merced layout. Little joined Horton Smith, Oak Park, Ill.; Ky Laffoon, Chicago, and Ben Coltrin, home professional, as those who have hit 69 under tournament fire here.

Wins $325

Winner of the British and United States amateur crowns, in 1934-35 but long since turned professional, Little reached peak form in leading a formidable field to the finish today—a feat that earned him $325.

The stocky Bretton Woods, N. H., representative put together nines of 34-35, as against the pair of 36's listed as standard golf. He had a 70 yesterday and shared the first-round lead with two others.

Only two weeks ago he won the Los Angeles Open, an achievement that was worth $1,250.

Tremendous wood shots enabled Little to reach greens on the longer holes in two, while most others were using three blows. He birdied the 517-yard first and the 495-yard third, both par 5 stretches.

He missed a 4-foot putt, for a birdie 2, on the eighth, but came back with birdies on the tenth, twelfth and thirteenth. On the tenth his ball stopped 3 inches short of an eagle 3.

Spencer Fails

Cliff Spencer, Washington, D. C., professional, was two strokes over the playoff limit with a 151 total. Spencer added a 75 to his first day's 76 for a score too high for the match play rounds. Rut Coffey, Winchester, Va., pro, rallied with a 71, one of the day's best rounds, but his previous 79 placed his total one stroke over the 149's that played off for the last four match play berths. The scores of 148 and under were in without a playoff.

Jim Demaret of Houston, Tex., carding 71-70—141, was second low qualifier, and Craig Wood, Mamaroneck, N. Y., finished third with a pair of 71's and a two-round total of 142.

Five players—Tom Lopresti, Sacramento; John Dilaure, Los Angeles; Jim Thomson, Chicopee, Kans.; Jimmy Hines, Great Neck, Long Island, and Vic Ghezzi—tied at 149 for the last four qualifying places. In the playoff, Ghezzi took a 6 on the par 5 first hole and was eliminated

Guldahl Misses

Among the top-flight players who failed to qualify was the former United States open champion, Ralph Gudahl, who had a 78 today and a medal score of 154. He was joined on the side lines by such notables as E. J. Harrison, Little Rock, Ark., at 150; Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y., 155; Denny Shute, Huntington, W. Va., former P. G. A. champion, 152; Ky Laffoon, Chicago, who failed to turn in his second round card, and Olin Dutra, Los Angeles, 151.

Not an amateur landed among the qualifiers. Squeezed out were National Champion Marvin (Bud) Ward, of Spokane, at 152; Wilford Wehrle, Racine, Wis., 160, and John Dawson, Hollywood, 151.

Dick Metz, Oak Park, Ill., 1939 San Francisco winner, and Byron Nelson, present United States open titleholder, qualified easily at 144, the former with 71-73. Nelson reversed the figures.

Tony Tobias, D. C. Fighter, Winner

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Jan. 18.—Tony Tobias, Washington, was floored once in the second round and twice in the third tonight but went on to win an 8-round decision over Woody Boord, Uniontown, Pa. Tobias weighed 143, Boord 139.

In the 8-round semifinal Red Cochrane, 139, Elizabeth, N. J., drubbed Norman Herdman, 142, Toronto.

Ahearn Gets Stadium for Outdoor Fights

Homework for Lee Savold, Des Moines Fightin' Heavy

Resting between fights in his campaign for bouts with Max Baer and then Joe Louis, Lee Savold, the new heavyweight hope from Des Moines, Iowa, reads to Richard Lee Savold, aged 4, and Daughter Sandra, 2, after a snowball battle in the front yard. Competition From Turner Expected

Ex-Partners Plan RivalShows in Griffith Stadium, Riverside As 'Spur' to Boxing

By Al Hailey

The local boxing business yesterday appeared due for a large-scale revival this summer as Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn announced he had obtained "exclusive rights" to Griffith Stadium for his outdoor fight program and Promoter Joe Turner disclosed intentions to investigate possibilities of a competing fistic enterprise in Riverside Stadium.

Undaunted by a disastrous summer season which last year led to Turner pulling out of the boxing partnership, Ahearn said he plans to stage shows once every two weeks and bring in some of the Nation's top fight talent.

At present, he plans to get off to a gala start with Ceferino Garcia, New York State's middleweight champion of the world, and Ken Overlin, leading National Boxing Association contender, meeting for the title.

Return Bout Assured

A return match between Featherweight Champion Joey Archibald and Harry Jeffra, of Baltimore, for the 126-pound crown is virtually assured, Ahearn said.

Less definite about his plans was Turner, whose only connection with the struggling fight business since the summer has been renting his wrestling arena out to his former matchmaker.

"I am not certain yet what I'm going to do this summer, but I expect to have a talk with S. G. Leoffler at Riverside Stadium about promoting fights there," Turner said.

"The boxing business right now looks pretty bad, and I don't know whether I want to sink any more into it. However, I have been talking to a lot of people about it, and they feel that a new face might bring about a reversal for the better," Turner added.

Only Verbal Agreement

Turner said he has been promised the "inside track" at outdoor fight promotion in Riverside, owned by Leoffler, but as far as an "agreement" goes there is none yet. His only contract with Clark Griffith last summer was a verbal agreement.

"Mr. Griffith called me up recently and asked me if I wanted to use the stadium for fights again this year, but I told him I hadn't decided whether I would promote fights again," Turner said. "I did tell him I might want to use it if I got a fight I thought might be too big for Riverside."

Along with announcement he will promote in Griffith Stadium, Ahearn anticipated competition by revealing that he plans to install a 40-cent minimum admission, instead of the usual $1.15, and "go just as low as any competitor."

As competitors, the former boxing partners still would be the best of friends, Ahearn hastily assured. When Turner broke off after the Archibald-Jeffra title fight last September, it was caused by continuous loss of money and not a rift in harmonious relations.

Turner's losses in the fight business up to that featherweight fight, which saw Archibald retain his title on a highly unpopular decision, amounted to $4,500. Since starting out as promoter and matchmaker, Ahearn's enterprise is almost $1,000 in the red.

The pudgy matchmaker has been working feverishly to get "big-name" fighters lined up for the summer program and expects to bring in Heavyweights Bob Pastor, Red Burman and Arthuro Godoy, if he makes a good fight with Champion Joe Louis next month, and Vitorio Campello and numerous others.

Conn Defends Title in Miami Next Month

Lesnevich Gets Chance Under Jacobs' Banner; Detroit Bout Booked

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 18.—The light-heavyweight title situation, strictly a New York-Pittsburgh monopoly since Billy Conn took over, was spread out over new territory today by Promoter Mike Jacobs.

"Uncle Mike" announced two 175-pound championship parties, the first for Miami during the last week in February and the second for Detroit in March.

No. 1 of these get-togethers will have Conn defending against Gus Lesnevich, rugged slugger from Edgewater, N. J., who was outpointed by the Pittsburgh Irishman in a previous challenge last fall. This bout will be held, Jacobs announced, in the Orange Bowl Stadium in Miami during the week of February 26 for the benefit of the President's Birthday Infantile Paralysis Fund.

Winner Is Booked

The Detroit doings will come off in the Olympic Stadium in March. The winner of the Miami tussle will be the party of the first part. Opposing him will be the victor in the February 2 bout in Madison Square Garden here between Fred Apostoli, the one-time belting bellhop from San Francisco, and Melio Bettina, of Beacon, N. Y., who lost the light-heavyweight championship to Conn last summer. Two weeks ago, Apostoli nosed out Bettina here in a close, tough 12-round brawl.

Definite dates for both the Miami and Detroit affairs will be announced in a few days, Jacobs said.

Defeated All Three

Conn has defeated all three of the other fellows in this fistic round-robin. He outpointed Apostoli, then middleweight champion, in two red-hot fights a year before taking the 175-pound crown from Bettina last July. Then he came from behind to top Bettina in the first defense of his crown in Pittsburgh last fall, and followed that up by winning a decision over Lesnevich here.

A skilled boxer, he has decided to try his luck among the heavyweights exclusively, beginning this summer, with his eye on a title tussle with Joe Louis. As a result, he has made up his mind to clear up any "loose ends" in the 175-pound division, so far as challengers are concerned, in the two bouts announced today.

Heirs Begin Struggle To Keep White Sox

Sale Would Be Contrary to Wish Of Comiskey, Says Widow; Only 50 Shares Held Outside of Family

Chicago, Jan. 18—Heirs of the late J. Louis Comiskey today began a fight to prevent sale of the Chicago White Sox as demanded by the First National Bank of Chicago, executor of Comiskey's estate.

A long, bitter court battle is in prospect with chances that Jimmy Dykes, manager of the famous team, will be in the ball park next summer yelling instructions to his players before it is decided. The litigation may require months.

Comiskey died July 18, 1939, leaving his estate in trust.

Attorneys for the bank filed a petition in probate court requesting permission to sell the club, which its founder, Charles A. Comiskey, the famed "old Roman," established 40 years ago without investing a cent, and subsequently turned into a $2,000,000 property. The franchise in the American League, at the time it was organized, was given Comiskey.

The bank based its action on a clause in the Comiskey will which gives the trustees permission to sell if, in their opinion, it is "prudent and desirable." It is the opinion of the trustees, according to the petition, that the "best interest" of the heirs will be served by the sale. Their opinion is based on the belief that baseball is "hazardous, the income therefore uncertain, and its stock unsuitable as a trust investment." The petition also set forth that J. Louis Comiskey's widow and children are largely dependent on the income derived from the trust.

Mrs. Grace Comiskey, the widow, through her attorney, declared the bank's move would be contested. She asked for a continuance to provide time to answer. The hearing was set for February 29. None of the Comiskeys was in court.

There are 7,450 shares of White Sox stock, each with a $100 par value. Harry Grabiner, secretary of the club, owns 50 shares. Mrs. Comiskey was willed half of the remaining shares and the other half was divided among her three children—Dorothy, 22; Gracie Lou, 18, and Charles, 13.

The widow contended the sale was contrary to the wish of J. Louis Comiskey, who expressed the desire in his will that none of the stock be sold until his only son attained the age of 35.

Sale of the club would be subject to the approval of the American League, which, under its constitution, reserves the right to pass on the eligibility of purchasers.

"Until we are told to go ahead and find a suitable group of purchasers, there is nothing we can do about it," William Harridge, president of the American League, said.

Roy Baker Quits as 'Skins' Trainer

Turk Edwards to Act As Assistant Coach; BakerAccepts Movie Job

Roy Baker, four years assistant coach and trainer of the Redskins, resigned yesterday, General Manager Jack Espey announced.

Coincidentally, Espey announced that Turk Edwards, who yesterday signed a 1940 contract, would serve as both player and assistant coach.

Edwards will not take over Baker's duties as trainer. A new trainer will be engaged before the Redskins start practice next fall.

Baker relinquished his post with the Redskins to accept a year-round position with the Warner Studios, in Hollywood, with which he has been affiliated in the off season as physical director. He has been associated with the Redskins since 1936, when he was engaged by Head Coach Ray Flaherty as first assistant.

Formerly a star at Southern California, Baker won fame in professional football as a teammate of Ernie Nevers in the backfield of the Chicago Cardinals.

Next season will mark Edwards' eighth consecutive year with the Redskins as a star tackle. Five times he has been named on All-League teams. A 260-pounder, Edwards last season staged a stirring comeback after a dull year in 1938. Espey declared that Edwards' coaching duties will in no way interfere with his play at tackle or captain of the Redskins.

Ailing Eagles Postpone Game With Skeeters

Action Is Off Tonight; Club to Rest Until Battle Next Tuesday

With three members of the Washington Eagles playing despite injuries and the entire squad in a general run-down condition, tonight's game here with the Jersey Skeeters of River Vale, N. J., has been postponed until March 3. The latter date falls on Sunday and will be the first Sunday tilt at home for the team.

Len Burrage is still suffering from a punctured right foot, Bill Cairns from a gash in his leg, while Paul Corteau is nursing a sprained wrist, an X-ray revealed yesterday. Cairns did not accompany the team to River Vale last night.

Dr. Roy Dunmire, team physician, announced early in the day the club would probably be in shape to take the ice, but Owner S. G. Leoffler decided against the game last night. The Finnish Relief Fund was to have benefited from 10 per cent of the gross receipts.

Thus the Eagles will profit by their longest rest of the season, not scheduled for action until Tuesday night when the Baltimore Orioles invade Riverside Stadium.

Walters to Get 'Player of Year' Award at Dinner

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Bucky Walters, Cincinnati's ace hurler who won 27 and lost 11 last year, will be awarded the player of the year trophy at the annual dinner of the New York Chapter of the Baseball Writers Association of America, February 4.

WALTERS

Walters was second only to his teammate, Paul Derringer, in games won and lost and topped the National League hurlers in earned runs with 2.29 per game. Jimmy Foxx, of the Boston Red Sox, won the trophy last year.

Natie Mann Wins

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 18 (INS).—Nathan Mann, of Hamden, tonight successfully defended his New England heavyweight championship title by winning over Eldridge Eatman, Norwalk Negro, by a technical knockout in the third round of a scheduled 12-round bout.

The referee stopped the fight after 1 minute and 12 seconds of the third round.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

"A natural, no less," quoth Goldie Ahearn, sucking the remnants of a cornbeef on pumpernickle from his teeth. "For my next show I am giving them molder. Two big Eye-talian heavyweights who don't know the meaning from the word which is quit. And now what I am wanting, please, some writeups in the papers my very good friend."

POVICH

Who are these two guys?

"I'm telling you, and you will be surprised. For my Monday show I got Italo Colonello and Mike Alfano. Like a pair of machines they punch. Believe me I am surprised that I got them. Everybody knows from Colonello. Such a puncher. You should live so long as to see a better puncher. By special permission from Mussolini he's in this country."

What has Mussolini got to do with it?

"I'm explaining, and you ask questions. I'm telling you he's from Italy. Who's promoting over there? Mussolini, that's who. In Italy everybody is tied up with Mussolini. From the Italian army comes Colonello and nobody gets away from the Italian army until Mussolini gives him the nod, understand?"

Well, roughly, but can he fight?

In Mussolini's Army

"Always your interrupting. For six years he was in Mussolini's army, in Ethiopium, in Spain, in Albania, who can tell where Mussolini is going to send his army? Some days he wakes up and says to himself maybe I should send my army somewhere, and then the papers are full of it. Since he was 16, from the cradle almost, Colonello is in Mussolini's army. And anudder thing.

What?

"Well, I'm telling you he's a toff guy, this Colonello. For two years he is one of the fools who is in the army on skis. In the Alps he is in Mussolini's army. Don't tell me you don't know from the Alps. And with skis, yet. I am in France in the mud and I squawk, but if I am in Alps on skis you should hear me."

Who did he ever lick, and I don't mean Mussolini.

"I am knowing you will ask me from that. Like a flash I am knowing it. Who did he lick? Believe me, he has licked the best. In eight months in this country, promoters are crying for him. A heavyweight with a punch, he is. Ask Johnston."

Who is Johnston?

Colonello in Pastor's Camp

"Ach, such ignorance. Who could it be but Jimmy Johnston, his manager. Johnston don't fool with no bums, you should know from that. In Bob Pastor's camp, Johnston found Colonello and signed him up. I am now telling you something confidential and if it leaks out, you know how things leak out, don't say you talked to me, understand?"

Sure, let it pop.

"Well, don't say I told you or my name is mud with Johnston who is trying to build up his Pastor bum for anudder Louis fight. But I know for a fact so help me as I am sitting in this joint, that Colonello is in Pastor's training camp last summer making Pastor look like a bum before the Louis fight in Detroit."

Honest?

"Sure, honest, I'm telling you ain't I. Like a bum no less, he is making Pastor look. He hits Pastor on the schnoz with a straight left and——"

Hey, that hurt. Never mind the illustrations.

Confidential Matter

"Soch a dunce I am, my very good friend. Well, what's the difference. I am telling you about Colonello. In and out, in and out, he hits Pastor with a jab and dances away. Then he crosses him with a right. I tell you, he is making Pastor look bad and Johnston neturally tells him to lay off. Can you blame him for not wanting Pastor ruined, I'm asking you. And here's anudder thing, but this should be confidential, understand?

Sure, this confidential, that confidential, from everything it's confidential—cripes, you've got me talking that way.

"So you are making fun from me, so what. I have my business, you have your business, an everything is o. k. But I'm telling you from Colonello. Confidential, he thinks he can lick Pastor and I would not be surprised from it. Now do you know what I mean."

All right, but who is this fello whe's fighting?

"Alfano? Now you're talking. A roff, toff club fighter what don't know how to loaf in the ring. A positive bear tiger. He is fighting the bast. With Red Burman, Jarl Johnson, Gus Dorazio and Nick Fiorente he had fights. The Garden is crazy about him. Comiskey he licked."

Pat Comiskey, the guy who had lost only one fight?

"Did I say that? Did I say that he licked Pat Comiskey I said he licked Comiskey. Sure he licked Comiskey. He licked Bill Comiskey, Pat's brother."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Jan. 18.—"I see Looey fight t'ree, four dimes," Arturo Godoy, the Chilean who has the dubious honor of meeting the champion early next month, told us at the boxing commission yesterday. "I see Looey fight Brad-dock, Farr, Brescia, Shar-key and that otter fallow, E-tore. He luke too toff only once, when he fight Braddock. Otter times, just so and so."

CONSIDINE

Did Godoy, like Schmeling, see "somezings"—a weakness in Louis?

"Yes, yes, I do. When he do what-you-call . . ."

"He's seen something but he ain't telling," Al Weill, Godoy's manager, interrupted. "He seen it, but he ain't broadcasting it."

"That's right," the squat, rough-faced fighter agreed. "What my manager say. Some manager . . . Look, I get greep on him and t'row him on floor. I can rassle good. Look," and he yanked at the cigar arm of Weill.

Honestly Isn't Kidding About 'Looey'

"Cud it out," Weill yelled. "You'll get hoit . . . He's a great kidder, this Godoy," Weill told us. "Always clowning like this. He ain't kidding when he tells you he's not afraid of Louis, neither. When I cabled him to come up here he didn't do what them other bums do—start yelling about how much he'd get. All he said in his cable was 'I except pervided bring wif.'"

Godoy jabbed us in the chest. "If Looey gone to knock me out, why I train two months and eight days? If I think for a quick knockout, I no train hard. Train hard work. If I think he paunch me, quick, and it's all over, I train only a week so. No, I train t'ree months almost 'fore I really fight him February 9. I go to the New Yersey mountings for good air to . . ." He turned to a Chilean companion-interpreter and gave off a rush of his native tongue. "He means acclimate himself," the man explained.

We asked him something about his fights with Tony Galento, two bits of homeric horseplay that charmed New York and Chicago on Arturo's previous visit. The Chilean won both decisions, absorbing Tony's pre-pneumonia punches and giving back enough to win.

Galento's Rough Stuff Surprised Godoy

"Some fallow!" Arturo said, holding his head. "First time we fight—he so toff, roff-stoff. Four rounds he do every to me. He poosh, he bott, he bock-hand, he stop on foot. Donovan stop in a'between us and he say 'Galento, you cud that stoff, I give fight to Godoy.' Galento keep doing, and finally I come back to corner after four round and say to Whitey Bimstein, 'what I do, what I do, with man who fights like he do?' Bimstein, he say 'do.'"

We asked him what he meant and he impatiently repeated, 'do. Do. Do like Galento do.' I'm glad very much to hear that. Very much. So I go out and the first thing I say a bad word, and I hit him in his eye. Cut. Then I say more bad words. Ter-rible. And I fight like Galento do, and next round he say, when he clinch, 'why you getting mad me Godoy? I'm only kid you.' How you like that Galento? Some bull.

"After the fight we go to dressing room and his mad. I say, 'you mad for you lose the decision,' and he wants to fight again. He push me, like this, and I say 'yeah, all right, Galento, come on . . .' But fallows come up and they say 'don't be zap—fighting for nuthen.'

Jersey Fight Doesn't Interest Chilean

"Pretty soon we fight again in Chicago. Now I know him. I know what to do. I give roof-stoff, bing, bang—plenty toff. And when we near the finish he hug me and say 'we cud fight again in New Yersey, huh? Plenty dough New Yersey.' I say 'okay-doke we fight New Yersey, but you have raffrey, jodges, people all for you in New Yersey. Okay-doke, you have them, just let me kick you, boom like this, and bit you, aaaarh like this, and we even.' So we don't fight New Yersey. Someday I like take Galento in Chile. Hah, I would like to fight in Chile with Galento. Then he would see real ruff-stoff plenty."

It was time for Godoy to go back to his Summitt training camp. "You want some dough, Godoy?" Weill asked him.

"Dough? Dough! sure, plenty."

Weill reached down into his pocket, fumbled around in there a moment, and extracted a quarter. He handed it to Godoy with a loud laugh. "Don't blow that all in this week?" Al guffawed.

"Okay-doke," Godoy said, seriously, pocketing the money. He tipped his hat and went back to continue his training for "Looey."

Central-Anacostia Game Tops Interhigh Program Tonight

Riders Meet Eastern in Other Game

Gonzaga and Wilson In Feature of 5 Outside Games; Johnnies Meet Blair

Whether Central basketers were finally in the groove, or profiting from a complete Eastern collapse when they upset the defending champions Tuesday, may be settled tonight when the regular Friday night interhigh doubleheader is staged at Tech gym.

Central meets Anacostia, loser of both its series' starts, but still considered the scrappiest of the seven teams. In the other half Roosevelt tangles with Eastern. First game starts at 7:30.

The largest schoolboy gathering of the season will probably turn out, attracted by the possibility of further upsets or at least the sight of two closely-contested scraps. Both games will be toss-ups.

Roosevelt, due to the stunning triumph of Central over Eastern, takes a short series' lead into its second start this week. The Riders beat Tech, 37-20, at the same time that Eastern was being trimmed. Yet the unpredictable defending champs are as likely to win tonight as they are to lose by 20 points.

Central rates the favorite over Anacostia on the strength of its beating of Eastern, the team which beat Anacostia by 5 points, but no one has been convinced yet that Anacostia isn't the better of the two. Its individual players rank better than Central's and it has a polish the Mount Pleasanters lack.

Five outside games will supplement interhigh action today. Gonzaga and Wilson come to grips in the afternoon at the Presidents' gym, and at the same time Landon takes its search for its third victory to Hagerstown to meet St. James. St. John's plays host to Montgomery Blair and Mount Rainier clashes with Laurel on the latter's floor. The only other night game is between Bethesda and Richard Montgomery at Rockville.

Brewers Buy Rabin; Beat Barons, 36-25

Ex-Philadelphia Sphas Ace Leads Heurich To Easy Victory

Special Dispatch to The Post

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Jan. 18.—After a long-distance conversation with Owner Eddie Gottlieb of the Philadelphia Sphas last night, Sponsor Chris Heurich, jr., closed an important American Basketball League player purchase when he announced the acquisition of Phil Rabin, outstanding American Basketball League scorer over a long span of years, for his Washington Heurich Brewers.

Rabin, who scored the amazing total of 1,300 points while leading the American Basketball League's individual scorers for three consecutive years, comes to Washington in exchange for one of the largest cash considerations paid for an American League player since the early 1930's.

Heurich, who has been seeking Rabin since early season, instructed Coach Mack Posnack to make immediate use of Rabin last night if salary terms could be adjusted. This arranged, the former Long Island University wizard provided much of the punch that enabled Washington to defeat Wilkes-Barre, 36 to 25.

Rabin teamed up with Dubiler in a 19-point attack, Rabin scoring 4 field goals and a foul as against four tosses from scrimmage and two free throws for Dubilier.

Rabin is to accompany the Brewers to Frederick, Md., tonight for an exhibition with the National Business College's Big Five, of Roanoke, Va., at Frederick, Md., and will make his local debut with the Brewers against the Golden Eagles tomorrow night at Heurich Gymnasium, 8:30 o'clock.

He is to play his first American Basketball League game with the Brewers here Sunday afternoon, when the Wilkes-Barre Barons are met in Heurich Gymnasium at 2:30.

Natie Brown in Comeback, Meets Monday Night's Fight Winner

Has Been Training For Six Weeks at Jewish Community Gym

NATIE BROWN

Natie Brown will come out of his shell of retirement, lay down his cigar and step into the ring at Turner's arena January 29 to put on a glove for the first time in two years with the winner of Monday night's eight-round bout between Italo Colonello and Mike Alfano.

This drastic action was decided upon by the battle-scarred heavyweight yesterday as he reflected that he might as well make use of the six weeks of steady training he has been undergoing at the Jewish Community Center.

The comeback campaign launched in the fall by Marty Gallagher, Foggy Bottom warrior, inspired Natie to talk of a return, but it was his daily workouts sparring with Maynard Daniels which convinced him, he said.

"Why should I fight Gallagher again," he demanded officiously yesterday. "Everybody knows he's a bum; I've beat him every time we've met and any way there's just nothing to gain by beating that guy again."

Brown, who has appeared in a scorner's role at all the recent heavyweight fights in Turner's Arena, has on each occasion hinted that he could take the entire crop and rap their heads together. Natie dropped the fight business after his last venture left him the knockout victim of Tony Galento in Detroit.

Writers Are Reluctant to Admit Sonja Henie No Longer 'Sports'

Still Crowd Pressbox Although She Belongs On Theatrical Page

SONJA HENIE

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 18.—Sonja Henie may have given up sports—but sports refuses to give up the blonde symphony on skates.

And the answer may be that sports writers, at least the New York variety, are stuffy sentimentalists who refuse to admit when they're licked.

That's the only reasonable explanation for the current treatment of the cute little trick who was once an Olympic figure skating champion, but who now is a lovely lady in the best Hollywood tradition.

Miss Henie and her colorful ice revue—purely a theatrical spectacle and a terrific one, at that—this week are packing Madison Square Garden where hockey homicides, boxing bouts and basketball battles more often bloom.

But the New York writers, having once accepted Sonja as their very own, seem loathe to give her up—and so they are struggling manfully trying to keep her on the sports pages, when everybody else knows she belongs right near the theater ads.

And those who are more used to seeing scoring plays than hearing plays scored must try, therefore, to explain how perfectly she captures the fire and brilliance of Enesco's Rumanian Rhapsody or how she feelingly interprets the haunting loveliness of Chopin's "Les Sylphides."

Miss Henie, prettier than ever, hasn't provided any sports copy yet—nor is she likely to. As she said at a recent cocktail party in her honor, concerning her competitive ways: "That is all over and I am not sorry. I liked it while I was in it, but now—oh, the films and the shows have so much more now."

The "more," everybody assumed, mean money. She couldn't have any more appeal or fancy skating steps than before. But she was definite that the door on her competitive days was not only closed, but rusted and forgotten.

Of the 100,000 (estimated) who'll see the six performances this week, no one has more pointedly smiled at the attempts of the sports clan to cover the production than the lad who strolled past the press box last night and quipped:

"Who's winning, boys?"

H. Dettweiler Loses by Shot At Augusta

By the Associated Press

Augusta, Ga., Jan. 18.—Mrs. Helen Hicks Harb, Long Island, N. Y., professional, captured the fourth Women's Titleholder's Golf Championship here today with a 72-hole score of 336.

A 20-foot putt on the home green enabled her to beat out Helen Dettweiler of Washington, D. C., by one stroke.

Miss Dettweiler, leader by two strokes at the end of 54 holes, saw her game go to pieces on the long fifteenth, where she 3-putted. She finished with rounds of 39-45 for a final day medal of 84, three blows under Mrs. Harbs' 81.

Third place went to Miss Jean Bauer, Providence, R. I., who had a total of 349 for the 72 holes.

Elizabeth Dunn of Indianapolis, Ind., beat out Mrs. L. G. Pray, Washington, D. C., for fourth place with a score of 370. Mrs. Pray turned in a 373 total.

Sixth in the field of a half dozen starters was Mrs. Dorothy J. Manice of Augusta, who wound up with 402.

Chronister and Kehoe Face Stars; Hilltop Sends Relay Team

Maryland and Georgetown will send representatives to the Oxceola Games in the Seventh Regiment Armory in New York tomorrow night, the Terps two distance stars and the Hoyas a mile relay team.

Mason Chronister will run in a special 1-mile event with the tireless Kansan, Glenn Cunningham, and the usually fast Leid, John Kehoe is entered in the special 880, against John Woodruff and other stars. Kehoe was only a step behind Cunningham in the half-mile event in the recent K. of C. games, while the other Maryland indoor track ace, Chronister, was sixth in an unruly field of 35 in the 1,000-yard event.

Elmer "Hap" Hardell, coach of the Hoya trackmen, will enter a 1-mile relay in a handicap event. Mort Alnwyck, George Tucknott, Vince Braun and Ken Layden will comprise the quartet.

Falmouth High Girls Whitewash King George

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 18.—The Falmouth High School girls' basketball team scored somewhat of a phenomenon in the sport yesterday when they whitewashed the King George High sextet, 36 to 0.

The Falmouth High boys defeated the King George youths, 58 to 22.

Cubs Purchase Bass From Chattanooga

Chicago, Jan. 18 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs announced today the conditional purchase of Dick Bass, a right-handed pitcher, from Chattanooga of the Southern Association.

Bass, 27 years old, won 19 games and lost 10 last season, compiling an earned run average of 3.21. He will be taken to the Cubs' spring training camp.

D. C. Commissioners Rout Rockville Five

The D. C. Commissioners were lured out to Rockville, Md., and gave the Rockville A. A. Club a shellacking by the count of 56 to 45.

The only other club to defeat the Rockville team were last year's Baltimore City champions. The D. C. Commissioners are undefeated to date. The D. C. team's high scorers were Williamson and Merchant who tallied 18 and 12 points, respectively.

Napper Tandy Takes Hialeah Race After Disqualification

Al Robertson Successful in Foul Claim

Be Blue's Number Removed Following Victory in Feature; Jockey Exonerated

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 18.—After finishing first by a nose, Be Blue, in the silks of T. H. Heard, jr., and ridden by Charlie Stevenson, was disqualified out of the purse in the Sarasota Purse, 6-furlong feature here today. Phillip Schwartz' Napper Tandy, a recent winner, was warded first money, while Mrs. L. Palladino's Remarkable was placed second. Count Morse and Beau James, heavy favorites from Warren Wright's Calumet Farm, were moved up to third and fourth positions, respectively.

Napper Tandy returned $6.90 for $2 and reported in 1:11 1-5.

Be Blue appeared to come over and cause interference to Napper Tandy in the final drive, while the latter in turn was forced to impede Remarkable. The stewards deliberated more than 10 minutes after Alfred Robertson, rider of Napper Tandy, claimed foul. They exonerated Jockey Stevenson from blame for his mount's actions.

Count Morse Blocked

Remarkable could not hold a wide early lead and left the issue to Be Blue and Napper Tandy in the closing stages. Beau James dropped back after a flash of early foot. Count Morse was racing well up but Mike Caffarella gambled by looking for an opening on the rail and that opening never came, with the result his mount was pinned in and unable to run freely.

Eddie Arcaro gave his many followers a royal opportunity to collect at long odds in the 3-furlong dash for maiden juveniles that opened the program. The popular veteran was astride Blue Twink, which got up in a driving finish to beat the heavily backed Double Call by a half length. Arcaro's mount paid $37.40 for $2 and ran the distance in 0:34 1-5.

Blue Twink, fourth in his debut a few days ago, broke well from the outside position. He was temporarily outrun by Double Call and swerved in during the last furlong, but not enough to impede the favorite. Indeed was third, three lengths back. Fair Chance, representing Calumet Farm, which won four straight races the previous day, was a forward running fourth.

Whitheraway Wins

Stealing through on the inside when he rivals raced wide at the top of the stretch, the 6-year-old mare Whitheraway made it two straight triumphs with a driving score in the second race of 7 furlongs. Out run in the early stages, Whitheraway came along to register by a half length at odds of $9.90 for $2. Rose Baby, a 70-to-1 chance, was a forward running second, another half length before Florence M. The favored Cerisse III was right up with the bunched leaders early, but was carried wide on the turn and came again when it was too late.

Mrs. E. S. Moore, of Sheridan, Wyo., who races in the nom de course of the Circle M Ranch, was represented by her second winner of the afternoon in the fourth race, a 6-furlong test for 3-year-old maidens. Noodles, the $6.90 for $2 choice, led Scylla, a first-time starter, to the wire by a length.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLUE TWINK, $37.40, $12.20, $7.00; DOUBLE CALL, $4.70, $3.70; INDEED, $4.40.

BLUE TWINK, away forwardly, went in close pursuit of the leader from the start and, responding courageously to vigorous pressure, outlasted DOUBLE CALL in the final drive. DOUBLE CALL, quickest to get going, drew out in the opening furlong, but faltered right at the end. INDEED gained steadily and shook off FAIR CHANCE through the stretch. The latter acted unruly at the post.

SECOND RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:35. Off 2:35½. Winner, Mrs. L. E. Sober's b. m. (6), by Leonardo II—Werli. Trained by R. Troxler. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:25.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WITHERAWAY, $7.90, $5.30, $4.30; ROSE BABY, $65.10, $34.20; FLORENCE M., $14.20.

WITHERAWAY gradually bettered her position while saving ground in the last 3 furlongs and outlasted ROSE BABY in the stretch drive. ROSE BABY slipped through on the inside entering the stretch and assumed command, but faltered. FLORENCE M., slow to get going, gained steadily after the first half mile and outlasted CHECHACHIN. The latter closed a big gap. POST LUCK displayed the most speed, but began to bear out midway around the turn and carried CERISSE III and LADY ORCHID out. CERISSE III would have probably won but for interference.

Daily Double, BLUE TWINK and WITHERAWAY, Paid $266.70

THIRD RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start good from Puett gate. Won cleverly; place driving. Went to post 3:06. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NAUGHTY, $16.50, $7.20, $4.80; LADY VAL, $18.20, $8.90; SUN GIRL, $3.70.

NAUGHTY, going in her best form, followed the pace well up under steadying restraint, then closing gamely through the stretch, wore LADY VAL down to win going away. LADY VAL forced a steady pace and raced PATSEY BEGONE into defeat, drew clear at the furlong pole, but was no match for the winner. SUN GIRL, hard ridden all the way, was easily best of the others. PATSEY BEGONE retired after entering the stretch.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:41. Off 4:42. Winner, P. Schwartz's dk. ch. g. (5), by Koodoo—Maschera. Trained by W. G. Wilson. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:11⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NAPPER TANDY, $6.90, $4.70, $2.20; REMARKABLE, $6.90, $2.40; COUNT MORSE (entry), $2.20.

BE BLUE, on the outside and going in close attendance of the pace throughout, closed gamely through the stretch, cut bore over sharply a sixteenth mile out and crowded NAPPER TANDY against REMARKABLE, causing the latter to take up suddenly. Claim of foul was lodged and allowed. NAPPER TANDY, sandwiched between the leaders in the early running, made a game effort when the real test came, but was bothered by BE BLUE in his final drive. REMARKABLE displayed high speed in the early stages, but faltered through the stretch and was forced to ease up at the end. COUNT MORSE, on the inside for the entire trip, was blocked badly through the stretch.

SEVENTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles (on the turf). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:19½. Off 5:20. Winner, I. Bieber's gr. m. (6), by Strip the Willow—Linotte. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 2:00⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LA PERLA, $51.40, $19.40, $11.30; GREEN MELON, $4.50, $3.60; UVALDE, $6.40.

LA PERLA, stoutly restrained while racing on the outside until leaving the backstretch, went into contention with a rush when called upon and easily disposed of GREEN MELON in the last furlong. GREEN MELON began fast and displayed the most speed, but was no match for the winner when challenged. UVALDE gained steadily while saving ground, but could not reach the leaders. LOW CUTS had no excuses.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:47½. Off 5:47½. Winner, Lemar Stock Farm's ch. g. (5), by Miastep—Strong. Trained by M. Shapoff. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:50⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MIGHTILY, $11.20, $5.30, $4.90. DISSEMBLER, $5.00, $4.20; OLD NASSAU, $5.60.

MIGHTILY drew out into a long lead after entering the backstretch and held away thereafter, but had nothing to spare at the end. DISSEMBLER gained steadily under extreme pressure, but could not overhaul the winner. OLD NASSAU, slow to get going, saved ground the entire trip and easily disposed of OLD MAID. The latter had no excuses. FALSE POINT was eased up when beaten.

Selections at Hialeah

Dear Al:

I'm the same guy. Last Wednesday I had four straight winners. Yesterday I had eight straight. Of course, I mean losers. My horses ran here, there and everywhere but in the winner's slot. There are days and days and yesterday was one of the worst. The boys around Miami are telling us that when the Calumet Farm Stable won four consecutive races, it was the first time in turf history that any barn has accomplished this feat. Then again, Ben Jones was the first trainer to saddle four winners in one day this year. T. P. Morgan, Texas horseman, is shipping a dozen horses from California to Florida. The string includes Camp Verdo, highly regarded 3-year-old which may go in the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness. Camp Verdo, through some slip, was not named for the $20,000 Flamingo at this track. Mrs. John Hay Whitney has been watching the morning workouts. It isn't often that Hirsch Jacobs, leading trainer for years in the number of winners, saddles a horse that pays a $51.40 mutuel. That's what happened yesterday when La Perla, an Argentine mare, bounced home ahead of her field on the turf course. The mare was sent postward in fit condition by the Brooklyn trainer and she showed a decided liking for the velvety footing. It was just a couple of days ago that I wrote about Blue Twink being a highly regarded juvenile. Yesterday, he showed his class at a $37.40 mutuel and I was caught looking out the window. Eddie Arcaro has his mind set on winning the gold watch that goes to the leading jockey at this meeting. He is far ahead of the pack at this writing. Only ten weeks until Bowie opens. How time flies.

BILL.

First race—Stork comes from a good barn and has the speed necessary to handle a field of this kind. Jockey Don Meade will do the booting and may win despite his recent poor form. Yankee Party should go well. The clockers like this one. Old Friend may fill out the money bracket.

Second race—Gallant Bob breaks off the rail for this 7-furlong affair. Jockey Ronnie Nash will do the saddle job and I'm going to string along. Down Under is improving and may benefit from Caffarella's riding. Whisper for the minor money.

Third race—Wise Ally gets a light assignment in this sprint. I have reason to believe this one will do a lot of running. If you don't like them long, pass this one up. Ambustade and Baltee are as fit as recrent good efforts and are dangerous.

Fourth race—Bright View, a consistent 3-year-old, appears to have found the right spot in this company. The weight is right and the distance should suit. All we need is the right ride from Caffarella. Rapid Way and Liberty Queen for the place and show.

Fifth race—Bob's Boys, with 105 pounds up, seems headed for a set of brackets in this field. Needs only to run his real race. Counterpoise and High Fidelity will be ready for the best and will battle it out if the top one makes too many mistakes.

Sixth race—Lady Infinite, with an assignment of 103 pounds, may be ready for one of her front-running performances in this test. It's going to take my chances. Court Scandal is dropping down. Pari Call for the show end.

Seventh race—Success Story probably has too many speed guns for this crew. Appears capable of handling the weight. High Arch and Ken's Pop probably will find their way into the pay circle.

Eighth race—Toney's Girl may be the right one in the rather open affair that winds up the program. She meets her own sex in this distance affair and is ready for brackets. Pekaki and Narise for the other cash positions.

Best bet—Success Story.

Skeeters Rout Washington Eagles, 5-1

River Vale Sextet Wins 3d Straight

Eagles Score First, But Hosts Tie Score and Win in Third Period Spree

By the Associated Press

River Vale, N. J., Jan. 18.—Turning back a highly favored opponent for the third consecutive time, the River Vale Skeeters tonight downed the Washington Eagles, 5-1, in an Eastern Amateur Hockey League tilt.

The Skeeters spotted the invaders a first-period tally, then knotted the count in the second. The third period was a scoring spree for the home forces who utilized speedy breakaway plays to catch the opposition flatfooted.

Washington's contingent started fast and left the ice at the end of the first period sporting a one-goal lead. That counter was the first and only one they were able to put past Flemming. From early in second period, when the Skeeters knottd count, the game became a problem as to just how many the Jerseyans would be able to get through the Washington defense.

A tight-checking game was in order until the count was even at 1 to 1 in the second period. The Skeeters then started to gamble and they couldn't do anything wrong. Once in arrears, Washington threw caution to the winds, and goals which resulted after the Skeeters took three to one lead resulted from the fact that Goalie Lee, of Washington crew, had no protection on them. On each counter the rest of his teammates were caught flat-footed by speedy breakaway plays.

Rangers Win, 1-0, on Last Period Shot

Montreal Canadiens Beaten; Goal Follows Clash in Front of Net

By the Associated Press

Montreal, Jan. 18.—A goal by Mac Colville less than 3 minutes from the end of the third period, gave the New York Rangers a 1-0 victory tonight over the Montreal Canadiens and sent the Manhattan Blue Shirts into a first-place tie in the National Hockey League standing with the idle Boston Bruins.

The goal came from a scramble in front of the Montreal net just after the Rangers had been badly outplayed through nearly a 5-minute stretch by the Canadiens, who have managed to pick up only two victories in their last 17 starts.

The game was a scrappy affair throughout with Bill Summerhill and Bryan Hextall drawing major penalties in the third period for a brief fist-swinging encounter along the boards.

Redwings Tie, 2-2, With Maple Leafs

Toronto, Jan. 18 (AP).—The Detroit Red Wings moved out of the National Hockey League cellar tonight when they gained a 2-2 overtime tie with the Toronto Maple Leafs. The tie placed the Wings one point up on the last place New York Americans.

A crowd of 9,470 fans saw the Leafs stage a third-period rally after spotting the wings two goals in the second. The tying goal was a freak one and came when the Wings were shorthanded.

The lads who man President Roosevelt's yacht, the U. S. S. Potomac, are in a hot tussle for possession of the ball under the Celtics' goal in a last-minute attempt to tie the score. Attempt was in vain, and they lost to the Celtics, 33-31, last night in the Hine Junior High School gymnasium

Dusek Victor Over Cox in Arena Match

Fans Dislike Outcome Of Bout; Tarzan White Beats Garibaldi

After 40 minutes of a weird fight which saw first one and then the other sail over the ropes into the laps of the customers, Ernie Dusek put Joe Cox down for keeps last night at Turner's arena before 1,200 disapproving wrestling fans.

The spectators, giving vent to their displeasure by hurling various objects at Referee Benny Bortnick, insisted Joe was the victim of a short count and demanded that he permit the business to continue.

Ernie kicked Joe to the mat and fell on top of him for the kill, but the fans weren't convinced—they insisted Benny counted up to two instead of the usual three.

In the semifinal, Alan Eustace and Lew Plummer drew, but it was a happy night for the veteran, Gus Sonnenberg. All-American football player at Dartmouth 20 years ago. Gus pinned Tom Casey in 11½ minutes. Tarzan White, New York Giants pro football star, pinned Ralph Garibaldi in 13 minutes, and Abie Coleman and Tommy O'Toole drew.

Look, Mr. R.—Potomac Crew Is a-Courtin'

Flashy Uniformed Team Represents Ship in Basketball

If President Roosevelt decides to take a cruise in his yacht, the U. S. S. Potomac in the next few weeks, he's going to throw a hitch into the athletic program of his basketball-minded crew.

Resplendent in green and gold uniforms, the crew of the Potomac is starting out its first year with a basketball team, but unaccustomed as they are to a basketball court they hit a hot pace last night and came within two points of upsetting a District Recreation Department League team known as the Celtics.

The Potomac lads hove to on the court of Hine Junior High School with a small but loud band of followers and quickly convinced one and all that they cannot be considered out of the running for the Recreation League championship.

Trailing, 27-26, going into the final quarter, the sailors kept right on the heels of the Celtics until the final whistle halted the business with them a scant two points behind. The score was 33-31.

Boat Is Headquarters

The team off the Presidential yacht is the only basketball aggregation in Washington whose headquarters is a boat. Furthermore it is a "by popular demand" body.

"The fellows just got together and decided they had to have a team," "Coach" Jim Houchard, electrician's mate (first class) explained.

"Coach" Houchard was drafted as coach because he had several years of basketball playing behind him on the Clearwater (Fla.) High School team and in the Navy, and because he could "put us in a fighting mood," team members said.

Most of the crew members played basketball in high school. They only practice on Wednesday nights, but their style of play last night belied their inexperience as a team. Their passing was accurate, it was their basket shooting that left them in the hole.

Star On Leave

Then their leading star, "Colonel" Lee, was on leave "somewhere in Alabama," Houchard believed it would have been a different tale if Lee had been there.

"You should see that boy shoot—he's good anywhere—forward, center, guard. I wish he hadn't gotten off down there in Alabama," the "coach" brooded.

Joe E. Brown, quartermaster on the Potomac, led the team with 16 points, while his mates, Seamen Ed Martin and G. A. May were runners-up with 5 points each. A. C. Hoover, a machinist's mate (first class), played a great defensive game.

The Celtics, led by the sandlot baseball star, Pepco Barry, held a scant lead throughout after a see-saw battle for the lead in the first few minutes of play. Barry was their high-point man with 10 points. Their loss leaves the Potomac crew with two victories and two defeats in the league.

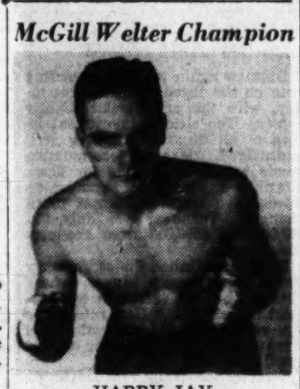
Game at Banneker

The Recreation Collegiates will play the Rho Delta Rho colored basketball team tonight at 8 o'clock in the new Banneker Junior High School, Georgia avenue and Euclid street northwest.

McGill Welter Champion



HARRY JAY, McGill, 145-pounder, who will fight Catholic University's Huck Hughes tomorrow night. He is Canada's collegiate welterweight champion

Two Dominion Champs Fight With McGill

Bad news for Catholic University boxers was received yesterday at the Brookland gymnasium in the form of the team line-up from McGill, in Montreal, Canada, whom they fight tomorrow night.

Gerry Strang, the Cardinals' 165-pounder from Ottawa, has been warning Coach Eddie LaFond all week of the McGill power, and from the looks of things his most optimistic reports were correct.

The Canadians have two of the Dominion's champions, two former champions, and the runner-up for another title.

The champions are Harry Jay, 145-pounder, and Tom Hughes, heavyweight, Pete Stanley, 155-pound captain of the squad, was intercollegiate champion until he lost his title on a split decision last year. Gordon De Blois, from Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, the other 145-pounder, also was intercollegiate champion until last year.

Stanley, called in the advance report from McGill the "toughest man on the squad, a good boxer and the knockout king of Canada," will be pitted against C. U.'s captain, Joe Bunsa, in what appears as the the highlight of the night.

Coach Bert Light has askeed LaFond to permit two 145-pound fights and two light heavy bouts instead of the usual 120 and 127-pound affairs.

Records Fall And Refall at Lucky Strike

National Capital League's Bowlers Go On Wild Scoring Spree

Season's records were so cheap in the National Capital League at Lucky Strike last night that one was only good for 10 minutes in the loop's biggest scoring night of the season.

Shaffer Flower Shop pinmen rolled 1,921, a new set mark, and also posted a 665-game, but Lucky Strike Tap Room broke the latter with a 673 total in the next game. John Chaney's 142-388 was high for the Tap Room.

Pacemaker for the Flower pinmen was Reds King, with a new record of his own, a 447 set, that included a 165 game. Other good sets included a 402 for Ernie Burkhalter and Julie Himmelfarb's 153 game and 430 set.

The leading Nash Post team blanked Jasper in the American Legion League at Lucky Strike, led by George Grimes with 382 and Tom Baisden with a 148 game. Lincoln posted a 589 game to win one from Bunker Hill, despite the latter's 1,724 set.

COLUMBIA

Gene Hargett was again the big gun in the Interior Department League at Columbia, with a 146 game and 411 set that led Secretary-Grazing to top team totals in the afternoon league of 578 and 1,691. The leading National Capital Parks No. 1 won all three from Construction.

ARCADIA

Lloyd Van Horn and his teammates on the Hydros accounted for a majority of the honors in the War Department League at Arcadia. Van Horn had a 168 game and 401 set while the team had a 1,784 pinfall. Team game honors went to Lithos with 627.

Four teams shared the high scores in the Federal Ladies League at Arcadia. Annetta Mathews, FBI, high game with 139, and Peggy McCarty, Veteran's Administration, top set of 345. GPO had high team game of 525 and RFC No. 1, the biggest team set of the night.

RECREATION

With the first five teams all within five games, they marked time in the Department Store League at Recreation Alleys with four of the teams turning in victories. Vic Riston's 393 total helped Kann's win two from Jelleff's, to hold first place.

Woodward & Lothrop and Garfinckel's remained in a second-place tie, the former taking two from Guy-Curran and Garfinckel's over The Credit Bureau. Billy Kingsolver's 387 set led Lansburgh's to an odd game triumph over Raleigh Haberdasher, while the Hecht Co. won two from Goldenberg's, despite Dan Geary's 373.

PETWORTH

Chi Sigma No. 1 featured the Inter-sorority League action at Petworth, with a 515 game and 1,500 set while two teammates, Virginia Kreamer and Lovetta Mansfield, tied for the top game with 124. Mildred Hart, of Chi Sigma No. 3, broke the monotony with a 335 set.

ARCADIA

Peggy Miller and Hazel Hennerich set new season's marks in the Veterans' Administration Ladies League at Arcadia, the former with a 141 game and the latter a 341 set. Departmental Claims paced the teams with 515 and 1,474.

ICE PALACE

The boys bowled over three seasons' record in the Ice Palace Leagues, with F. Fairgurst's 414 set, a new mark, the best score. The high set total was rolled in the Miscellaneous Tax League where H. Lewis finished with a triple-header for a 160 game. Tobacco Scraps had a 1,704 set.

Oliver Pagan's 156 game was a season's record in the Junior Board of Commerce League at Ice Palace, while he also had a 373 set. No. 7 team's 612 game was also a season's mark, while Lang's Loons 578 broke the former mark but fell short of the No. 7 total. The latter had a 1,711 set.

Albert Dobbins led the Departmental Trades pinmen with 147-105, while teams were topped by Campbell's with 1,624, and E. P. Secker, a 561 game.

QUEEN PIN

Shaffer's Flower Shop pinmen roiled top game and set in the Southeast League at Queen Pin alleys, and won the odd game from Bantam Press. Arthur Nelson's 148 game and 409 set topped the winners, while the Pressmen were led by Everett Ballard's 168 and 398. The Flower Shop pinmen had 630 game and 1,802 set team totals.

Ollie Pacini's 389 topped several other creditable sets that included Elmer Wesley's 376; Reds Burdette, 377; Clem Smith, 372, and Gus Placos, 377.

Square Deal Liquor and Quality Shop scored shutout triumphs.

A.F.L. Banquet Honors Meany, New Secretary

Morrison Shares Praise of Green, Burke, Ornburn

Nearly 600 members of the American Federation of Labor paid tribute last night to George Meany, new secretary-treasurer of the federation, at a testimonial banquet last night in the Willard Hotel.

Frank Morrison, who retired from the same post in October after 43 years of service, shared the praises bestowed by William Green, president of the federation; Thomas E. Burke, secretary-treasurer of the United Association of Journeymen Plumbers and Steamfitters of the United States and Canada, and I. M. Ornburn, toastmaster.

Meany urged that the federation stand fast on the principles of Samuel J. Gompers.

"The American Federation of Labor has no other purpose than to improve the conditions of work and life for American wage-earners," he said. To fulfill this purpose the labor movement must remain free from all political alliances and domination, he warned.

President Green declared that the federation "stands immovable in the defense of Americanism" and "will not be led into the by-paths of experimentation by the siren voices of subversive forces. Morrison review the achievements of the labor movement during the 43 years of his service, and Burke praised Meany as "a man of stamina, courage, and integrity."

Seal Reports Only One Bill 'Controversial'

That Is Reorganization, He Tells House Group; Offers Nine Others

Only one "controversial" bill will be submitted to the present Congress by the District Commissioners, Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal informed the House District Committee yesterday. That is the reorganization plan, still in the budget bureau, although already in the hands of committee members.

Seal listed nine "non-controversial" bills in the order of their importance, and the request for authority to prepare for the 1941 Presidential inaugural stood at the top.

The others are:

Extension of time for payment of income tax, amendment of the District incorporation law, amendment of the eight-hour law, a bill to establish a board of indeterminate sentence and parole, amendments to the life insurance act, a bill to regulate disposal of certain refuse, livreymen and garage owners' liens, and a bill to permit the Commissioners to accept a memorial fountain.

Seal also listed 13 bills, which have been introduced, in order of their importance and as "controversial" and "noncontroversial."

Special Group To Study Hatch Act Amendment

Law May Be Broadened To Cover District, Certain State Workers

The Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections yesterday set up a special sub-committee to consider amendments to broaden the Hatch act to cover District employes and certain State workers and to bar solicitation of political contributions from Government workers.

Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, was named chairman of the subcommittee. Other members are Senators Green (Democrat), of Rhode Island; Austin (Republican), of Vermont, and Nye (Republican), of North Dakota. Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the full committee, also will serve.

Senator Hatch said he would call a meeting of the subcommittee within a few days to decide whether hearings should be held.

He said the committee wished to clarify the position of Government workers as to political contributions in view of his proposed amendment to prohibit solicitation. He said he favors leaving Federal employes free to make voluntary donations to any political party they wish.

Conflicting opinions by the Attorney General and a Senate committee, he recalled, have left the average Government employe somewhat confused.

An old ruling of the Attorney General, he said, had held voluntary contributions

Freight Traffic Holds Above Past Two Years

Week's Total 14.7 Per Cent Over 1939, 15 Per Cent Above 1938

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended January 13 totaled 667,713 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of 85,469 cars or 14.7 per cent above the corresponding week in 1939 and an increase of 86,973 cars or 15 per cent above the same week in 1938. Loading of revenue freight for the week of January 13 was an increase of 75,321 cars or 12.7 per cent above the preceding week.

Reorganization Of R. K. O. Corp. Is Completed

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Federal Judge William Bondy today directed the Irving Trust Co, as trustee, to turn over all the reorganized Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, on January 26, all RKO assets in its possession, bringing to a close the reorganization proceedings of the corporation, instituted January 27, 1933.

The court order also directed other trustees of various RKO indentures to turn over to Irving Trust all collateral securing bonds issued under the indentures, during the coming week.

The new company will pay in full, in new securities, all claims allowed in the reorganization proceedings, as well as the final $50,000 installment due on the $6,000,000 issue of 6 per cent gold notes.

New securities of the new company will consist of 8,000,000 common shares of $1 par value and 130,000 shares of 6 per cent preferred stock of $100 par value. The new company will not be permitted to issue more than $3,000,000 in funded debt as long as any of the preferred shares remain outstanding.

Unsecured creditors with allowed claims totaling $12,222,669 will receive 1,222,669 shares of the new common.

Retail Advertising 3.1% Above Year Ago

Chicago, Jan. 18.—Retail newspaper advertising got off to an auspicious start in 1940 by registering a gain of 3.1 per cent over 1939 for the seven-day period ended January 6, Advertising Age reported today.

During that period the volume of advertising placed by retailers in the newspapers of 79 major markets totaled 16,040,334 lines, compared with 15,562,467 lines during the corresponding week of last year.

Subsidy Cotton Exports

The Agriculture Department reported yesterday that sale of cotton and cotton products under it's export subsidy program totaled 6,078,000 bales between last August 1 and January 15.

1939 Shoe Output Breaks All Records

Boston, Jan. 18 (AP).—The Tanners' Council of America today estimated December shoe production at 29,500,000 pairs, which would place the total production for 1939 at the record figure of 419,500,000 pairs, an increase of more than 7 per cent over 1938 production. The previous record annual production was 415,000,000 pairs in 1936. December's estimated production compared with an output of 29,988,000 pairs during December, 1938, the council reported.

Grains Rise With Bitter Cold Weather

Chicago, Jan. 18.—The cold wave stimulated buying of grains today, particularly in the wheat and rye pits where prices were up 1 to 3 cents a bushel respectively. Bitter cold reported over the northwestern rye producing belt and forecast of zero temperatures in the southwest winter wheat zone, in some regions where there is little or no protective snow covering, were factors. The wheat pit also absorbed some mill purchasing while a fairly active international trade received attention.

Wheat fluctuated nervously much of the time. Advancing about a cent in early dealings prices tumbled 2 cents after mid session to ⅝-¾ below previous closing levels. The rally that occurred in the last hour gave wheat a ⅞-1¼ cents higher close than yesterday, with May at $1.02⅛-¼, July 99⅜-½.

Corn finished ⅜-⅝ up, May 58⅝-¾, July 58¾-⅞; oats ⅛ off to ⅛ up; rye 2-2¾ higher; soy beans ¼-½ up and lard 8-10 higher.

Small Holders Take Half Canada's War Loan

Ottawa, Ont., Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—Additional subscriptions to Canada's first loan of the second great war, reported to the Bank of Canada today, indicated that when allotment of the $200,000,000 in 3¾ per cent bonds is finally complete of the total 50 per cent will be in the hands of subscribers for $5,000 and under.

Finance Minister Ralston, when the loan was announced, expressed the hope the bonds could be distributed as widely as possible among Canadian people of small means and not concentrated in the hands of a few.

Gar Wood Boat Sales Gain 40% in Year

New York, Jan. 18.—Indicating increasing demand for luxuries, Gar Wood Industries, Inc., reports that in addition to a 40 per cent gain in sales of its motor boats in 1939 as compared with 1938, the New York Motor Boat Show, just concluded, accounted for sales of $108,883.

This is an increase of 20 per cent as compared with the company's sales at the previous year's show, J. E. Clifford, general sales manager, said today.

Bituminous Production

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended January 13 as approximately 10,240,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week: 1939, 8,030,000 tons; 1938, 7,605,000 tons. Percentage of change: 1939, increase 27.5 per cent; 1938, increase 34.6 per cent.

Building Rate Climbs to Top For Ten Years

Home Construction Chief Factor in Gain; Setback in December

New York, Jan. 18.—The building industry experienced a rather sharp setback in December, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today. Total contracts awarded in the field of private enterprise, as measured in square feet of floor space, were 26.2 per cent smaller than in November. This decrease was much greater than the usual seasonal curtailment. During the preceding 13 years the average decline from November to December amounted to only 9 per cent. Moreover, contracts in December were 29 per cent below the volume in the corresponding month of 1938.

Both residential and nonresidential contracts in December showed curtailment, as compared with the volumes in both November and in December, 1938. Nonresidential contracts, however, showed the most pronounced decline. Nonresidential contracts in December were 54.2 per cent lower than in the same month of 1938. The year to year decrease in residential contracts amounted to only 0.6 per cent.

1928 Still Peak Year

Despite this rather poor showing in December, total contracts for the full year 1939 were 19.8 per cent larger than in 1938. In fact, contracts in 1939 were larger than in any preceding year since 1929. Contracts in 1939, however, were still far below the predepression peak in 1928, with a decrease amounting to 46.8 per cent.

It was due entirely to an increase in residential building that total contracts in 1939 were the largest since 1929. Nonresidential contracts in 1939 were lower than in the preceding three years.

The chief unfavorable factor in the building outlook for 1940 is the recent tendency for building costs to rise. The cost index, on the basis of 1926 as 100, is up from 104.2 last May to 106.7. This upward trend of costs is particularly unfavorable, since costs relative to rents were already too high before the rise started. While rents have recently shown some tendency to strengthen, the rent index in November, the latest month for which a figure is available, was only 85.6, or far below the index of building costs.

Panhandle Pipe Votes $1.50 a Share Year-End Special

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Directors of Panhandle Eastern Pipe Co. today declared a special year-end dividend of $1.50 a share on common stock, payable January 31 to holders of record January 19. In 1939 the company made three payments of 50 cents each.

Pullman, Inc., 25 Cents

Chicago, Jan. 18 (AP).—Directors of Pullman, Inc., today declared a dividend of 25 cents a share, payable March 15 to stock of record February 23. A similar dividend was paid December 15, 1939.

Hancock Oil, 25 Cents Extra

San Francisco, Jan. 18 (AP).—Hancock Oil Co. will pay an extra dividend of 25 cents a share with the regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents March 1, record February 15. The same extra was paid in the two preceding quarters.

Stock Seat $59,000, Decline of $1,000

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—The first membership in the New York Stock Exchange sold this year changed hands today at $59,000, a decrease of $1,000 from the previous transaction.

High price in 1939 was $70,000, the low $51,000.

Copper Price Cut To 12¼ Cents a Pound

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—One large custom smelter today reduced the price of copper in the domestic market to 12¼ cents a pound from 12½ cents, which has ruled since last October 5.

Some small producers were said to have been responsible for the new quotation.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 18.—British government bonds rose sharply in the securities market today following announcement of conversion of the 4½ per cent loan. Industrial leaders came back into the spotlight with substantial gains, although turnover remained below normal. Domestic carriers moved forward briskly early, but failed to maintain all gains. Aside from minor reactions in rubbers, the majority of commodity stocks and kaffirs closed steady to a shade higher.

Paris—The bourse started out on a firm price footing today but bogged down before getting very far. Turnover was far below recent sessions. Gold mining issues and foreign stocks were a trifle irregular, but domestic securities landed on top. Rentes closed 35 to 120 centimes higher.

Amsterdam—Domestic equities inched ahead in the bourse, but American stocks closed steady to a shade lower. In the local group a little hesitancy developed near the close.

Liverpool—Cotton futures lost 4 to 6 points today despite strength at Alexandria. Hedging sales and Bombay liquidation were depressants.

Recovery in Last Hour Steadies List Wheat and Cotton Futures Higher Prime Bonds Firm in Dull Trading

New York, Jan. 18.—Closing levels in listed shares were generally lower today, steels recording the largest declines while high priced manufacturing stocks, rail equipments and utilities were steadiest. There were three distinct phases to trading. The first two hours saw minor backing and filling movements. At noon moderate selling uncovered weak sports and the list sagged rather sharply. This, in turn, was succeeded by recoveries in the last hour that brought most divisions except the steels back to near the starting point. Volume at 605,420 shares was a bit more than on Wednesday, the dullest session in more than a month. The composite price of the 100 key stocks on the big board ended 0.10 point lower.

In commodity sections wheat ended ⅞ to 1¼ cents higher by virtue of a last hour rally and cotton added 3 to 5 points in an unusually narrow session. Sugar, coffee and silk were little changed while rubber futures were firm and copper weak, the latter reflecting lower prices for the domestic delivery.

Nervousness over the industrial outlook, was thought by most market observers an adequate explanation of absence of interest and even mild pessimism in share markets. Reports indicated further curtailment of operating schedules in steel and some other industries, while brokers commented that the Iron Age review, published the previous day, was a trifle bearish.

Production Index

At the same time there were private estimates that the Federal Reserve Board's adjusted production index for the current month possibly will decline to between 120 and 125 from the 128 peak reached in December. Falling off in new business in the steel industry, it was pointed out, is typical of what has happened elsewhere and is responsible for the gloomy trade outlook for the next month. The killing of war inflation influences by Washington policies, one broker-commentator states, as well as the failure of the Allies to buy on a large scale, has left both manufacturing and retail consumers with orders out for goods that may not be sold promptly or even for some time. This, in turn, would indicate a return to hand-to-mouth basis of ordering, which in fact is occurring. Until it disappears the stock market is not expected to derive much stimulus from trade reports.

In the motor section Chrysler was off 1½ at one time but recovered half the loss later. General Motors ended unchanged after coming back nearly a point from its low of the day. Tobacco shares came in for some selective buying, American Snuff preferred showing a late gain of 5½ and American Tobacco B rising more than a point.

Standard Brands the Leader

Standard Brands provided the feature of the session, leading the list with a turnover of 68,100 shares. Its last price of 7¾ represented a gain of ½. Steel common dropped more than 2 points before meeting support, closing at 57⅜, off 1⅝, and Bethlehem gave a parallel performance in its loss of 1¼ being about a like amount above its low for the day. Copper shares rebounded after early declines. Late news of the day included an item from London which stated Britain might bid for new supplies of copper, principally electrolytic, in addition to Rhodesian and Canadian production already contracted for.

Federal Budget

Wall Street appears to be devoting more attention to the Federal budget, the consensus being that estimated spending reductions for 1941 are optimistic unless there is a change in administration. Emphasis is placed on the fact that in no year since 1932 has President Roosevelt failed to underestimate Federal expenditures. In 1938, for example, the estimate was around $7,000,000,000 and actual expenditures around $9,000,000,000. A survey of the Federal budget policy by a leading firm of financial and industrial consultants points out that the 1940 fiscal year will see the peak of spending of all the easy spending New Deal years; that the estimated reduction in 1941 is not quite 6 per cent short of the 1940 record and that the indicated net deficit of $1,700,000,000 in the 1941 budget against $3,900,000,000 in the present fiscal year is much less than the actual deficit is likely to be.

Bonds Dull in High Turnover

Dullness again was the prevailing note on the listed bond market today, with the price trend slightly firmer. The strictly investment issues of all descriptions were well maintained, dealers accumulating bonds wherever possible for block offerings to insurance companies. Speculative bonds were not much changed. Turnover was only $5,460,000, up $500,000 from the previous day.

Long-term United States Treasury bonds were mostly higher, where changed, but the variations were almost meaningless. Best rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds were either unchanged, or up by small fractions.

Some of the cheap railroad bonds were in demand in the speculative department, owing to the fresh tendency of the ICC to present reorganization plans. Missouri Pacific bonds, especially, were active and higher. Holding company groups were idle.

Norwegian bonds continued to sink, but Danish obligations were firm, and demand also appeared for Belgian and Italian issues. Most issues of the belligerent countries were better. In the Latin-American group Uruguayan and Haitian bonds stood out with sizable advances.

Stock Trading Shifts From New York

Exchange Holds State Transfer Tax Partly Responsible for Trend

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 18.—The New York Stock Exchange reported today there was "a definite shift of securities business away from New York" to Boston, Chicago and other cities.

Blaming the New York State transfer taxes on share transactions in part for Wall Street's loss of business, the exchange said it would push efforts in this session of the State Legislature for lowering of the transfer taxes to meet the competition.

The exchange criticized the tax at length in its monthly publication, The Exchange, and presented figures purporting to show relative growth of dealings on other exchanges."

Particularly affected, it explained, have been transactions in so-called "odd lots," that is transactions in less than the standard 100 shares. Odd-lot trade, it said, was influenced by "double taxation" in New York State.

Double Tax on Odd Lots

The Legislature, it was pointed out, voted in 1938 to eliminate the double transfer tax on odd-lot transactions but Gov. Lehman failed to sign the bill.

The exchange said the trend to other cities "portends a permanent decline" for the New York market if the situation is allowed to continue. It noted 75 per cent of the orders executed for the public on the exchange come from investors outside the State.

"In 1937," it continued, "trading on the Boston Stock Exchange in stocks listed also on the New York Stock Exchange amounted to 64.9 per cent of the Boston volume. "By the end of 1938, this figure had increased to 78.5 per cent. "While in 1937, the Chicago Stock Exchange did 14.5 per cent of its total trading volume in New York listed stocks, by June, 1939, this had increased to 48.7 per cent."

It cited similar trends for dealings in Cleveland, Detroit, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and San Francisco.

United Corp. 1939 Net $8,482,675, Or 7 Cents a Share

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—United Corporation, the investing company operated under J. P. Morgan & Co. sponsorship in 1929 to centralize holdings in a number of Eastern utility systems, today reported net income for 1939 of $8,482,675 after expenses and taxes, equal after preferred dividends to 7 cents a common share. This compared with net income of $8,501,922 in 1938, also equal to 7 cents a common share.

United Corporation holds a 26.1 per cent voting interest in United Gas Improvement Co., 13.9 per cent voting interest in Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, 23.4 per cent in Niagara Hudson Power Corporation, and 19.6 per cent in Columbia Gas & Electric Corporation. Shares of these four companies represent more than 90 per cent of the book value of the security investment portfolio.

Detroit Edison

Detroit Edison Co. reported today for the year ended December 31 consolidated net income of $9,640,296, equal to $7.56 a share of capital stock. This compared with $7,833,306 or $6.16 a share in 1938.

Public Service of N. J.

Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, a utility, earned net income in 1939, the company reported, of $25,727,763, or $2.88 a share on the common stock. This compared with $22,733,245, or $2.34 a share the preceding year.

Louisville & Nashville, $1.25

Directors of Louisville & Nashville Railroad Co. declared a dividend of $1.25 a share on the capital stock, payable February 28 to stock of record January 30. On February 28, 1938, a payment of $1 a share was made. Atlantic Coast Line Railroad owns 51 per cent of the outstanding stock in L. & N. and will thus receive $745,875 from the dividends.

Money Markets

Foreign Exchange

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—The pound sterling and Netherlands guilder pushed vigorously forward in relation to the dollar today. A gain of .11 of a cent in the guilder cut sharply into recent persistent losses. Sterling, driven down Wednesday, recouped more than half the decline with an advance of 1⅛ cents. The French franc also improved while the belga and Swiss franc showed minor variations in the foreign money market.

Closing rates follow. Great Britain in dollars, others in cents:

Cotton Prices Edge Higher in Light Trading

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 18.—The cotton futures market seemed to have squirmed into a "no man's land" today where buyers and sellers were equally cautious. Final prices were up 3 to 5 points, helped by firmness at Alexandria and Bombay influences as steady foreign markets from start to finish.

A little foreign selling dribbled into the ring together with sales which represented hedging against loan cotton equities purchased by Southern spot firms. Trade price fixing and spot house demand were the main price props.

Keeping quotations up were such influences as steady foreign markets and persistent demand from domestic mills.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. In re condemnation of land for the widening of Wisconsin avenue, Northwest, from R Street to a point south of Mount Alto Hospital property, in the District of Columbia. District Court No. 2628. Notice and order of publication. Notice is hereby given that the Commissioners of the District of Columbia (pursuant to the provisions of the Act of Congress approved June 20, 1939, Public No. 142, 76th Congress, entitled "An Act to provide for the widening of Wisconsin Avenue in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," whereby they are authorized to institute condemnation proceedings in accordance with the provisions of sub-chapter 1 of Chapter XV of the Code of Laws for the District of Columbia, to acquire the land that may be necessary for the widening of Wisconsin Avenue, as aforesaid), have filed a petition in this Court praying the condemnation of the land necessary as shown on a map or plat filed with the said petition as part thereof, and praying also that this Court empanel a jury in accordance with the law provided for in such cases to assess the damages each owner of land to be taken may sustain by reason of the widening of said avenue as aforesaid and the condemnation of the land necessary for the purpose thereof, and to assess the benefits resulting therefrom, plus all or any part of the costs and expenses of said proceedings, upon any lands which the jury may find will be benefited, as provided for in and by the aforesaid Act of Congress approved May 28, 1926. It is, by the Court, this 10th day of January, 1940, ordered that all persons having any interest in these proceedings be and they are hereby warned and commanded to appear in this Court on or before the 19TH DAY OF FEBRUARY, 1940, at 10 o'clock a. m., and continue in attendance until the Court shall have made its final order ratifying and confirming the award of damages and the assessment of benefits of the jury to be empaneled and sworn herein; and it is further ordered that a copy of this notice and order be published twice a week for two successive weeks in the Washington Evening Star, The Washington Post and the Washington Times-Herald, newspapers published in the said District, commencing at least 20 days before the said 19th day of February, 1940. It is further ordered that a copy of this notice and order be served by the United States Marshal, or his deputies, upon each of the owners of the fee of the land to be condemned herein, as may be found by the said Marshal, or his deputies, within the District of Columbia, and upon the tenants and occupants of the same, before the said 19th day of February, 1940. By the Court. ALFRED A. WHEAT, Chief Justice. A true copy. Test: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By HARRY M. HULL, Assistant Clerk. 12.13.19.20

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

It is not enough simply to bid a grand slam; you have to be able to play it as well. Here is a problem of managing the trump suit to avoid losing to the queen, put by H. M. R. He says:

"Would appreciate your opinion on the following play:

♡ K J 6 5

NORTH / WEST EAST / SOUTH

♡ A 10 9 4 3

"The contract is seven hearts by South. First lead is taken by dummy North. The jack of hearts is led, which dummy intends to overtake with ace in any event, as he cannot afford to finesse and to lead back the ten toward the king. It turns out that the outstanding four hearts are in the West hand, and South is severely criticized for playing as he did.

"It was said that he should have led a small heart to his ace and another small one back to dummy's king. Of course, if he had done so, he would not have lost a heart trick. Would you call this tough luck or just players bad playing?"

Declarer made a plain bad play. To embark on a "safety play" against certain trump holdings (Qxx) at the cost of needlessly losing the hand against another holding (Qxxx) is certainly not sound policy.

The correct play is to cash ace or king to take a look, playing small from the other hand. Which honor to cash is, of course, a matter of inference or of guess.

Listen! with Slocum

OFF THE RECORD—Raymond Scott fans, plus a brand-new army of record collectors, may expect a sensation when Scott's new band makes a first appearance on Columbia discs about the middle of February. There's tempo and a chuckle in every bar of his latest compositions such as "Huckleberry Duck" and "Businessmen's Bounce" . . . Kay Kyser has picked the successor to "Deep Purple." It's "The Starlit Hour," by the same Parish-De Rose team responsible for "Purple." Kay's Columbia recording has Ginny Simms doing one of her best vocals. "Confucius Say" lends a novelty touch to the other side of the disc.

Columbia's "Jazz Masterworks" gets another topnotch performance in the records with Benny Goodman's sextet version of "Seven Come Eleven" and "Shivers." Goodman, (Lionel Hampton (vibraphones) and Charlie Christians (electric guitar) spotlight "Seven Come Eleven," with Pianist Johnny Guarnieri playing a subtle instrumental solo on the reverse.

Seems as though the trend back to old-timers in songs is getting stronger. There was "Oh, Johnny, Oh," and "Come, Josephine." Now Irving Berlin's oldie, "You'd P[rise]d Surprised" (1919) has been put on Columbia wax by Orrin Tucker and Bonnie Baker. Bonnie sings in her inimitable style, with Tucker holding forth vocally on the reverse side with "Little Girl" . . . Standard numbers are always popular when a good band performs them—and "The Love Nest," plus "I'm Coming Virginia," in Will Bradley style prove the case. Columbia plans a heavy campaign with the discs of Tromboner Bradley and the drummin' McKinley. The band does its first commercial program for C. B. S. on "Young Man With a Band" January 26.

Mildred Bailey moves to Columbia discs with "Nobody Knows the Trouble I've seen" and "Hold On." Especially notable is Alex Wilder's superb orchestral backing, with piano, bass, drums, four clarinets, oboe, trumpet and guitar lending an unusual tone background to Miss Bailey's husky blues singing.

By ELLERY QUEEN

The Dragon's Teeth

Beau Rummel, a partner in "Ellery Queen, Inc.", found one of the heirs of multimillionaire Cadmus Cole when he located Kerrie Shawn in a Hollywood boarding house. Because Ellery was ill, Beau had to impersonate him in their handling of "the case" for which Cole had paid $15,000 before he died. After taking Kerrie to dinner, Beau finally told her that he was a private detective looking for her because her uncle had died and she was heiress to half his fortune. It was all a shock to Kerrie who had bitter memories of her uncle because of his hatred of arriage and his treatment of his sister, Kerrie's mother.

Chapter 6

"DO YOU WANT to hear more?" asked Beau.

She smiled, all at once and withdrew her hand. "All right, Dick Tracy—shoot the works."

"Kerrie, your uncle Cadmus died a multimillionaire."

"A—what?" she shrieked.

"Didn't you know how rich he was?"

"Well, but I thought—"

"His estate is estimated at $50,000,000."

"Fifty mil—" Her tongue and lips grew stiff.

It was like watching a kid open a Christmas box. Her breath was coming in quick little gusts.

"Why, that's better than being a star!" cried Kerrie. "Twenty-five hundred a week clear!"

"Take another drink. Waiter! Rye or Scotch?"

"Oh, Scotch, and lots of it! Tell me more. Did I hear you say fifty million? That's not a slip of the tongue? You don't mean fifty thousand? Fifty million?"

"Whoa! Let's go easy. You're not getting any fifty million dollars."

"But I thought you said—Oh, I don't care! Nobody could spend that much money, anyway. How much is it?"

"Let's figure it out." Beau began scribbling on the cloth. "The estate comes to about fifty millions. Your uncle didn't use the cute dodges by which rich men usually cheat the constituted authorities of their death-shares. So inheritance taxes are going to eat up about thirty-five millions."

Kerrie closed her eyes. "Go on. What do I care how I spend money?"

"Fees and expenses will probably come to a half-million. That leaves fourteen million and a half. Invested in safe securities at, say, 4 per cent—that makes an income annually of $580,000."

"What?" said Kerrie, opening her eyes.

"You don't get the principal. I'll explain why later. Now, there are two of you sharing this income—your cousin Margo and you."

"How do you do, Margo," said Kerrie with a wriggle of delight. "Will you buy a gold-lined tub with me?"

"You mean—? But sure, you never even saw her. Anyway, your half-share annually comes to $290,000. Income taxes should take 160,000 of that, so you'll have $130,000 a year."

"How much does that come to per week?" murmured Kerrie. "That's the figure I want. I was always rotten in arithmetic."

"It comes," said Beau, scribbling the last figure, "to twenty-five hundred smackers a week."

"Twenty-five hun— Every week? Week in, week out?"

"Yes."

"Why, that's better than being a star!" cried Kerrie. "Twenty-five hundred a week clear! I suppose I'm dreaming. It's a mean one, all right. Pinch me and wake me up."

"It's true. But—"

"Oh," said Kerrie lightly. Then she sighed. "There's a catch in it."

"Well . . . certain conditions. By the way, I'm empowered to finance you—all you want—until you reach New York. Sort of drawing account against that twenty-five hundred per. That is, if you accept the conditions."

"Let's have them," said Kerrie crisply. "I may as well know the worst."

"First," said Beau, "have you ever been married?"

"No, but I'm eligible. Were you considering snaring an heiress this season? What's the point?"

"Never mind me." Beau reddened. "Is there any chance of your being married in the near future? That is, are you engaged, or have you a boy-friend?"

"I'm free, white, and just 21."

"Then you've merely to accept your uncle's conditions and at least half the estate is yours. Now, for the conditions. The first is this: that you agree to live with the other heiress—we're sure now, from the evidence available, that there are only two of you—in your uncle's Tarrytown mansion on the Hudson. The house will be maintained by the estate for one year. You must live there exclusively for that year, after that you're free to live anywhere you like."

"Wow," said Kerrie. "I was really worried. Why, that's not a condition—it's a blessing! Beautiful house, cars, all the clothes in the world, a maid to do my hair, three squares a day and a couple of cooks to prepare them . . . Mister, that's heaven. Bring on your other condition!"

BEAU FISHED a paper out of his pocket. "Let me read you," he said slowly, a copy of a paragraph from your uncle's will." He read:

"In imposing this second condition upon my heirs, I feel it necessary to warn them against that insidious, degrading and fatal institution in human relations known as marriage. I was married, and I know. At its best, it is a dull, confining prison. At its worst, it is hell. Since my divorce, I have lived, and I shall die, a bachelor. My only friend, Edmund De Carlos, to whom I have in this testament willed $1,000,000 and a home for life if he so wishes, is now and has always been a bachelor. We have discussed the subject many times and agree that most of the ills of the world can be traced to marriage, or rather to its effect upon individuals. It has caused men and women to become greedy, it has inspired horrible crimes, it has, historically, bred wars and international treacheries. I am an old man; my heirs, if they still live will be young. I feel I must impose my advice, of course, but only at the expense of the worldly goods I am in a position to bestow upon them . . ."

Beau put the paper back in his pocket. "There's more of the same. But I think you get the idea."

Kerrie looked astonished. "He was mad!"

"No," said Beau dryly, "he was perfectly sane—in the legal sense, and we have reason to believe in the medical, too. He was just abnormally bitter and intense on this one subject. I suppose it all dates from the dirty deal his wife gave him 'way back in 1902 or so. Anyway, he felt so strongly about marriage that upon it depends your inheritance."

"I don't quite—"

"The will stipulates that the income payable to any heir shall cease automatically, and that heir from then on forfeits all claim to her share of the estate, if and when she marries."

"You mean," cried Kerrie, "if I accept this legacy I shan't ever be able to get married?"

"Not if you want to keep pocketing $2,500 a week."

"And if I turn the whole thing down now, or accept and then marry?"

"Your cousin Margo, if she's eligible, would become the sole heiress. Your share would go to her. Or if you both became ineligible, the will provides that the income from the estate be donated by the trustees to such organized charities as they may see fit to select, and they continue to be trustees for the estate. Or if the heirs remain eligible, then at the death of one the income goes to the survivor. At the death of the survivor, the income goes to the charities. You see, your uncle Cadmus considered death and marriage practically the same thing."

Kerrie was silent for a long time. The orchestra was playing, and people were dancing under colored lights; her face lay in trombone shadows.

Beau waited for her decision with a curious eagerness. She couldn't turn it down. She wouldn't be human if she did. She was human, all right—he could testify to that, because he had held her in his arms when they danced.

Cole's conditions might have been easy for another girl. But Kerrie wasn't the sort who could take, and give, love except the right way. With her—it would be one or the other—the money or her happiness.

He knew what she was thinking. She wasn't in love with any one now. Perhaps she'd never been in love. With her figure, with her face, there must have been men, though—plenty of men, and all the wrong kind. She would be a little cynical about men. So what was she throwing away? Something that didn't exist, probably, for something that you could turn instantly into the delicious good things of life, which she had never had.

KERRIE laughed—a funny, quaking little laugh. "All right, Uncle Cadmus, you win. Maybe I'll become a saint. Wouldn't that be a scream, Ellery? Saint Kerrie.

Beau was silent.

Kerrie said fiercely: "I can't turn all that money down. I can't! No one could. Could you?"

"It wouldn't be a problem with me," said Beau gruffly.

She looked him in the eye. "It won't be with me, either. But I think we're talking about different things."

"Congratulations," said Beau.

It had to be. And of course she was right. He knew what it meant to go hungry, to be pushed around, to peer up at life from under the eight-ball.

Kerrie smiled and got out of her chair suddenly and came round the table. She leaned over him, so close he smelled her skin. It smelled like clover—Beau had smelled a clover once.

"Mind if I kiss you for being such a swell Santa?"

She kissed his lips. Lightly, in the shadows. He kept his lips deliberately tight, cold, hard.

But his voice was thick. "You shouldn't have done that, Kerrie. Damn it, you shouldn't!"

"Oh, then you're the keeper of my conscience, too?" She kissed him again, laughing. "Don't worry, grandpa. I shan't fall in love with you!"

Beau got up from the chair so suddenly it fell over with a clatter and Kerrie stared at him with startled eyes.

"Come on, Miss Millionbucks," he growled. "Let's go tell the good news to your girl friend. I bet she'll die."

Projects to Aid U. S. Workers Threatened

Personnel Council's Programs May End After July 1

By Alfred Friendly.

Failure of the House to supply funds for the Council of Personnel Administration threatens a series of projects vitally affecting Federal employes' welfare.

The council, established by executive order last February, requested $50,000 for office expenses and a small research staff. The sum was cut almost in half by the House Appropriations Committee and was totally obliterated Wednesday by a point of order raised on the floor.

The chief programs on which the council was engaged will fall by the way after July 1 unless some other means of financing is provided. These concern simplification of the recruitment procedure for Federal employes, in-service training plans, a uniform Government-wide appeals procedure, and a method for stabilizing Government employment.

Transfer of Workers

The last program, it was learned, was designed to save the Government and the Federal worker a needless loss sustained when one agency discharges employes and another establishment hires other workers.

The plans called for development of a systematic method of advance planning of personnel changes, and trading of information among placement officers so that a competent Federal worker about to loose his job in an agency laying off personnel could be immediately rehired in an expanding establishment.

The theory of the system is that in normal circumstances, Government employment as a whole is relatively more stable than employment in any single agency; that discharges in one office are offset by employment in another. In the absence of any coordinating agency or program, however, a trained employe dismissed from one department may go jobless while across the street another department may hire an untrained, untried, "raw" recruit.

This practice is wasteful, according to council members, because the Government has already made a substantial investment in the discharged employe, in investigating and training him. By taking on a new employe, a similar expenditure is made, and a risk is incurred that the new employe may not turn out to be satisfactory.

Appeals Problem Studied

The recruitment project under way in the council is to devise more modern methods of enlisting competent applicants for Government jobs than the present method that relies on bulletin board and routine press announcements.

The appeals problem has been studied by council members to aid the Civil Service Commission in establishing minimum standards for intradepartmental procedure in settling employe complaints.

The House action in wiping out the council's funds was protested yesterday by employe union heads, the National League of Women Voters, and the National Civil Service Reform League.

H. Eliot Kaplan, executive secretary of the last organization, said that curtailment of the council's work "would prove a calamity to the effective administration of the Federal service."

He said the council had already demonstrated its "imperative usefulness" to operating agencies and had been "a tower of strength" to the commission. Elimination of its appropriation, he added, was in no way an economy move, because the purpose of the agency was to discourage duplication of effort and needless expenditures for personnel services.

Council Upheld

Miss Marguerite M. Wells, president of the women voters league, wrote Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the Independent Offices Appropriations Sub-committee, that the council had met a long-felt need in providing a common meeting ground for Federal personnel officers.

"The amount of money involved is small," Miss Wells wrote, "but the work that is being done is of primary importance."

Other merit system advocates were outspoken yesterday in charges that the elimination of the council was not made for economy purposes, but was part of a general campaign to "sabotage civil service."

They said that the same forces opposing the Ramspeck bill to extend civil service to exempt employes, and to cut down the Civil Service Commission appropriation, were behind the gesture that denied funds to the council.
